WHAT is the matter with the wagonbridge that was to be built over the Platte?

THE Nebraska state fremen are in session at Fremont. They will name the time and place to hold the annual tournament.

THE defense of San Francisco is not as strong as it should be, but if war is declared with Chili, she need not fear an attack as the Chilians will be kept pretty busy around home.

THE patrons of the street railway of Chicago, want a law passed compelling the street railway companies to furnish seats for all passengers or else take no pay from those who have to stand up.]

THE New York post office yielded a net revenue of $4,980,411 last year. This is attributable in large measure to the fact that the post office is one of the things in New York that tammany does not control.—Globe Democrat.

GROVER CLEVELAND has gone south to hunt alligators in the Florida swamps, and to fish for the southern democratic electoral vote for president and it is hoped he will have lots of sport even if he does not catch the vote.

THE two surprising facts with regard to the federal finances are that the public debt has been reduced $250,000,000 during the present administration, and that the people have gained $50,000,000 in the past year by reason of republican tariff reform.—Globe-Democrat.

THE war cloud still thickens and it looks now as if Chili would open the ball herself by opposing the passage of the White fleet, under command of Admiral Walker, through the Straits of Magellan. Admiral Walker has six vessels, but no torpedoes, and Chili has sent six vessels to the straits, one of which is the noted torpedo boat that blew up Blanco Enalada.

THE JUST CAUSE OF WAR.
The Chicago Times is of the opinion that a war with Chili would cost a great deal of money, that it might extend over much time, and that it would be unprofitable in results. As to its first proposition, the Times is quite right. War is a costly undertaking. As to its second proposition, it may be right; it is for no man to measure exactly the power of an untried foe. As to its third proposition, it is wholly wrong. The one priceless possession of a nation is its honor; this would be maintained, even if the event of war were against us. The man who strives to vindicate the honor of his mother at the peril of his life is honorable, even if he loses his life in the attempt. He who does not strive to vindicate the honor of his mother is base, though he should save millions of dollars and his life by his cowardice. "The republic," said Cicero, "is the mother of us all," and this clause of the Roman creed is part of the faith of America.

It is to be hoped that there will be no war. Chili has not a foot of land that this republic covets, has not a dollar of which this country would despoil it, has not a vessel that this nation desires to capture. That Chili may grow rich and populous, that it may enjoy a stable government, and that schools and newspapers may multiply within its borders is the wish of the people of the United States.

But since certain seamen of the United States have been maimed and have died on account of injuries inflicted by a Chilian mob, of which uniformed officials of that republic were part, apology to this nation and recompense to its maimed citizens and to the families of its slain ones is due. It is a due that can not go unenforced without loss of the national honor, and, whether the Times believes it or no, that is held by most Americans to be the thing that must be preserved at all costs and at all hazards. Indeed, the preservation of national honor has come to be considered as almost the only just cause of war.—Inter Ocean.

RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

It is estimated from the most recent report of the statistician to the interstate commerce commission that the total number of men employed on the railways of the United States during the year ending June 30, 1890, was 649,301, being an increase over the number employed the previous year of 44,558. This increase is at the rate of 768 new men for each 100 miles of new line brought into operation. It raises the average employment on railways in the United States from 459 per hundred miles of line in 1880 to 479 men per 100 miles in 1890, being an increase of twenty men per hundred miles of line. By classes the report shows that employees of railways were distributed as follows in 1890:

General officers	5,160
General office clerks	22,239
Station agents	25,765
Other stationmen	66,431
Engine men	33,354
Firemen	34,634
Conductors	23,513
Other trainmen	61,734
Mechanists	27,461
Carpenters	37,996
Other shopmen	80,733
Section Foremen	27,129
Other trackmen	157,096
Switchmen, flagmen and watchmen	37,660
Telegraph operators and dispatchers	18,968
Employees—account floating dept.	6,199
All other employees and laborers	83,890
Total	748,301

La Grippe.

No healthy person need fear any dangerous consequences from an attack of la grippe if properly treated. It is much the same as a severe cold and requires precisely the same treatment. Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed for a severe cold and a prompt and complete recovery is sure to follow. This remedy also counteracts any tendency of la grippe to result in pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it during the epidemics of the past two years we have yet to learn of a single case that has not recovered or that has resulted in pneumonia. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by F. CURIOUS WAR INCIDENT.
Col. Mosby Listens to a Little Story, and Rounds It Out.

A few evenings ago Col. E. A. Denicke entertained at dinner Capt. French, a Philadelphia banker and an officer of the Signal Corps during the war. Among the other guests were some members of the local corps and Col. John S. Mosby, the well-known guerilla chieftain. Capt. French has contributed a number of articles to the Century and other magazines relating to his escape from Libby Prison, and at the dinner-table he narrated an incident which has not yet been published.

"We were attached to Sherman's army," said Capt. French, "and as we were marching toward Gettysburg I was detailed to reconnoiter with another man. We passed a farm-house, but afterward returned to the place to ask for a drink of water. The house was within the Union lines, and a group of officers was standing in front. Before we had an opportunity of speaking a woman informed us that our dinner was ready, and although we were considerably surprised at this, we had no objection in those days to eat a dinner which was obviously designed for some one else.

"As we left the house a man in a civilian dress ordered me to throw up my hands and surrender. As I was within Union lines my first thought was that some soldier was playing a practical joke upon me, and I carelessly ignored it, but when the man emphasized his order by pointing an ugly-looking gun close to my head, I considered it wise to obey. The upshot of that adventure was my confinement in Libby Prison. I don't know who my captor was, but the occurrence was on the 16th of "

Capt. French was interrupted by Col. Mosby. "You are mistaken as to the date," said the latter. "it was on the 17th, and, by the way, you probably do not know that you were almost a dead man that day. When I pointed the gun at you I was wiggling the trigger, but somehow it did not work smoothly and your surrender prevented its discharge."

"Were you my captor?" asked Capt. French in surprise. "I heard afterward that he was one of Mosby's men."

"I was the man," was Col. Mosby's grim reply.—San Francisco Call.

HIS APPETITE.
The Voracity of that Growing Boy After School Hours.

What an appetite he has! How hungry he is always! How the cookies vanish and the gingerbread disappears before his determined onslaught! He is all noise and impulse, and waris and freckles! His hands are dirty; his finger nails rimmed with black; he has stuck a "wad of gum" to the shelf in the pantry to clear the way for the edibles, and his trousers are torn at the knees and he smells of fish bait and peppermint candy; but he is your boy, and you love him.

The house is turned upside down immediately. He wants a string for his kite. He wants some lead. He wants a bigger fish hook. He wants his ball mended. He wants money for Jim to pay him the boot on the jack-knife he has swapped. He wants to go fishing with Tom and Jack.

He crams his mouth full of bread and butter, and with the jelly running out of the corners he makes his wants known.

"Ma, can't I have a bicycle? I want one. Where's pa? Who's been here with a carriage? Where's my box of worms? I wish I had a pistol or a shot-gun. Jim's got one. Say, ma, teacher says I've been late twice, and it's only just once. Jim's been late a dozen times, and never got marked. I did ten examples to-day. I wish I had a new slate. Oh, ma, the circus is coming next month! Can't I go every day? I wish I was a circus or a menagerie! Wouldn't I have jolly old times! Going to school is awful slow!

"Tom's dog bit Mike Lane. They think he's got the hydrophobia. It was in the leg, and he had two white ears and a white tail, and he'd sit up like I—like—well, like anything. I should like to have a dog! Say, ma, ain't there any custard? Tom has mince pie all the year round at his house! Oh, say, ma, can't I have three kittens? Mike's mother's cat has got five, and they'll give me three! Mike said so! Ain't they real good? Hallo! there come the boys! They've all got their poles! Where's my line? Don't let Minnie eat up all the cake! I shall want some when I get back! You won't let her, will you, ma?"

And with a whoop and a hurrah he dashes out of the house and leaves a track of mud behind him and a generally disordered room for you to clean up.—N. Y. Weekly.

Sir Robert Ball, the astronomer royal for Ireland, ascertained a short time ago that 50,000,000 years ago the moon was a part of this earth, and predicted that in 50,000,000 years hence the moon would be twice the distance from us it is now.

Oysters in the Thames.

Oysters do not appear to thrive in the Thames. Out of 600,000 laid on flats in the lower reaches of the river in 1887, no fewer than 30 per cent died. In the following year the same number of oysters were placed on the beds, and the mortality increased to 35 per cent. Matters were still worse in 1889, when 400,000 oysters were laid down to fatten, and nearly half of them died.

HERE is what the manufacturer says in regard to Solid Silver Metal goods and Solid Nickel Silverware: "There has been a growing demand for years for a grade of Spoons and Forks to take the place of Solid silver and plate ware. We have experimented for some time to attain this end, and are now able to offer the public our Rogers' Metal and Rogers' Solid Nickel Silver. We guarantee this metal superior to any Nickel Silver manufactured and have the greatest confidence in assuring our customers that this ware is inferior to service only to solid silver. It is a beautiful white color, is highly polished and can hardly be distinguished from pure silver. We recommend this ware especially for hotels, restaurants and boarding houses, as it will stand more hard usage than any other metal; is very tough and hard; will hold its color and will outwear any platable ware ever manufactured." All our customers know Rogers' ware by reputation. This firm have manufactured plated ware since 1865, and their name is never put on goods that are not of a high grade, so our customer can rest assured that they are getting some very desirable goods when they get goods under their brand. Come in early and secure a share of these goods before it is too late.

We Guarantee our Prices to be the Lowest and Invite Competition.
