THE PARTY OF BLUFF.

If they are truly represented, 80,000 Alliance members in Virginia are mainly Democrats, and intend to vote the Democratic Presidential ticket unless Mr. Cleveland is nominated. In that event, their leaders assert, they vote with a third party. It would be wise for all people interested not to place too much confidence in these predictions on either side. The Republican party is not likely to lose as much in some States, nor the Democratic party in others, as persons who are anxious to dictate the policy of either would like to have everybody believe. Bluff is a Western game. A revolver with not a cartridge in it answers just as well if the other party weakens. There may be instances in which one unarmed man has frightened and bullied two were each more powerful and well armed, but they are not numerous. The chances are not in favor of a movement to force two parties into submission by threatening both at once. The passionate pyrotechnics of the so-called People's party are apt to end as the experiment of Henry George did in the contest for Mayor; the party which naturally has the best chance in each State is likely to receive enough votes, from former opponents if not from former friends, to insure the defeat of an antagonist who threatens both. Southern Alliance men are making it clear that they are Democrats. They want concession from their party, if they can get any, but they are Democrats nevertheless, the disclosure of that fact help powerfully to recall to their senses the Western Republicans who have hoped for a new party, but not for a mere tail to the Democratic kite. Where there is one Alliance leader who avows his readiness to throw the Presidential election into the House, knowing that the Democrats will there elect, there will probably be found a thousand Alliance voters who will take no part in such a proceeding. When the Republicans who do not choose to be used as tools by the Democracy have drawn out the force remaining may resemble some of the regiments which were recruited early in the war, all officers and no privates.

Knowledge that Western Republicans cannot be depended upon in such a case will react upon the disposition of Southern Democrats. They might be induced to help a new party, if the Republican force were entirely and forever out of the way. But it is stronger than ever at the South, because protection is winning favor with men who care for industrial and business prosperity, and because such men see that nothing but Republican firmness stands against the threatened deluge of monetary fanaticism. The progressive policy of the administration, promising a vast expansion of trade with the West Indies, Mexico, Central and South America, gains hosts of friends. Democrats have always at their hands the plea that negro domination would follow any weakening of Democracy, and the multitude will be swayed by this plea, so that Western or Southern dreamers who look for a great rupture in that quarter are liable to fare no better than the rainbow-chasers of 1888. Who may be nominated by the Democrats makes less difference to the Democratic voters than their contending leaders pretend. These leaders are just now using the Alliance as a lever to hoist their favorites into nomination and themselves into office exactly as some Republicans are trying with the same lever to pry the Republican party out of its well-settled principles. But when the time comes, the great body of Democratic voters take any ticket that their convention prescribes, just as certainly as they go to the family doctor when sick. The thoughtful, intelligent business men, who know what dangers are ahead, are those who may change their votes, but are the men to vote for unlimited loans of paper on lands and products.

The Republican party ought to have sense and courage enough to offer to such men of every party their only sure refuge against a financial deluge. They have seen it tried. They know with what determination it has defended public credit and honest money. They can see day by day how great its policy promises to benefit the country in its industries and its foreign trade. The more dangerous the Alliance appears, the greater the probability that sensible business men of every shade of past political belief will turn to the Republican ticket as their best hope of safety.—N. Y. Tribune.

WOOLENS AND WORSTEDS.

A practical illustration of the operations of the McKinley tariff law is to be found in the decreasing importations of woollen manufactures and worsted goods since it went into effect. For the first three months of 1890, under the old law, the importations of woollen manufactures were 1,471,400 yards, as against 1,160,100 yards for the first three months of 1891, under the new law. For the same period in 1890 the importation of worsted goods was 16,554,300 yards, as against 7,236,300 yards this year. The country's consumption of these goods is certainly not less, but greater, this year than last. Increasing population alone would have the effect of making larger consumption. These figures show as no argument can show the benefit of the McKinley bill to the wage earners of the United States.

Take your prescriptions to Brown & Barrett's, they dispense pure medicines.

A suggestion: If you are troubled with rheumatism or a lame back allow us to suggest that you try the following simple remedy: Take a piece of flannel the size of the two hands, saturate it with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bind it on over the seat of pain. It will produce a pleasant warmth and relieve you of all pain. Many severe cases have been cured in this way. The Pain Balm can be obtained from F. G. Fricke & Co.
