THE aggregate wheat acreage this year is the largest since 1884, and that of spring wheat alone is greater than it was in that year. There is some reason still to hope that the yield, too, this year will be as heavy as that of 1884-513,000,000 bushels-which was the largest wheat crop ever grown in this country.

MINISTER ROBERT LINCOLN moves in very good democratic society over in the island home of John Bull. At a dinner given him by Andrew Carnegie the other night among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone, Sir William Vernon Harcourt, the Rt Hon. John Morley, Sir Edwin Arnold, Herbert Gladstone, William Black, the novelist, Mr. Richardson, and such Americans as John C. New, Colonel John Hay, General Bryce, and Mrs. John A. Logan. In such society we don't believe the United States Minister will forget that he is an American citizen.

THE Duke of Argyle is a free trader. He writes to the London Times: "There is hardly one single great industry in our county which has not been hatched and any communications, for I believe it to fledged in the nurseries of protection. No great interest or class has ever seen the virtues of free trade until they have become quite obviously conducive to its own advantage." Just so. The English manufacturers who succeeded in building up their influstries under protection preah free trade to all the rest of the world that they may prevent the "hatching" and fledging" of other industries to come into competition with them.

JAMES G. BLAINE has written a letter to the secretary of the Chicago board of trade in answer to inquiries concerning pork that is shipped abroad. The letter is to the effect that the state department proposes to vindicate American hog product from the aspersions of the French and German governments. Our representative at Paris, Mr. Reid, has already received similar instructions. No one can be surprised at this announcement, or doubt that the matter will be vigorously followed up. James G. Blaine is that kind of a man, and not a Thomas A. Bayard to cringe and fawn before any power on earth. It is a burning shame that this vindication was not brought about long ago. American meats of all kinds are especially wholesome. Our export pork is corn-fed, and our beef is grass-raised and corn-fattened. The pretext that either is tainted with disease is a fraud upon its face.

EXPORTS BY RAILROAD.

There is no law compelling shippers of American goods by rail to foreign coun tries to furnish information about these goods to customs officers or any other officials. Merchandise sent by water is accurately accounted for at the Custom House, but that going by land carriage passes out of the country without leaving any record which is available to the pub lic. As a consequence the exact extent of our exports to Mexico or Canada by railway is not known, and a large part if not most of the goods which we send to those countries goes by that mode of conveyance. Some shippers by rail give at the Custom House, quantities of the goods which they export, others give values, but many of them furnish no information whatever. In the absence of law making a record of this sort obligatory, even the information which is given is probably incomplete. For this reason the Bureau of Statistics, in its figures of exports to Mexico and Canada, always extremely beautiful tattooing. The comtakes care to state that these figures are below the actual exports. is to make another attempt to secure the matter. That body will be asked to pass a law compelling those who send rass several times when fencing with his goods across the national boundary line | comrades. - Notes and Queries.

by rail to file at the custom House manifests giving qualities, quantities and values. It is to be hoped that the Republicans, who are now in control of both branches of Congress, will show more public spirit and intelligence in dealing with this question than were displayed by the party which controlled the House in recent years. This is a plain, simple matter of business, into which partisanship does not enter. It is to the interest of the country to know the exact extent of the trade with the outside world-its exports as well as its imports—but obviously, so far as regards trade with our near neighbors to the north and the southwest, this knowledge cannot be gained under present conditions. The existing statutes under which the Government collects statistics of exports were framed in 1798, and extended and modified in 1820. At even the latter of these dates the national frontiers were unpeopled and railroads were not dreamed of. Congress in this matter is merely asked to provide for contingencies which could not have been foreseen when existing laws were made, and to adjust the customs service to the new conditions which have arisen. The needed legislation should be promptly enacted. -Globe Democrat.

A Traveling Man Creates Creat Excitement in the Empire House-1

INDEPENDENCE, IOWA, Oct. 14, 1888. Rheumatic Syrup Co., Jackson, Mich: GENTS:- Your Mr. Brooks came here tonight and registered as agent for Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, and as he did so it awakened in me an interest never before realized in a guest at my house. You will not wonder at it when I tell you the story. For years I have been greatly afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism, the pain and soreness of the joints at times being almost unbearable; could move about only with the aid of crutches. In addition to this my stomacl became badly diseased, and neuralgia set in, which threatened to end my day. A traveling man stopping with me gave quite a history of your Syrup, and the peculiarities of its combination, which induced me to try it. I have taken six bottles and no act in my life affords me greater satisfaction than in writing you every other. She was clever, and what I am a well map.

It will be a pleasure for me to answer be the best remedy ever formulated.

A. S. Bowley, Proprietor, Empire House, Independence, Iowa. Sold by F. G. FRICKE & Co.

Dressing Women.

I have always held that women dress women better than the male creature zan, writes a celebrated woman of fashion from Paris. Men have no sense of the chiffon. They know how to outline a fine figure. But there are so few really statuesque beauties in the world! Female dressmakers understand best how to amuse the eye, to draw it from defects of face and figure, and they are full of tricks and stratagems which the masculine brain is unable to evolve. A dress made by a clever dressmaker well up in her business is designed with a view to manslaughter. The other evening I was astonished at the fine art of which Mme. G ..., the milliner, gave proof, explaining to me how best to hide the "invasion of embonpoint," and to seem slim when slimness is a thing of the past. The dress should be loose and the draperies be kept as much as possible in vertical folds, the straight line being here and there departed from merely to avoid monotony and stiffness. And the sleeves ought to be of exaggerated length, not wide, and pushed up so as to wrinkle like the mousquetaire glove. If they are made to wrinkle all the way up to the shoulder, so much the better.

A Weird Legend of the Potomac.

There are three big rocks in the Potomac just above Georgetown called the Three Sisters, after three mythical maidens who perished there in some romantic way centuries ago. Strangely enough, they mark the saddest part of that beautiful stretch of river, for it is at that point that boats usually upset and swimmers usually drown. But strangest of all is the fact that on the night before such a death the people living on the shore hear the Three Sisters softly moaning-a sound distinct from every other. and never heard saye on such occasions. Wednesday night, for example, just as the Georgetown college clock struck 12, the moaning sounds came floating ashore from the Three Sisters, and on Thursday noon a shell capsized as it passed them, and its owner was drowned.-Philadelphia Record.

Human Leather.

An officer of the marine infantry, who commanded the penitentiary of St. Mary a la Comte, in New French Guiana, lately died of diseases contracted at that insalubrious station. The inventory of the objects he left behind him comprised a very curious cuirass, with straps and other accessories. On examination it proved to be of human skin. A convict had died whose breast was covered with mandant of the station knew this, and had the man flayed before he was buried. For a moment it was thought that this Next winter the Trassury Department human relic would have been put up for auction with the officer's other effects, neeeded legislation from Congress in this but, fortunately, it occurred to somebody that it was rather too disgusting. It was known that the officer had worn the cui-

Old Egyptian Encaustic Process. In the older Egyptian mummies the face of the outer casing is usually modeled in relief, in a purely conventional way, but in this latest form of burial under the Roman empire a portrait of the deceased was painted on a very thin piece of wood and then fixed over the dead face. It is very remarkable to find such fine coloring and skillful drawing in work of this late date, which must have been turned out of an ordinary undertaker's workshop. The portraits, both male and female, are most vivid and lifelike; the ladies are mostly dressed in a purple garment, and the men in white, with a red orphrey. The modeling of the flesh is very skillful, and in some cases the coloring reminds one of the Venetian school from its rich depth of tone. A special point of interest about these paintings is their technical execution in the hot wax, or encaustic process, as it was called. The pigments were mixed with melted wax, and then fixed in their place by holding a charcoal brazier near the surface of the painting, as is described by Vitruvius. The somewhat lumpy impasto of the surface is due to the hardening of the melted wax when the brush touched the cold surface of the panel, and, owing to the non-absorbent nature of the wood, the subsequent application of heat was not able to drive the wax below the surface, as was the case with encaustic painting upon stucco. One of these portraits is noticeable from its ornamental framing with a flowing pattern, formed by pressing wooden stamps upon soft stucco, which was afterward gilt, a process exactly like that which was so often used to decorate mediæval pictures on panel, especially retables, or ancone, as the Venetians called them.— Saturday Review.

The Charm of a Sweet Voice. I met the other day one of the most fashionable women in the city, and the thing about her that charmed me most was her perfectly trained voice. It was low and melodious, never raised above a certain pitch, but her enunciation was perfectly clear. A sweet, low voice is one of the most seductive charms in a woman, and yet how seldom one is found. The majority of women do not seem to realize this, and one's ears are constantly being tortured by the sound of loud, shrill voices. At a restaurant where I frequently dine comes very often a pretty young woman with her mother, and when I see her coming I want to go. She has a high pitched, cracked, old woman's voice, that takes away my appetite and sets my nerves on edge. At a recent afternoon reception a handsome lady entered and began to talk. As soon as she began every one else stopped and listened, for her voice was so loud and harsh that it drowned she said was worth listening to, but it was torture to the sensitive ear. The spell of a beautiful face is often broken by a harsh, uncultivated voice, while a sweet voice almost makes a plain face pretty. I would turn round in a crowd to discover the owner of an attractive voice, but I would not turn round in the street to catch a second glimpse of a pretty face. Pretty faces are common enough, one sees them everywhere, but a thoroughly refined, cultivated and sweetly modulated voice is indeed rare. -New York Star.

To Make Wood Fireproof. If this could be cheaply and effectually done there are few improvements which would be more largely conducive to the welfare of mankind. The following paragraph, therefore, which has been lately in circulation, may be fairly pronounced "important if true, and interesting at any rate." It is stated that a New Englander has recently discovered a cheap method of dissolving zinc by combining it with hydrogen and producing a solution called zinc water. This liquid, if applied to certain woods, notably white wood, makes it absolutely fireproof, and at a low cost. Mr. Edward Atkinson, the Boston economist, in speaking of it at Cornell university, says he regards this discovery as one of the most important of the age, and one that will surely revolutionize fire insurance, as well as immensely decrease the losses by fire. The invention is kept secret for the present. Only one foreigner, Sir Lyon Playfair, the English scientist, knows of it. He corroborates all that is claimed for the invention, and says that the inventor is a bungling chemist, but that he has a faculty of blundering into the choicest secrets of nature's laboratory. As soon as patents are perfected and capital interested, zinc water will become an article of com-merce.—Safety Valve,

A Telegraph Man Outwitted. A few days ago several men from the electric light station dug a hole for an electric light pole opposite one of the finest residences in Malden, Mass. The owner of the residence in the meantime secured a man and told him to go up into the woods and dig the first tree he could find, and hurry back and place it where the hole for the electric light pole was. Before the men commenced to raise the electric light pole the owner of the residence invited them to come into his cellar and take a drink, which they all did. There the owner detained them long enough to allow the man sent for the tree to come back and plant it. The others did not dare to remove tree, so they put the pole into their wagon and drove off.—Scientific American.

Embraced and Then Stabbed Her. I have sat by the hour in El Pravo, the fashionable thoroughfare of Madrid, Spain, and watched the dark eyed beauties of that celebrated city in all their loveliness, but they were always associated in my mind with treachery and deceit. While thus sitting one beautiful its usual gayety, I saw two splendidly Clothier, the place to get Business or dressed ladies meet and embrace with adress suits cheap. great enthusiasm, when, with a chill of horror, I saw one of them stealthily draw a stiletto and plunge it deep into the back of the other.
