The Lincoln Giants took their departure last evening for Lincoln, after having covered themselves with glory. The Giants conducted themselves in a gentlemanly manner while here and fully demonstrated that they deserve high rank as an amateur ball team. It is evident that they have attained this rank by constant practice. It appears that each player is peculiarly adapted for his particular station, but it only appears so because of the drill in preparation.

An organization known as the "World Fair Saving Excursion Co." is quite popular in several states, having as an object the furnishing to investors first class transportation agreeing to look after baggage, providing for entertainment of the patron while in attendance at the fair, providing each with an accident ticket while gone and in short, to take absolute charge of the passenger from the time he leaves until his return home. In Iowa this is especially popular, the officers being chosen from her most prominent citizens, thus insuring fair dealing and courteous treatment. The plan is that each patron shall make a payment of $2 per month, until a sufficient amount shall have been paid, thus being conducted on the installment plan. It might be well for Nebraskans to inaugurate a move of like nature.

Police Court.
In police court to-day, Mr. P. A. Johnson was arraigned on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He was fined $5, in default of the payment of which he was committed to jail.

On motion of Murphy cemetery committee was authorized to employ sexton mow cemetery, as per his offer at $35.

Too Precise.
Our friend, the editor of the Eagle, an infallible and highly classical (?) writer, has the following to say in his last week's paper: "THE PLATTSMOUTH HERALD informs us that the B. & M. ARE repairing their ships. Will THE HERALD tell the people when they will be ready to sail again?"

It is evident that the above uncalled for attack was trotted out for the purpose of calling attention to a typographical error which appeared in this paper. Now we admit that our proof-reader neglected to make the correction, which is so grating on the mind of our friend, but we are at a loss to tell why we should find in the above quotation from our infallible friend, a plural verb used with a singular subject. It seems to us that such a murdering of the English language should not be indulged in by one so precise in his criticism.

Then, too, in winding up his criticism, our friend asks a question and punctuates with a period. Now any seven-year-old school boy can inform our friend that it is an elementary principle in the English language that an interrogation mark should be employed in cases of this kind. Then, too, the construction given a sentence depends, largely, upon the punctuating, and readers desire to interpret as the author intended.

In glancing over the page we arrive at the conclusion that it would be difficult for one, to crowd more errors in the same space, resulting not by a mistake in type-setting, but from pure ignorance.

We wish further to admit that occasionally a typographical error occurs in our paper as they do in all papers; but we shall not make a practice of parading the errors of others before the public, and in this case we only pay our friend back in his own coin.

We are publishing a daily paper in an enterprising city and as a rule can not devote so much space to comment upon these little matters inaugurated by these one-horse country papers.

JUST LIKE THE OTHERS.

The B. & M's Play Some More Ragged Ball.

They Lose the Third Game to the Giants by Making Eleven Errors.

Some people call it hard luck, but it isn't. It's plain, everyday, vile playing. The home team waded all over one another in their efforts to roll up errors yesterday. Their performance was of a kind suited to the classical shades of Nehawka or Tahnage, but certainly not for Plattsmouth.

They arrayed themselves in a new suit of harness with a red shirt and some blue pants and captured the village band and marched out to the grounds with great eclat and put themselves under the water-spout and got drowned with premeditated calmness.

They prevailed upon Al Perrine to try his hand as a pitcher but after the first inning Al says: "No, boys, your candidate I cannot be," and retired into deep right field to spend the remainder of the day in prayer and silent devotion.

Then young Mr. Stephenson took charge of the campaign and he, too, soon came to the conclusion that the out field was a fit place to muse over the memories of the past—"far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife."

The great and only Yapp went in to pitch and put up a good game but his support was of the kind that killed Clyde the day before.

Even Bert Dunn went to pieces yesterday and played bad ball with the rest of them.

Lacey made a stab at catching, but that's all it amounted to. He couldn't have caught a blind cow with a fish net. He played like he was afraid of the delirium tremens.

But say, you ought to have noticed our old friend "Whitey" Miller play third base! He played third and a large section of left field. He could catch the ball either standing up or laying down. One of his catches was a marvel. It was a short fly just about midway between third base and left field. He ran back, threw up his hand, caught the ball and tumbled headlong into the dirt—but the man went out.

Creighton caught the first game since he injured his arm, and he caught it well.

Sam Patterson was also in it at the bat.

As for the Giants, they played their usual strong game. Miller, in the box, was almost invincible. Maupin caught him in fine shape. Hubanks pounded the pitcher at will. As for the rest, they played all around Plattsmouth.
