

FLOWER CHANDELIER.

With the Aid of This Picture One Can Easily Be Made.

The vines may droop and touch your hair or they may rise as you cross from door to door, but there's nothing in life that's pleasanter than to live close to green things, even if they be only things swinging in a bamboo chandelier. You can see how to make

THE FLOWER CHANDELIER.

It from the picture given. The three large sections of bamboo are dovetailed together at the point of the tripod and hung by three cords or wires. Inside the bamboo rods are tin cylinders that hold water, and the outside of the bamboo can have, if you choose, little Japanese designs of birds, butterflies or flowers cut into it with a knife that will chip the thin and brittle outer bark and leave the outlines light against a darker background. The rods ought to be five inches or thereabouts in diameter and fourteen or fifteen inches long. Vines may trail with much less trouble from baskets in which they are really growing, but with many of us the novel is always the better way.—Chicago News.

FAMILY SCRAP BASKET.

Wash dusty furniture with warm, not hot, white soapuds, in which drop an ounce of linseed oil in a pail of water; wipe dry before polishing.

Take a piece of stale bread in a white muslin cloth and drop it into the pot with your boiling cabbage; it will absorb all the offensive smell.

The skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy for a boil. Carefully peel it, wet and apply to the boil; it draws out the matter and relieves soreness.

For simple hoarseness take a fresh egg, beat it and thicken with pulverized sugar. Eat freely of it and the hoarseness will soon be greatly relieved.

When your face and ears burn so terribly bathe them in very hot water, as hot as you can bear it. This will be more apt to cool them than any cold application.

TURPENTINE is the best known substance for removing stains of paint, and if it is possible to apply the liquid at once not a vestige of the spots will remain.

THERE is nothing that proves so effective in relieving congestion of the lungs, sore throat, or rheumatism as hot water when applied thoroughly and promptly.

HOMERADISH cut in thin strips lengthwise and a dozen or more of these strips placed on the top of each keg of pickles will keep them from becoming stale or moldy.

ANYONE can add strength and weight to his body by rubbing well with pure olive oil after a warm bath. Oil baths are particularly beneficial to delicate children.

THOSE who suffer from a sensitive skin, subject to frequent irritation and roughness, should never wash in hard water. Boiled water will often prove of benefit to delicate complexions.

EQUAL parts of cream tartar and salt petre make an excellent remedy for rheumatism. Take one-half teaspoonful of the mixture and divide it into three doses. Take one of these doses three times a day.

HOLDER FOR DUSTER.

A Pretty Trifle Which is as Ornamental as It is Useful.

Two strips of moire ribbon are joined to form the bag for the handle of the duster, and to the top of the bag two strips of ribbon are tacked and brought together at the point of suspension under a large rosette bow of similar ribbon. The points for tacking the ribbon to the bag should be carefully determined, so that the holder will hang at a pretty angle; the bows of ribbon are fastened over the tackings. The ribbon may be of any preferred color and variety and should be of the width required to form a bag of suitable size for the handle of the duster.—Butterick's Delineator.

Cornstarch Cake.

Half a teaspoonful of butter, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of sugar, creamed together, half a cupful of cornstarch, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, half a cupful of sweet milk, three eggs, beaten separately, the whites saved and put in last two teaspoonfuls of baking powder mixed through the flour, two teaspoonfuls of lemon extract if not stiff enough add a little more flour. Vary size when fresh, but after two days it dries up.

TWITTERING SWALLOWS.

In and out and under the eaves. Blown about like the falling leaves. Twittering swallows spend the season. Now the days are shorter and chill. There come from many a musical bill. Notes of instinct that sound like reason.

Well have they dined on bug and midge. Now they are perched upon the ridge. Of the old barn, that's warped and hoary. There they sit, bright birds of a feather. Holding twitter-talk all together. Each telling an after dinner story.

They will follow the summer band. To them on land is a foreign land. One unacquainted, with a joyous flitter. 'Twas cosmopolitan are we, 'Twas cosmopolitan are we, Home is where we happen to be. And swallows understand our twitter.

Then, in soft notes I scarce could catch. One spoke of a nest under the thatch. Of a cottage where waves the willow. Another shook his velvet head. And with his noisy neighbors plead. To fly with him o'er field and billow.

They talker about all sorts of things. Sharpens their bills and preens their wings. Then away, away, the tourists started. Salting over river and main. Will they ever return again. To the old home from which they've parted.

O happy tourists of the air. Unburdened, free of debt and care. Would that I had swift wings to follow in the flight over land and sea. With heart as light and wing as free. As the happy traveling swallow! —George W. Swayne in Harper's Bazar.

Shakespeare's Knowledge of Insomnia. Touching upon the question of insomnia, Dr. Charcot, the great specialist, made a remark which was not only interesting in itself, but which proved his thorough acquaintance with the works of England's greatest dramatist. "It is curious to note," he remarked, "how feelingly Shakespeare dwells on the question of sleep, not only in the famous passage of 'Macbeth' beginning, 'Macbeth hath murdered sleep,' but in many other places in his plays. I made at one time a collection of fifty quotations from his works on that subject. So I am inclined to think that he suffered from insomnia."

It remarked that perhaps the death of the great poet when so few years past middle age might have been caused by the vast mental strain consequent on the production of his marvelous works, and that case insomnia would certainly have formed one of the symptoms of his condition. "Great genius," remarked the doctor, "is almost invariably the offshoot of ill health, either mental or physical." "That was hardly the case," I responded, "with Victor Hugo, who lived to be past eighty and was always as sturdy as an oak." "But you forget, madam, that he came of a family of maniacs," was the response. "His brother died insane and his daughter is the inmate of an asylum for lunatics." —Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Nutmeg Tree.

The nutmeg is the kernel of the fruit of several species of trees growing wild in Asia, Africa and America. The cultivated nutmeg tree is from fifty to seventy-five feet high and produces fruit for sixty years. The fruit is of the size and appearance of a roundish pear, yellow in color. The fleshy part of the fruit is rather hard and resembles candied citron.

Within is the nut, enveloped in the curious yellowish red aril known to us as mace. Up to 1796 the Dutch, being in possession of the islands producing the only valuable variety of the nutmeg, jealously tried to prevent the carrying of the tree or a living seed of it into any territory independent of Dutch rule.—Foods and Beverages.

The Pains-taking French Soldier.

It is said that a French soldier, stationed at a picture gallery, had strict orders to allow no one to pass without first depositing his walking stick. A gentleman came with his hands in his pockets. The soldier, taking him by the arm, said: "Citizen, where is your stick?" "I have no stick." "Then you will have to go back and get one before I can allow you to pass."

As this man read his orders the intention was that, as a preliminary to inspecting the gallery, everybody was to deposit a stick—not that those who had a stick should not be allowed to carry it with them into the gallery.—Temple Bar.

A Fish That Turns to Water.

A curious animal is the medusa. Writing in 1701, Reaumur says: "It is a true sea water jelly, having little color or consistency. If we take one in our hands, the natural heat is sufficient to dissolve it into water." A medusa looks more like a mushroom than anything else, and is often of a pale blue or rose color, while in some localities it is violet. The tissue of a medusa is "so fragile that when abandoned by the waves on the beach it melts and disappears, without leaving a trace of its ever having existed." They are found principally in the arctic seas, and constitute one of the chief supports of the whale.—London Tit-Bits.
