MOVABLE WORK-TABLE An Article of Purniture Which is as Sim-

I TOPPE U

The accompanying out illustrates an article of furniture which is not often seen. It is furnished by Clifton S. Wady, of Middlesek county, Mass., and is so prin ical and handy that every women we be better off for its pos-session. Struction requires simpine board or other wood-hard wood is preferable for the top-and a set of casters and a few screws complete the list. The top is larger than the bottom piece, and overhangs about one and a half inches all around. If a carpenter is employed to put it together, let him make the shelf to run in grooves, sliding in from either side. A simple finish is secured by counter-sinking the screw-heads, evening up with putty, and staining the whole, or rubbing up with pure shellse, cut in alcohol, on the natural wood. If the latter, three coats will permit of a high polish on the hardwood top. The shelf surfaces are best left without stain, as they are often to come in contact with silk, lace or dress goods of delicate fabric.

Certain shelves to be devoted to 'small things" might be divided lengthwise; but for many purposes one whole shelf left clear is most convenient.

The work busket, the darning and mending outfit, and commonly the articles themselves, may all find places in this wonderful "stowaway," and can be easily covered from dust and sight if desired. Underneath the overhanging length of top stretch tightly a picture frame wire, after putting on a sufficient number of small brass rings on which to sew the drapery. The portiere can be anything from brown linen to China silk. The dimensions of the table should, of course, conform to the demands or limitations of the place where it is to be used. This one is about three feet long, two feet wide and two feet high on the casters. With a full load it can be readily moved from place to place. Small hooks on the ends provide permanent location for numerous articles in everyday use, and answer the questions propounded a hundred times in the twenty-four hours: 'Where's my button hook?" "Where are my selssors?" "Where is my tape measure?" The top is of itself a convenient cutting-board. - American Agri-

LUNCHEON CLOTH.

cite General Admiration.

One of the prettiest and daintiest pieces of fancy-work seen this summer was a luncheon cloth with half a dozen napkins to match. The material was very heavy fine white linen, and in each corner of the small center cloth was embroidered a bunch of small field flowers in their natural colors in wash silks. The flowers were very tiny, not larger than the sketch here given. These bunches were tied with pale blue ribbon which ran in pretty meandering fashion along the hemstitched border from corner to corner. The napkins had only one corner embroidered with the flowers, the rest of the square being simply finished with the blue ribbon. "Will not this look charming with my Dresden china?" said the fair needlewoman looking at her work admiringly .- N. Y. Tribune.

bemmed at the top, the hem being sewed to form a casing for draw rib-bons, which may match the figure on the ground of the allk, as preferred. Plain or figured slik, erepon, pongee, etc., may be used for the bag.—Butterick's Delineator.

A Delicious Sherbet.

Mix together one pint of milk, one pint of sugar, one pint of water and one pint of canned apricots rubbed through a sleve. Freeze, Peaches may be used instead of apricots. Many people do not like ice creams, and this is a good substitute, as it is more unurishing than regular water iers, and easy to make.
