Reckoning by Her Time.

"Hold the baby, please; I'll be back in just a minute," said she. Ten, twenty, thirty minutes passed. Baby awoke and yelled as if seven ghosts were after it. Taking the child, he went to find his wife.

"She isn't here," said the neighbor. "She has gone to the dressmaker's, and she left her parasol here and said she'd call for it in just a minute. Have a chair."

"Thanks." Baby screaming, head thrown back, face red, eyes shut, legs still, kicked off one little red shoe, made its mouth and hands go. Half hour, no wife. He carried the baby to the dressmaker's, where he was told:

"Your wife isn't here. She has just gone to the milliner's. But she left a pattern here and said she'd call for it in just a minute. Be seated."

"Thanks."

He trotted the screaming child on his knee, laid it on its back, rolled it over on its stomach, tossed it in the air, stuffed a handkerchief in its mouth and hummed "We Won't Go Home Till Morning." He asked for a rattle box, but the dressmaker got mad and said she wasn't married. Half hour, no wife. He took the child to the milliner, who said:

"Your wife isn't here. She has just left for home. Oh, what a cute little mouth; that child has been crying!"

"Hain't it!" He started for home and met his wife on the street. Tossing the child into her arms he strutted away, muttering:

"I'll be back in just a minute."

"Chicago or New York time, dear?"

"Your time!" he thundered.

That was two years ago and she hasn't seen him since.—Chicago Herald.

Lord Castlereagh's Ghost.

In one of the standard British biographical works may be found the story of Lord Castlereagh and the ghost. It seems that when quite a young man Castlereagh commanded a militia regiment in Ireland. One night he was stationed in a large, desolate country house. The bed upon which my lord reposed was at the end of a long, dilapidated room, while at the other extremity a great fire of wood and turf had been prepared within a huge, gaping, old fashioned fireplace. Waking in the middle of the night, Castlereagh lay watching from his pillow the gradual darkening of the embers on the hearth, when suddenly they blazed up and a naked child stepped from among them upon the floor.

The figure advanced slowly toward the doorway but thoroughly puzzled general, seeming to grow with surprising rapidity at every step, until, coming within two or three paces of his bed, it had assumed the proportions and appearance of a ghastly giant, pale as death, with bleeding wounds across the brow, eyes seeming to glow with rage and despair. Lord Castlereagh said that he leaped from the bed and confronted the figure in an attitude of defiance, whereupon it retreated before him, diminishing in size as it withdrew, in the same manner that it had previously shot up and expanded.

He followed it, pace by pace, until the original childlike form disappeared among the embers. This story Lord Castlereagh told and declared to be true in every particular at a party in Paris in 1815 when Scott was among the hearers. —St. Louis Republic.

The Sweetest Visits.

There is a pleasure in little, "scrappy," unexpected visitings with friends, which is often wanting from the planned and rounded comings when the "fire is bright and the cake basket ready in the closet." We are never conscious of a warmer, more living nearness to a friend than after we have unexpectedly chanced upon him in the street and had a few minutes of that flavorsome chat which glances at so much and grasps so little, or after he has dropped in, for an unanticipated half hour, at a time when we had no reason to look for him.

Why is it that the longer, more ordered hours of meeting leave, on the the whole, an impression less vivid and less warm? Perhaps because we have lived he visit once, in anticipation, and the reality has some faint fatal suspicion of staleness? Certain it is, the scrappy hours are sweetest.—Boston Commonwealth.

Did Not Know What Was Going On.

There is a fact about the French revolution more wonderful in its way than any which can be discovered in old newspapers. It is the fact, gathered from private letters of the period, that in those stirring times, when all the world was ringing with the events in Paris, there were actually people in that city living in absolute ignorance of the horrors around them. There was no Reign of Terror for them. They lived veritable recluses in their quiet suburban homes, hearing nothing, reading nothing of the turmoil which startled and terrified the nations. One wonders much what manner of people these oysterlike folks might be. Nothing sounds more incredible today. Yet there are many things in history not half so well authenticated, though history is curiously silent on so strange a circumstance.—London News.

What the Present Was Used For.

There was once a school teacher who received from her pupils a most elaborate jewel casket of glass and silver. Not long afterward she announced in family conclave, "That thing is horrid, but we really must use it." "We?" queried her mother. "Why, how many of us are expected to make use of it?" "As many as possible, I should say," was the innocent reply. "Isn't it a pickle jar?"—Youth's Companion.

Knew How to Wait.

Van Jordins (to applicant for position of butler)—You are familiar with waiting?

John Thomas—Oh, yes, sir.

Van Jordins—Where did you get your experience?

John Thomas—I was a fashionable tailor, sir; and I gave long credits.—New York Epoch.

INSTRUCTIONS TO VOTERS.

Person desiring to vote must procure their ballots from a member of the election board.

They must then, without leaving the polling place, proceed to a compartment and prepare their ballots.

Make a cross mark (X) with ink in the right margin of the ballot opposite the name of each person for whom you wish to vote.

Do not make any mark on the ballot, save as above directed, or the ballot will not be counted.

If you spoil a ballot return it to a member of the election board and obtain from him a new ballot. Take this to a compartment and mark it properly.

Having marked the ballot, fold it so as to conceal the names and marks on the face, and to expose the names on the back.

Take it to the judge of election before leaving the enclosure, and see it deposited in the box.

Immediately leave the railed enclosure.

If you wish to vote for any person whose name does not appear upon the ballot, write or insert his full name in the blank space on the ballot under the proper office you wish him to hold, and make a cross mark in the proper margin opposite the same.

Do not take any ballot from the polling place; you thereby forfeit the right to vote.
