CASS COUNTY FOR POST.

The Rally at Weeping Water a Grand Success.

A Great Crowd Accompanies the Speakers From This City--The Opera House Packed With an Enthusiastic Audience.

The republican rally held at Weeping Water Saturday evening was one of the most successful, in point of attendance and enthusiasm that has ever been held in Cass county.

The speakers for the occasion, Judge A. M. Post, of Columbus, and Hon. J. L. Webster, of Omaha, who arrived in this city on the flyer were met by a committee and under the leadership of the B. & M. band were at once taken to the M. P. station. The special train, previously ordered, was soon packed uncomfortably full of enthusiastic, loyal republicans and many democrats whose countenance plainly indicated that they preferred an able republican official to a man running on the independent ticket, who was wholly incompetent and unwholly their support. It was ascertained by actual count that over 350 persons went from Plattsmouth and the number was probably increased to 450 by accessions at Union and Murray. The train was so crowded after taking on passengers at these stations that it was found absolutely necessary to make no stop at Nehawka, as there was not even sufficient available standing room.

Arriving at Weeping Water the strains of music floating in the evening air and cheer after cheer from the enthusiastic crowd indicated that we would be warmly welcomed and that the popularity of the republican standard bearer was not confined to the eastern portion of the county. Under the leadership of the Louisville and Cullom bands the surging mass, now numbering at least 2,000 people, was escorted through the streets to the hotel, where a reception was held for Judge Post until the hour arrived for the speaking. At 8 p. m. the doors of the opera house were thrown open and in a few moments all the available space was occupied, and fully 1,000 people were unable to gain admittance. THE HERALD reporter was sufficiently fortunate to secure a press ticket and by being hustled through a side entrance we were enabled to gain admittance.

Orlando Tefft, chairman of the republican central committee, in a few well chosen words, introduced Judge A. M. Post, republican candidate for supreme judge. Judge Post does not pose as an orator or a professional politician, which he at once indicated; he impresses his hearers as a plain, practical, broad-minded man. Judge Post indulged in no idle talk, but every word was uttered for a purpose and his calm, dignified, scholarly manner presents a marked contrast with the blatant, unlearned, roaring harangues that have been delivered throughout the state by his opponent. His sincerity of manner indicated that when he said in his speech of acceptance, "The platform of a candidate for a judicial office should be the constitution, the law and the solemn oath of office that he takes," that he uttered the sentiments of the man. He dealt principally upon the function of the judiciary department of our state government. It was evident that he had a sufficient understanding of the duties devolving upon a supreme judge and a proper conception of the responsibilities resting upon a man operating in that official capacity. He exhorted the voters to give an honest expression of their views at the polls next Tuesday, that intelligence and patriotism rather than stubbornness and prejudice might characterize their decision.

Mr. Tefft, then introduced Hon. J. L. Webster, of Omaha, as a man who some times makes political speeches. As an orator Mr. Webster is very rarely excelled, and upon this occasion he fully met the expectations of his auditors. He said that if Nebraska would elevate the exaltation party to power the idea would become prevalent throughout the country that our farmers were really bankrupt and on the threshold of starvation; also, inasmuch as the so-called people's party was simply the remnant of the old greenback organization, with the accession of a few demagogues, that had recently been repudiated by the other parties, to grant them further supremacy would shake our financial and industrial credit with other states. He showed how the demand for the surplus products of the Nebraska farmers was increasing, and showed, conclusively, that ere long, if the republican home market idea should prevail, the entire product would be consumed at home. The point was clearly made that there was no necessity for this independent move, inasmuch as the republican and democratic parties were not laboring against the interests of the people, but while they pursued different methods, they embodied the germ of American loyalty, learning and statesmanship. The speaker observed that a certain class would find fault even though it were possible for prosperity to reign supreme. He cited as examples that men complained at Columbus, criticised Washington and opposed Lincoln and Grant. He said that we must expect to have chronic grumblers with us in matters not how prosperous the condition of the people. His allusion to the McKimley bill and the mention of James G. Blaine, in connection with the reciprocity feature of the bill, was greeted with hearty applause. He plainly demonstrated reciprocity was a natural sequence of the protective policy inasmuch as it provides for the free entrance into our ports of foreign goods that we can not produce profitably let the tariff be as high as it may, providing these countries will admit free of duty, products of our country, that they cannot profitably produce. He left no doubt in the minds of his audience that our day laborer were better provided for, in this country, in the legislation of the republican party than in any country in the world; advocated a still further diversity of industry that the demand for labor might be even more spirited.

Mr. Webster's peroration was a fine piece of oratory. He paid a glowing tribute to Judge Post, testifying as a lawyer of twenty years experience, that he would grace the position with becoming dignity and discharge his duties with satisfaction to his constituency.

The coming together of this great body of voters representing the intelligence and better judgment of all parties, signifies that they do not underestimate the importance of maintaining the integrity, the efficiency and the dignity of our highest court of justice. The sign of the times indicate that Cass county will go for Post.
