DO DOGS SEE GHOSTS?

FOR IF BRUTES SEE GHOSTS THEN THERE MUST BE GHOSTS. Examples to Prove That Dogs Have Been Frightened in Houses in Which Spirits Were Said to Have Appeared.

Some time ago I had something to say on animal immortality. In that article I briefly referred to the argument, now not uncommon, that some animals appear to have intercourse with beings, or forms and states of being, unseen by us.

He Reckoned He Would Run. One of the most interesting characters in American history is General Zachary Taylor, "Old Rough and Ready," hero of Buena Vista, father-in-law of Jefferson Davis and twelfth president of the United States.

General Sherman used to tell an amusing little story of Taylor's nomination for the presidency. At that time General Taylor was stationed at New Orleans.

General Taylor was a Kentuckian and the Kentuckians were very properly proud of him. One day shortly before the convention met at Baltimore he was approached at New Orleans by an old Kentucky friend, who said:

"General, we want you to run for president. 'Who wants me to run?' asked General Taylor seriously.

"Why, we do—all your old neighbors. 'Well, then, if that's the case,' replied the old hero, without changing the expression of his face, 'I reckon I'll have to run.'—Detroit Free Press.

Finding His Bride. In one part of the Canton of Ticino a very quaint marriage ceremony prevails. The bridegroom dresses in his "Sunday best," and accompanied by his male friends and relatives as he can manage for the fete goes to claim his bride.

Finding the door locked he demands admittance; the inmates ask him his business, and in reply he solicits the hand of his chosen maiden.

If his answer be deemed satisfactory he is successively introduced to a number of matrons and maids, some perhaps deformed and others old and ugly. Then he is presented to some large dolls, all of which he rejects with scorn, amid general merriment.

The bewildered bridegroom, whose impetuosity and temper are now sorely tried, is then informed that his lady love is absent and invited in to see for himself.

He rushes into the house and searches from room to room until he finds her in her bridal dress, ready to go to church. Then are his troubles over and his state as a benedict assured.—Swiss Republic.

Trying to Buy Back His Own Body. This queer story comes from Massachusetts: A man who lives in a suburb of Lowell is seeking to have a deed given by him twenty years ago recovered. The deed conveyed his body to a surgeon now practicing in Great Falls, N. H., for the sum of ten dollars and other considerations, possession to be taken on his death.

Since the deed was made the giver has made a fortune in South America and has decided that he would like a Christian burial. The deed provides that the body shall be dissected and the skeleton articulated and presented to a medical university. The lawyers have decided that the deed holds good and that the only alternative is to buy off the doctor.

The giver of the deed has made a big offer, but it has been refused.—Hartford Courant.

Instinct of the Messenger Pigeon. Upon what the messenger pigeon's wonderful faculty of finding its way homeward over great distances depends, opinions differ. Some ascribe it to an exercise of highly developed intelligence, others to an almost inconceivable perfection of sight, and yet others to instinct or intuition.

The fact of the matter is, it is one of those mysteries of nature that perhaps will never be revealed, and stands side by side with the action of the grise or young salmon, which finds its way back unerringly to the same stream that it left nearly three years before as a tiny par.—Denver Republican.

Cigars a Foot Long. The largest cigar actually smoked is by the better class of the Philippine Islanders, especially at Lozon—a place noted for the universal habit of smoking, practiced by all classes, ages and sexes. It is no uncommon thing to meet respectable islanders puffing away at cigars a foot in length and thick in proportion.—Boston Globe.

One Thing That Kills. The thing that really kills a great many people is laziness, though the doctors generally manage to find a more respectable name for it.—Ram's Horn.

A SEA LYRIC.

They went to save the salmon nets Out of the hungry sea. 'Twas just outside of the Harbor bar. As near as near could be: It was just behind the sandy bar. The women were all on the quay.

The boat rode o'er the rolling foam. They pulled against the wind, Swept slowly on to the Harbor bar. The breakers reared behind; And gray gulls shrieked o'er the shelt'ring bar.

The caverns with sea birds were lined. They went to draw the fishing nets; A cruel, crested wave Swept slowly on to the Harbor bar. And scooped for them a grave: The boat heeled over the harbor bar. And keel up to the women drove.

They went to save the salmon nets Out of the leaden sea. 'Twas just outside of the Harbor bar. Near to home as could be: It was just behind the sandy bar. And beyond the little stone quay.

One moment black against the wave, The women still with dread, Then the boat leapt over the Harbor bar, And on to the Mothers sped; And two lads lo'd o'er the shifting bar Till the sea giveth up her dead.

They went to save the salmon nets Out of the surging sea, From just behind the sandy bar. So near, as you can see, The screams that rang o'er the fleeting bar. Were the women's cries from the quay.—Miriam Daniell in Youth's Companion.

A Queer Place to Hide Money. Not long ago a neighbor in a frame house was burned out and the residents in the vicinity all worked hard to try and save some of his furniture. To our surprise the man seemed quite indifferent to the fate of his chairs and tables, but ran great risk of being burned alive in his efforts to save a few flowered in some shabby looking pots. It did not appear to me that his flower collection was worth a dollar altogether, and I could not imagine why he took such pains to save it from burning.

I found out afterward that it was not the flowers or the roots that he cared for, as they were all scattered roughly around the front of the house, nor for the pots, which he threw away. The secret turned out to be that he was storing his flower pots as banks in which to store his spare money, and he admitted on being questioned that he had been doing this for many years.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Paper from Wood Pulp. Comparatively little paper is made out of rags nowadays exclusively, a fact which is fortunate, as the quantity of paper now used is so great that there would not be enough worn out clothing or shoddy to supply the demand. The strangeness of it is that while paper is being used for dozens of purposes formerly monopolized by wood or even a harder material, such as car wheels, boxes, barrels, tubs, pails and so forth, wood is rapidly driving other ingredients to the wall in the manufacture of nearly all the cheaper grades of paper.

Wood pulp is made by a comparatively lengthy process, but by taking the mills to river banks where there is raw material and water power at hand, it can be produced at less than half the price formerly charged.—New York Telegram.

Dancing for a Footing. A mild way of hazing uninitiated scholars has been in vogue for a long time at the Eclectic Medical college. Every new man is required to get up before the whole school and give a little jig before he will be recognized as a fit person to associate with. If he refuses at first to give the jig he is not in it with the boys, who slight him on every possible occasion and make him the butt of their jokes.

Some very dignified scholars found it terribly hard to get through the little ordeal, but experience taught them to succumb, and there is not one of them who has not rattled his feet in accordance with the unwritten rule of the institution. Of course this is a matter which does not come under the jurisdiction of the faculty.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Criticism for the Eagle. Why cannot some able designer get up a representation of the eagle that looks something like that glorious bird? The spread wing idea is unnatural and absurd. It is only because of its antiquity that it is tolerated. An eagle that would spread its wings and legs in an attempt to symbolize peace and war deserves to be shot. A fine design of an American eagle at rest, perched on a crag or limb of a tree, would not be a bad one for our silver coins.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Novel to Some. Miss Antique—No, I'm not going to Mrs. Whitehair's reception. Miss Budd—Why not? "Oh, she always talks about old times, and that makes me tired. I don't see how you can stand her." "But, my dear, her subject is new to most of us, you know."—New York Weekly.

Had Probably Seen His Ancestors. It was proposed that a certain very small boy should have his portrait painted. He was greatly distressed, saying, between his sobs, "Oh, father, I don't want to always hang upon the wall!"—London Truth.

In Germany there has been a colony for epileptics for nearly a quarter of a century, a colony which now numbers more than 1,000 patients. There are similar asylums in other countries of Europe.

The much talked of Prince Ferdinand of Roumania is a slender man of middle height, with blue eyes, light brown hair and pleasing manner. His character is gentle, but by no means soft.

The oldest capital in the United States is Santa Fe, which was the seat of government in New Mexico as far back as 1640, and yet its population is only 6,135, according to the last census.

The steam power of the world may be reckoned as equivalent to the strength of 1,000,000,000 of men, which is more than twice the number of workmen existing.

SPECIAL MARKET LETTER.

W. G. Press & Co., Bankers & Commission Merchants, Nos. 2 and 4 Sherman Street, Chicago, in their last special market letter say: Seldom has a new year been ushered in under more favorable conditions for the material prosperity of our country than the one which, with its unsolved problems, lies before us.

While other countries suffer from famine, financial distrust, monetary stringency, and fear of the dogs of war, to us have been vouchsafed abundant crops, undisturbed confidence, a plethora of money, and a sense of peace and security enjoyed by no other nation on the face of the earth.

The abundance of money and the feeling of confidence and security manifest in our financial and commercial relations are chiefly attributable to the gratifying results of the harvest of 1911, and the excellent foreign demand for our surplus grain, which, for wheat, has been unprecedented.

The exports of that cereal either as grain or flour for the first half of the crop year, aggregating 121,000,000 bushels. With but one-half of the crop year gone, the balance of trade in our favor, and the requirements of Europe necessitating the purchasing of enormous quantities of American grain before another harvest, the prospect of a large increase in our available funds in the near future are quite flattering.

For the balance due us must be liquidated by the return of securities or by the remittance of gold. Foreign holders of American stocks and bonds will be loath to part with them while they promise to enhance in value and interest and satisfactory dividends are assured, and as funds have already been placed abroad to meet the January first coupons and interest, the influx of gold cannot much longer be retarded.

The most unpromising feature in the existing conditions is the state of the growing Winter Wheat, which, during the major portion of its existence, has been subject to such unfavorable conditions, that the outlook for an average crop is not assuring. Should further damage, sufficient to assure but an indifferent yield, be sustained, the effect on general business and railway stocks and bonds would become apparent during the last half of the year, although it would, doubtless, during the first half, stimulate speculation in grain and provisions, and by enhancing the value of our exportable surplus, augment the already abundant supply of money.

The trade in wheat since our last weekly letter, both at home and abroad, has been characterized by the usual holiday dullness, although the tenor of outside advices has been encouraging. The amount put afloat by all countries for Western Europe, the amount on ocean passage, the farmers' deliveries in the United Kingdom, and the English visible supply have all shown a marked decrease, while the shipments from India, which for several weeks have exceeded expectations, have decreased in volume sufficient to render them uninformative. Notwithstanding the holiday character of business, the demand at the seaboard for exportation has been quite liberal and is apparently again increasing. The movement from first hands seems to be abating if Minneapolis and Duluth receipts be a gauge of the volume from this source.

Corn is gradually assuming a more natural position, there being less interest manifested in the near future, which, owing to the rather small percentage of contract grain in current receipts, hold relatively higher than May. Stocks are increasing, and were it not for the continued scarcity of cars which hampers the corn trade more than anything else, the movement in and out would be quite large. It is claimed, however, that the recent reduction in price at country stations has curtailed farmers' deliveries.

Oats while influenced to some extent by the fluctuations in corn, seem inclined to show independence in consequence of the decrease in stocks and an unabated export demand.

In provisions the trade has apparently drifted into the hands of the packers, who, in consequence of the amount of manufactured product held by them, may now be willing to permit the market to advance. Receipts of hogs continue to surprise the trade, proving large when a decrease is expected and vice versa. In commenting on the movement, the Cincinnati Price Current says: "Should values of corn weaken to any notable degree, and prices of hogs assume a more encouraging promise, the effect would probably be to check the hurrying of hogs into market in most regions. At seven bushels of corn as the equivalent of 100 pounds live weight of hogs, it is apparent that current values furnish a satisfactory premium for feeding hogs. The modern bred animal, with such favorable weather as has been experienced this season, should gain 100 pounds from the equivalent of seven or seven and a half bushels of merchantable corn. The old plan was to reckon ten bushels, and this is still the basis of calculation to a great extent, but is deceptive."

THE HERALD is informed, and on very good authority at that, that a young couple who have not been married a very great length of time have decided that marriage is a failure, and agreed to separate.

Attempted Suicide. Fred Riddle attempted to shuffle of this mortal coil, Saturday by taking two ounces of chloroform. Mr. Riddle, has of late, been drinking heavily, which is probably the cause. Dr. Humphrey was called and his patient is now out of danger from the effects of the chloroform.

Sense in National Proverbs. There is a deal of sound sense in the proverbs of a nation. Earl Russell defined a proverb as being the wit of one man and the wisdom of many, and the aptness of this is well shown in the following from the Spanish, "Since we cannot get what we like, let us like what we get." The thought is as old as the race of mankind, but ages passed before one man hit upon the happy expression of it. This saying, from the Chinese, is a whole homily on pride in one sentence, "When a tree is blown down, it shows that the branches are longer than the roots."

For a concise expression of the lofty aspirations of youth and the sober achievements of riper years, take this sentence from Henry D. Thoreau, "The youth gets together his materials to build a bridge to the moon, or perchance a palace or temple on the earth, and at length the middle aged man concludes to build a woodshed with them."—B. A. in Brains.

A POPULAR FAMILY.

JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to 'catch on' to the latest thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me." KATE: "I don't know; I certainly do not make any effort in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Lafarce deserted her Desarte class so suddenly, and certainly you are all improving in grace under your instruction; I heard you telling Tommy James last evening how his club made mistakes in playing baseball; you seem to be up on all the latest 'facts' and know just what to do under all circumstances; you entertain beautifully; and in the last month you have improved in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little outfit of the way back?—for you never go to the city."

KATE: "Why, Jennie, you will make me vain. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I very seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days bring me all information on the subject. Magic? No! Magazine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household; father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says this one gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only really FAMILY magazine published, as we have sent for samples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $2.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise; but I will let you see ours, or, better still, send 10 cents to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a sample copy, and I shall always consider the reading of it a great favor; and may be you will be cutting us out, as you say you have the reputation of being the best informed family in town. If that be so, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

A liberal offer—only $3.00 for THE WEEKLY HERALD and Demorest Family Magazine. Send your subscription to this office.
