all his steps by there. He the cabman which right of as a dozen other cabmen was quite a triumph on rendered ourselves into with satisfaction, as was not handsome, being a most disreputable looking as he had shown the possible and we had need of a following him through a road, we arrived at his discouraged, for the as a dilapidated, rans than thing, and the two larger than goats, were and miserable looking seemed cruelly to animals to cou an arrangement that involved dragging about three full grown in addition to the little driver. before decided, peremptorily, that was no contract made, we should get into that vehicle, but would no another to suit ourselves. We deed this inside our own heads, but in doing we counted without the hosts cabmen.

A DISCOVERER'S RIGHTS. Having selected a good cab, with a decent pair of horses, and proposed a bargain to the driver, without regard to the shrill and continuous clamor of our little ragamuffin, we found that his eloquence had more cogency than our offer. for the driver of the vehicle chosen would not accept us as his passengers because we "belonged" to the other man. He had captured us; had acquired a right of property in us which all other cabmen were bound to respect, and every cabman to whom we successively adressed ourselves refused us in the same way. We were boycotted. The cabman of the Piræus were one and indivisible in their determination that we should make our entry into Greece behind the worst pair of horses ever seen, or otherwise go afoot. If the Greeks had stood together half as well in their dealings with the Turks and other foes as they did on this occasion against three peaceful wayfarers, the famous "dream that Greece might still be free" might have become a dazzling and magnificent reality.

But we had read long before this in a book by one Plato, called the "Republic," that Socrates and several other fellows had one day walked down from Athens to the Piræus, and in fact that they had there talked among themselves the whole contents of that interesting book, and we are reasonably sure that as to the walks and talks of Socrates we are equal to the walks, at least, and so we would walk, either with Socrates or with the melodious Irishman who, when he did not walk, "rode in chaises." We walked, therefore, with the Irishman's alternative objection on our tongues. And as we walked along the awfully dirty street, with the shops on one side and the wretched little shops and vile smelling restaurants on the other—wretched shops and vile smelling restaurants having over their doors grandiloquent signs in Greek, which, though bad, was good enough to keep in one's mind the ancient glories—as we did all this, actually passing on the way a monument with the head of Themistocles on a Doric column, one little ragamuffin of a driver followed us like a pestilence horse fly, tearing ahead at full speed and halting in front of us and declaiming constantly that we were his and that we were cheating him by refusing to ride. With what immense energy he would dash ahead, halt in front of us, get down and open the door of his cab and appeal to us to enter. But he appealed to hearts hardened with silent rage. We were within a few miles of the spot where Desmosthenes said savage things at the roaring sea with pebbles stones in his mouth, and if this fellow could have said all these things, even if he had practiced with paving stones in his mouth, he could not have convinced us.

THE FRIENDLY HORSE CAR. Suddenly there came an unlooked for solution to this mean little drama. There appeared upon the scene, here at the very end of the long walls, that awfully modern contrivance, a horse car. Now, as a horse car is presumably the property of a corporation, and as the great distinction of a corporation is that it has no soul, one perceived that here we might be freed from the immediate consequences of the boycott, and we entered the horse car, which, by the way, was certainly the cleanest vehicle in all that part of Greece.

As soon as we entered the horse car we were out of all our troubles, but we were forced to reflect that we were not following the great example of Socrates and to consider that if Socrates had been able to return to Athens in a horse car this fact would have cut short all that noble conversation under the trees, and the world might have been without its first great idea of an Utopian state.

But it is evident that modern institutions are having fair play in Greece. The boycott and the horse car are doing what they may for civilization there, and other fine things will follow. Meanwhile one sees enough to convince him as he wanders on the Acropolis that the very rubbish of the Parthenon is worth all the rest of Greece as it is, and it becomes a comfort to know that history has pretty well proved that the so called modern Greeks are not Greeks at all but only descendants of a horde of wretched Slavs who swarmed in and settled upon the land like locusts when war and pestilence together had annihilated the grander race.—Athens Cor New York World.

Joint seventh row—84 d c, join; eighth row—108 d c, join; ninth row—108 d c, join; tenth row—111 d c, join. This finishes the crown. Eleventh row—work 88 d c, leaving 28 for the back of neck. Break off the yarn.

Twelfth row—join on the yarn at commencement of last row, and work 1 d c in each d c (88). Work 10 more rows the same as the 13. This completes the lining of the hood.

For the outside of the hood, work 1 d c in top of each d c in each row, commencing with the first row of the lining, having the d c's turn back toward the crown. Across the bottom, or neck of hood, work 1 d c and 3 chain stitches between. Into these loops work *4 d c in one, one single crochet in the next. Repeat from star, across the neck, and work the same round face of hood. As a finish, work 1 s c in top of each st in every row on the outside of hood, and in each stitch of the border with white knitting silk. Put a ribbon rosette on top of hood in the front, and run a narrow ribbon through the neck; tie in a small bow at the back. Sew on ribbon strings.—Ladies' Home Journal.

HOUSEKEEPERS' CORNER.

ASTHMA may be greatly relieved by soaking blotting or tissue paper in strong saltwater; dry it, then burn it at night in the sleeping room.

A SPLENDID liniment for chilblains: One ounce of camphor gum, four fluid ounces of olive oil. Dissolve together by a gentle heat and apply to the afflicted parts.

CORNSTARCH makes a good paste for scrap-books. Dissolve a little in cold water and cook it thoroughly. Do not get it too thick. When cold it should be thin enough to apply with a brush.

FOR a cut take powdered resin, pound it very fine and spread or sift it over the cut; wrap a piece of soft linen around it and wet in cold water quite often. This will prevent inflammation and soreness.

INSECT powder or borax mixed with sugar if applied when fresh and daily, so that they do not lose their pungency, will drive cockroaches away. Remember the infestation. If applied when fresh and daily.

IF a poison has been accidentally swallowed, instantly drink a pint of warm water in which has been stirred a teaspoonful of salt and one or two of mustard. A half glass of sweet oil will render many poisons harmless.

THERE are many simple and effective disinfectants, among which are coffee pounded and burned on an iron plate, sugar burned on hot coals, vinegar boiled with myrrh and sprinkled on the floor and furniture of a sick room.

TRY a bandage of hot salt outside the face for neuralgia; fill the mouth with hot salt in case of toothache; put a little hot salt in a piece of muslin and then put it in the ear for a second or two when earache is troublesome.

FOR severe hemorrhage from the nose try holding the arms of the patient up over the head for five minutes at a time. A small piece of ice wrapped in muslin and laid directly over the top of the nose will usually give relief.

There is Danger in Veils.

Women, unfortunately, cannot be induced to believe that there is danger in wearing veils. Physicians and chemists, however, have often warned them against the objectionable practice. Miss Mary Humphreys, the daughter of a wealthy manufacturer in London, is another sufferer from this feminine fashion. A few weeks ago she received three veils as presents from her future husband. After wearing them several times she complained of a peculiar itching in her eyes. An oculist discovered upon examination that her eyelids were poisoned. He attempted in vain to cure them. The malady developed so rapidly that the young woman's left eye had to be removed. The veils were then sent to a chemist, who found that they had been colored with poisonous drugs. The explanation of Miss Humphreys' misfortune was simple. A suit for damages will be brought against the manufacturer of the veils, but it cannot restore the young woman's sight.

To Remove Mildew: Moisten the spots, and rub well with soap, then scrape some chalk very fine, and rub that in also; lay in the sun, wetting the goods from time to time. Take equal parts of lemon juice, salt, starch and soft soap; rub on thickly and lay on the grass in the hot sun. Renew the application two or three times a day.

We have sold Ely's Cream Balm about three years, and have recommended its use in more than a hundred special cases of catarrh. The unanimous answer to our inquiries is, "It's the best remedy that I have ever used." Our experience is that where parties continued its use, it never fails to cure.—J. H. Montgomery & Co., Druggists, Decorah, Iowa.

When I began using Ely's Cream Balm my catarrh was so bad I had headache the whole time and discharged a large amount of filthy matter. That has almost entirely disappeared and have not had headache since.—J. Sommers, Stephney, Conn.

Window glass at Brown & Barrett's.

Some of the most startling, interesting discoveries of the life and customs of buried Egypt are now being made through extensive excavations. These discoveries are exciting a great interest. Many discoveries are, however, being made in our country that are remarkable, among which we may mention that of Haller's Pain Paralyzer which effects entire relief, and in many cases a complete cure of that terrible disease rheumatism, and which also relieves pain of all kinds. For sale by all druggists.

Go to Brown & Barrett's and get a window glass and stop up that hole in your house.

A Cure for Paralysis.

Frank Cornelius, of Purcell, Ind. Ter. says: "I induced Mr. Pinson, whose wife had paralysis in the face to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. To their great surprise before the bottle had all been used she was a great deal better. Her face had been drawn to one side; but the Pain Balm relieved all pain and soreness, and the mouth assumed its natural shape." It is also a certain cure for rheumatism lame back, sprains swellings and lameness. 50 cent bottles for sale by F. G. Fricke & Co., Druggists.

That Hacking Cough can so quickly be cured by Shiloh's cure. We guarantee it. For Sale by F. G. Fricke and O. H. Snyder.

Ely's Cream Balm is especially adapted as a remedy for catarrh which is aggravated by alkaline dust and dry winds.—W. A. Hoyer, Druggist, Denver. My catarrh was very bad. For thirty years I have been troubled with it—have tried a number of remedies without relief. A druggist advised Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say I feel like a new man. I make this voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (lawyer), Pawtucket, R. I.
