SUGAR BOUNTY MAKING REPBULICANS.

The democratic papers, especially those of free trade proclivities, are saying that the sugar bounty "must go."

The real animus of the democratic attack is not the inherent injustice of the bounty, nor the amount, but the political effect of the act.

The whole thing, the republic thinks, turn on the sugar bounty. It assumes that a democratic congress will cut off that bounty and then the protected beet sugar of Germany and France loose on our sugar planter, compelling them to compete single-handed with the pauper labor of some countries and the subsidized manufacturers of others.

The Picayune is nearer right than the Republic, whose talk is of "wild dreams of free trade," which, the Picayune says will never be realized.

CABINET GIRLS

Having nothing else to make remarks upon The Washington Post, in its usual able way, indulges itself and delights the public in a long dissertation upon the Cabinet girls.

Coming down from the cold facts of etymology to the warm regions of social life it is necessary to explain that the "Cabinet Girl" is the unmarried female adjunct of the household of a number of the President's Cabinet.

It is repeated very often that for the first time a Republican convention is to be held "west of the Mississippi river."

Washington, have, and have always had, their lines cast in pleasant places. They are hunted and haunted to be sure by the dudes of the foreign legations, but it is pleasant to know that as a general thing they have been able to resist their nothingness.

A Young physician in an obscure Massachusetts village has made himself famous among his colleagues by happening along one day just as a man fell out of a carriage and dislocated his neck.

The farmers paid off more mortgages during 1891 than any previous year of the country's history, and the indications are that they will do still better in '92.

Height of Cruelty

Nervous women seldom receive the sympathy they deserve. While often the pictures of health they are constantly affing. To with hold sympathy from these unfortunates is the height of cruelty.

Travelers may learn a lesson from Mr. C. D. Come, a prominent attorney of Parker Dakota, who says: "I never leave home without taking a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy with me and on many occasions have run with it to the relief of some sufferer and have never known it to fail."

Getting Rich Fast.

Two young men near Los Angeles, Cal., are rapidly making a fortune slaying coyotes. Last April they were worth fifty dollars, but now they have $3,700 to their credit in bank and they are adding about $150 a week to their deposit.

A Russian Doctor.

A Russian journal reports an interesting case of a philanthropic physician. Visiting the patients of his districts, the doctor found that in many instances their sickness was caused by hunger.

A Change in Electric Lights at Sea.

A remarkable change is said to be about to take place in the manner of giving the warning light to mariners. In England electric lights experimentally turned vertically toward the sky have given extraordinary results.

The Queen's Reporter.

The post of "queen's reporter" in parliament is vacant by the elevation of Lord Lewisham to the upper house. It is said that Mr. Balfour will undertake the duties with his new office.

East of the Mississippi.

It is repeated very often that for the first time a Republican convention is to be held "west of the Mississippi river."

In St. Louis recently a large building in one of the best business streets of the city was torn down simply because it was thought to be "hoodooed," which shows that superstition still has a strong hold on some people.

The Mistreatment of Horses.

Doubtless it was the daily spectacle of the abuse of horses which stimulated Henry Bergh to the great service which has justly made his name renowned. But the guilt of the abuse is not confined to draymen and teamsters.

Human knowledge and skill directed to an auxiliary animal like the horse should aim to develop his natural aptitudes. He is treated as a part of the show of the parade, and he is at the mercy of the owner, who buys horses not because he likes them or knows anything about them, but because he must have an equipage, and he abandons them to the care of grooms and coachmen, whose sole aim is to produce a more "swell" effect than their rivals.

The Little Ghost.

"The Poplars" is the name of the old Revolutionary homestead. It is a great, square, white, stone house built in the center of a thousand acres. The master of it was childless. His little boy had died a week before, and he had gone away. Every night a little figure in white with a light was seen flitting from window to window in the old library.

When the master returned, toward the end of autumn, he was informed of it all. He hid behind the tapestry night after night, and one night he was rewarded by seeing a little white figure glide in, light a candle, climb up to one of the highest shelves, take down a rare old book and begin to pore over it.

Beecher's First Home.

One room served for entrance into the house, for parlor, study and bedroom; the other to the dining and workroom, writes Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher in describing the first home which she and Mr. Beecher had years ago in the west. The bedroom was so small that I was obliged to make the bed on one side first, then go out on the veranda, raise a window, reach in and make the bed on the other side.

For nearly seven years this was our home—a home full of cares and no luxuries, but a very happy home—for many reasons the happiest we ever knew, for we were less separated there. In Brooklyn, in later years, Mr. Beecher's public duties naturally drew him more away from the family circle, but in those days in the west I had him almost entirely to myself.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Thrilling Adventure of a Miner.

John Clarkson tells an interesting story of how he came near being devoured by a large army of rats in the Baker coal bank. It was his custom to cook his meal in the coal bank at dinner time. One day as he was sitting before a fire boiling his meat he was startled to hear the noise made by running rats.

Set Upon by the Gang.

One of the Italian exhibitors of performing birds lost a green parakeet out of his cage the other afternoon on Park street. The bird flew up into an elm and chattered at the distracted Italian.

A Happy Family.

A happy family dwells in an engine house in Madison, Ind., and the antics of the members afford amusement to the fire company. The family is composed of a cod, a cat, a pair of rabbits, two white mice and a shepherd dog. They occupy the same apartment, sport together and eat from the same vessel.—Yankee Blade.

The American people are rapidly becoming a race of nervous wrecks and the following suggests, the best remedy: alphaso Humpffing, of Butler, Penn., swears that when his son was speechless from St. Vitus Dance Dr. Miles' great Restorative Nervine cured him.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption coughs and colds.

A Mystery Explained.

The papers contain frequent notices of rich, pretty and educated girls eloping with negroes, tramps and coachmen. The well-known specialist, Dr. Franklin Miles, says all such girls are more or less hysterical, nervous, very impulsive, unbalanced; usually subject to headache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, immoderate crying or laughing. These show a weak, nervous system for which there is no remedy equal to Restorative Nervine. Trial bottles and a fine book, containing many marvelous cures, free at F. G.
