TUESDAY, MAY 5, 1891

Nehawka.

NEHAWKA, May 2, 1891.
Concluding a very satisfactory business interview with the Union people, your correspondent drew up lines at the Factoryville Mills, one and a half miles west of Union.
Factoryville is one of the old Nebraska landmarks and flourished as an important inland village till the construction of the Lincoln branch of the Missouri Pacific R. R. to Nebraska City a little more than three years ago, when Union absorbed all the business of the place except the milling interests. Here is located one of the best—indeed not the BEST—mill properties Cass county affords, and is owned and operated by the genial miller, T. M. Warne, whose name on a flour sack is the best guarantee of the superior quality of its contents that the most fastidious housewife could desire, and the only difficulty Mr. Warne has to keep up with his multiplicity of orders. The HERALD gladdens the hearts of the Warne household every week, where it will continue to carry the news in the same satisfactory manner it has during the past.

Continuing our journey up the classic waters of the "Minneboohoo" we drew up at nightfall at Nehawka, a beautiful little village located on the Lincoln branch of the M. P. in the west end of Liberty precinct. Nature has withheld not her lavish hand in beautifying the spot upon which stands this, one of the best commercial points in Cass county, and a thrifty, energetic set of business men are at the helm here, which accounts for the solidity and volume of business carried on and for the substantial and permanent character of the buildings of the town. This city will go down in history as the point attacked by Colonels Kroehler, Livingston, Shinn and Dwyer in ante-court house days, with their valiant band, for the recovery of the famous cannon which their stronghold had some years ago confiscated from the Papilioes on the Papio. It is said that the bravery of these four colonels was undaunted and unexcelled on any field of battle till they were surprised and captured and their captors compelled them to realize the contrast in color of the blackest of tar and the whitest of feathers, when the braves on beaded knee begged the mercy of the Nebawka-ites, and with an eye for an eye to ever refrain from further maraud-ings were permitted to meander their way home to the ancient city of Plattsmouth, clad in the same raiment hitherto worn by them instead of the more attractive one with which they were about to be invested by their captors. These have all been lived up to to the greatest of us and now the colonels with one accord vote the cannon the greatest evil of modern times and declare arbitration their policy instead of a resort to arms.
The following is a resume of the business of this thriving little town: F. P. Sheldon is the postmaster and keeps a large general store. Mr.
Sheldon carries a heavy stock, far in excess of most stores kept in a town of the size of Nehawka, but by his superior business methods his trade justifies his heavy investment in stock.

The same that is said of Mr. Sheldon is equally applicable to the other merchant, Mr. Baier, who keeps anything from a cambric needle up to a set of harness. Mr.
Baier is doing an excellent business and is a valuable business man for the town. The Nehawka Bank is a valuable adjunct to the business of the town and is presided over in an efficient manner by the genial cashier, D. C. West. Mr. West is a favorite in the town, and justly so, for he is a sociable, wide-awake young business man. The lumber yard is kept by A. Sturm and is doing a good business.

Messrs. McBride and Palmer keep a first class hardware store, and like most of the other business houses of the village carry stock far in excess of stores usually found in towns of this size. C. D. Mothershead is one of the brightest young druggists in Cass county, and besides presiding over a fresh, clean looking drug store and doing an excellent trade in his line he finds a spare moment to entertain the stranger.
Henry Cropp is the implement dealer, and the busy farmer can always find him at his post of duty, anxious to sell him anything from an onion hoe to a harvester. Mr.
Cropp has the confidence of the people, which he has won by fair business methods.

J. E. Banning is the veteran grain dealer and prides himself that he is located in the heart of the best agricultural county in the state. Mr. B is doing a good business, as is also the firm of McBride & Palmer, managers of the other elevators. The town supports two good hotels, the Nehawka House, is kept by W.
I. Smoots, and the other, the Gruber House, by Jacob Gruber. These are both splendid hostleries much better than are commonly found in towns of the size of Nehawka.

to a much larger city, but a good run of custom justifies the excellence of the shop.

Miss Kate Newell is the milliner, and judging from the extensive stock she carries, is keeping up with the procession of the other business houses of the town. She is kept so busy at this season of the year that she finds it necessary to employ an assistant to wait on her many lady customers.

Miss Katie Warden is the dressmaker who finds constant employment in her line of work. Messrs.
Smoots & Sonner are proprietors of the confectionery store which is just being opened up.

Peter Opp wields the cleaver and a better steak or loin than he cuts is not to be found in any shambles.

E. E. Baldwin is the genial agent and manipulates the telegraph ticker.

Dr. Pollard responds to the call of the afflicted and is a thorough practitioner, besides having been a knight of the quill. The doctor is a pleasant gentleman and a valuable citizen to Nehawka.

James Jamison is the knight of the saw and hammer who is justly proud that his lot is cast among so prosperous a people as those of the village of Nehawka and vicinity.

The town is supplied with two livery stables and they too seem to be doing a satisfactory business.

The United Brethren is the only Christian organization here at present, and they have an elegant little church building in which to worship and hold Sunday school. The Methodist people contemplate the erection of a church this season.

The most important industry of the town is the opening of extensive stone quarries by Omaha parties. They are building side tracks into the quarries and are putting in crushers, all of which give employment to from fifty to sixty men. This accounts in part for the extensive business of the town. We predict a bright future for Nehawka.

WANDERER.

"A FREE trade organ has just discovered that there is a tariff of 20 per cent on imported snakes, parrots and monkeys. This is another evidence of the awful iniquity of the McKinley bill. By all means give us free snakes and take the tariff off of monkeys."

A DEMOCRATIC organ defines reciprocity as a scheme by which "the fears and necessities of South American countries are to be played upon for our commercial advantage." This is very sad, of course; but there is something still more melancholy, for democratic newspapers in the fact that it is going to insure the election of another republican president next year.—Ex.
