A WHEAT yield of 611,780,000 bushels in 1891 is a clear proof that the alliance meetings were poorly attended, and that the farmers made intelligent and profitable use of their time.

THE popular vote for president this year will probably reach 13,000,000, and it would be nearly 14,000,000 larger if the colored republicans of the south were permitted to vote.—Globe-Democrat.

THE democratic house has already been in session over a month, and the only thing it has done worth mentioning was their refusal to send relief to the starving Russians, and draw fat salaries for themselves.

A BRIGHT new nickel mounted upon a pin would make a very effective campaign badge in the elections of next fall, when the people are to pass judgment upon the results of the first session of the Fifty-second congress.—New York Sun.

OUR great and glorious five-cent congress has begun the noble work of retrenchment by knocking out the proposition to deliver at a Russian port the grain given by the Americans to help the czar's starving peasants. This is the same kind of economy which in private life finds expression in the contribution of plugged nickels to the Sunday morning collection.—Detroit Tribune.

A PROTECTIVE TARIFF. That system of tariff legislation which levies duties on imports such as are adequate to establish and maintain industries, insuring high wages to laborers, is called PROTECTION.

The amount of protection needed is determined by the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad.

For instance: If, because of high wages here, it costs $10 to produce a ton of steel rails, and because of low wages it only costs $2 in England, then steel rails need a duty of about $8 a ton to keep our mills open and to protect our own workmen from the low wages abroad.

Again, if it costs twenty cents a bushel to raise barley here, and only ten cents a bushel in Canada, then barley needs protection to the amount of ten cents a bushel.

If a duty is imposed on any article less than the cost of production, it is called a protective tariff.

A protective tariff system not only means high duties on some things, medium duties on others, and even low duties on certain articles, but it means no duty at all on such things as we cannot produce or manufacture in sufficient quantities for our own use.

On tea and coffee, for instance, we levy no important duty, for we cannot raise them in this country.

And raw sugar, too, we admit free of duty, for we have not yet developed the industry sufficiently to supply our own people. So, instead of a duty a bounty is given.

A protective tariff, therefore, besides being a source of revenue, develops and maintains our agriculture and innumerable manufacturing industries; it enables us to pay our millions of workmen high wages, thereby insuring a home market of several times greater value than the whole world's markets combined; it keeps hundreds of millions of dollars in the country that would otherwise be sent abroad to pay for things we can raise and manufacture ourselves; it incites invention; it enables us to live better, eat better food and wear better clothes than any other nation; it enables us to keep our wives at home instead of in the fields, or in the mills; it enables us to educate our children in school; it makes us the most prosperous, most contented and happiest people on the face of the earth.—The American Economist.

THE GIRL TROUBLE. The people of the United States will recall the plain affirmations of her own citizens who were on the platform, as they are made with not a motive of self-interest, and there will be no further hesitation nor retraction if war comes by the wrongdoing of Chili.

THE democrats are treading upon very thin ice when they make a move toward repealing the third section of the McKinley bill, which provides for reciprocal trade with the countries of South America. The declaration that they wish to substitute a section that will be constitutional "and less onerous" will be taken with a great deal of allowance by the public. There is no doubt that the object of the movement is to embarrass the administration, which now has the negotiations for reciprocity well in hand, and thus to cause the partial failure of the whole plan for reciprocal trade. The majority in the house of representatives take this underhand method of dealing a blow to the scheme because they dare not attack it openly. It ought to be self-evident to every good business man that the work of the state department in securing concessions from other countries cannot be safely interfered with while negotiations under way are yet incomplete. A change in policy now will be simply to throw away over a year of glorious work for the upbuilding of American commerce and industry.—Lincoln Journal.

"Can I have a hint?" she said, "I'm a little bit nervous."

"Yes, well, you probably had a little spat, and—"

"And you set down today to bring John to time and wrote him a sassy letter. Am I right?"

"That—that's just about it," she said slowly, her face on fire.

"And now, when you've suddenly changed your mind and—"

"Oh, I have now, really!"

"Ah, yes, and you want me to give you that letter back so that John won't break away entirely?"

"That's—that's it, sure pop now."

A Mysterious Explanation. The patient remained in bed for several weeks, and a number of physicians had been consulted, but no relief was obtained.
