Wonderful.
E. W. Sawyer, of Rochester, Wis., a prominent dealer in general merchandise, and who runs several peddling wagons, had one of his horses badly cut and burned with lariat. The wound refused to heal. The horse became lame and still notwithstanding careful attention and the application of remedies. A friend handed Sawyer some of Haller's Barb Wire Linctment, the most wonderful thing ever saw to heal such wounds. He applied it only three times and the sore was completely healed. Equally good for all sores, cuts, bruises, and wounds. For sale by all druggists.

Safe and Reliable.
"In buying a cough medicine for children," says H. A. Walker, a prominent druggist of Ogden, Utah, "never to be afraid to buy Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger from it and relief is always sure to follow. I particularly recommend Chamberlain's because I have found it to be safe and reliable. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by F. G. Fricke & Co."

Do not confuse the famous Blush of Roses with the many worthless paints, powders, creams and bleaches which are flooding the market. Get the genuine of your druggist, O. H. Snyder, 75 cents per bottle, and I guarantee it will remove your pimples, freckles, blackheads, moth, tan and sunburn, and give you a lovely complexion. 1

Electric Bitters.
This remedy is becoming so well and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise. A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the liver and kidneys, will remove pimples, boils, salt rheum and other affections caused by impure blood. Will drive malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all malarial fevers. For cure of headache, constipation and indigestion try Electric Bitters.—Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded.—Price 50c and $1 per bottle at F. G. Fricke & Co's drugstore. 5

A Fatal Mistake.
Physicians make no more fatal mistake than when they inform patients that nervous heart troubles come from the stomach and are of little consequence. Dr. Franklin Miles, the noted Indiana specialist, has proven the contrary in his new book on "Heart Disease" which may be had free of F. G. Fricke & Co., who guarantee and recommend Dr. Miles' unequalled New Heart Cure, which has the largest sale of any heart remedy in the world. It cures nervous and organic heart disease, short breath, fluttering, pain or tenderness in the side, arm or shoulder, irregular pulse, fainting, smothering, dropsy, etc. His Restorative Nervine cures headache, fits, etc.

It should be in Every House.
J. B. Wilson, 371 Clay St., Sharpsburg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds that it cured his wife who was threatened with Pneumonia after an attack of "La Grippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber of Cocksport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for Lung Trouble. Nothing like it. Try it. Free trial bottles at F. G. Fricke & Co's drugstore. Large bottle, 50c and $1.00.

A Mystery Explained.
The papers contain frequent notices of rich, pretty and educated girls eloping with negroes, tramps and coachmen. The well-known specialist, Dr. Franklin Miles, says all such girls are more or less hysterical, nervous, very impulsive, unbalanced, usually subject to headache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, immoderate crying or laughing. These show a weak, nervous system for which there is no remedy equal to Restorative Nervine. Trial bottles and a fine book, containing many marvelous cures, free at F. G. Fricke & Co's, who also sell and guarantee Dr. Miles' celebrated New Heart Cure, the finest of heart tonics. Cures Ruttering, short breath, etc.

Cough Following the Grip
Many persons, who have recovered from la grippe are now troubled with a persistent cough. Chamberlain's cough remedy will promptly loosen this cough and relieve the lungs, effecting a permanent cure in a very short time. 25 and 50 cent bottle for sale by F. G. Fricke & Co.

Startling Facts.
The American people are rapidly becoming a race of nervous wrecks and the following suggests, the best remedy: alphous Humpfling, of Butler, Penn., swears that when his son was speechless from St. Vitus Dance Dr. Miles great Restorative Nervine cured him. Mrs. J. L. Miller of Valparaiso, Ind., J. D. Taolin, of Logansport, Ind. each gained 20 pounds in a taking of it. Mrs. H. A. Gardner, of Vastut Ind., was cured of 40 to 50 convulsions easy and much headach, dizziness, backach and nervous prostration by one bottle. Trial bottle and fine book of Nervous cures free at F. G. Fricke & Co., who recommends this unequalled remedy.

was the housekeeper, looked smart in a new cotton gown and fancy cap. "And it's welcome home, ye are, Lord Waverland; and long life to ye's, and my Lady," said the butler, making a most profound bow, as we entered the house. Sir Wren, Annie and the Colonel were soon with us, and friends from every direction came to offer their congratulations. The broad beautiful lawn was full of people. Soon Stella and I were in their midst shaking hands with them, and receiving their "God bless ye's!"

It was a merry company that gathered at the long tables to partake of the sumptuous feast that afternoon; and, as we passed here and there we heard these remarks:

Soon Stella and I were in their midst shaking hands with them.

here and came with her little box of medicine and doctored my Jammie when he had the measles, so it is!"

All united in calling her the "swate lady." The children gathered round Lady Waverland for their usual. No one was overlooked. Most of them Stella knew and remembered their names. She had a peculiar faculty of gaining children's love. I had often noticed when in a room full of strangers, the children would soon find their way to Stella's side.

While we were busy seeing that our people were having good cheer, the invited guests were enjoying themselves according to their own tastes and inclinations. Some were busy with ball and mallet at croquet. Others with bow and arrow were sending forth joyous peals of laughter at the mistakes or good hits of their companions. One and all were having a good time. Sir Wren was in an ecstasy of delight, and seemed the youngest of the party, giving a passing joke and friendly greeting to every one he met. As he and I were standing together and Stella was engaged with the little ones, I said:

"You see, Sir Wren, that there is no danger but that Lady Waverland will be popular with our people. She has won their love and trust as she has won mine, by the goodness of her heart. I have no fear but that it will continue."

"You are very fortunate, Lady, in securing such a lovely wife. I congratulate you with a warmer heart since I have seen her among the people. Her gentle influence will have great force for their good."

In the evening Lady Waverland was no less a favorite than among the humbler classes. The rich and haughty were glad to claim her for an acquaintance on account of her noble birth and great wealth. I thought as I saw some of the grand ladies and gentlemen who had formerly stung her sensitive heart with cruel words, now trying to win more than a passing greeting from her, how different their conduct would have been had she returned as simply a governess! But wealth and position are powerful agents with those who have no higher aims in life than show and fashion.

Lady Waverland was equally a favorite with rich and poor and made every one who came into her presence feel at ease. A few days after our return the people gathered to hear Mr. Parnell and to choose a candidate to stand for our district for member of parliament. Our district was one of the most extremely nationalist of any in Ireland. When Mr. Parnell came he found a remarkable gathering. It was thoroughly representative; people of all trades, merchants, mechanics, professors, laborers and noblemen had met to see and hear the "uncrowned king."

The applause and cheers that greeted Mr. Parnell were loud and hearty, but some hissed and many flourished the black thorn shillalah. That is a practical weapon in the hands of an Irishman and has convinced many a man against his will.

Mr. Parnell came to the front and was formally introduced by the chairman of the committee. He bowed slightly, and commenced speaking in a conversational tone of voice, without the least visible excitement. At first the confusion in the crowd was so great that very few heard him. But, with the command he had obtained over himself in parliament he continued speaking. Very soon order prevailed and nearly every one in the vast audience could hear distinctly every word he uttered.

"Friends," he said, "I hope we may gain Home Rule for Ireland in the coming parliamentary struggle. That will pave the way for every tenant farmer to own the land he tills. But to obtain this we must stand united. In union lies our strength. England has said that we never can agree among ourselves, so they have nothing to fear from us. In the coming election I would like to prove to England that we know what we want and are united in asking for it."

"Now, friends, I want your assistance, to help secure Ireland the management of our local affairs, and protection of our home industries. We have every advantage for successful manufactures. All we need is protection. But brute force will never accomplish anything. I hate the cowardly heart that can find refuge in dynamite. 'It's the only way!' cried a voice from the crowd."

Arbitrary arrests have been made! Ireland has been treated as though unfit for anything better than to be trodden under foot! Are you willing to submit to all this in the future?" (No! No! came in a deafening roar from the excited crowd.) "Well, then, hear who my candidate is, and stand by him. I have for my candidate the name of Lord Waverland!" (Cries of, "No landlord!" "No dictation!" filled the air. For a time it was a mad and defiant crowd.)

But Mr. Parnell continued quietly speaking. When the confusion ceased we heard: "Name your candidates." A dozen different names were offered. "You see, my friends," said Mr. Parnell, "that you cannot agree even on a candidate, and if you do not elect your man you are giving one more man to your enemies. Do you remember Starfield's motto?" "Ireland and Liberty," came in shouts from a thousand voices, that made the very air re-echo back the words. That appeal was decisive; it united them. When Mr. Parnell called my name again, as the proper candidate for our district it was received with a cheer.

As the meeting closed the waiting people gathered around to shake hands with their hero. He is young, tall, slender and prepossessing in his manners. His looks declare him to be a perfect gentleman. He cannot be called eloquent, but he impresses his hearers with the feeling that he is thoroughly in earnest, and in sympathy with their cause. When he shook hands and spoke to everyone who could possibly approach him, he sent each one home feeling that he was their friend, and would stand by them with his life if need be.

Thus closed a day that everybody feared would end in a bloody riot. It was this county that had been so fierce and determined that no landlord should be supported, and no "dictation" should be permitted. Here the secret societies had appeared the most determined. But Mr. Parnell, by his clear-headedness, held them in subjection to his powerful will until every man felt that it was for his own good to unite and work with, not against him. I felt the park feeling that a stormy campaign was in store for me. I could not rely upon this man with an iron will to be present to rule the mob as he had done today. I almost dreaded to go home and tell Stella, and yet, how could I wish for better news.

When I reached home Stella met me at the door saying: "I know all!" "How did you hear?" "I was at the village and had communication brought me every half hour. Do you think I would stay at home and know you were in danger, if a riot should take place? No, I must be near and know the worst, at least," she said, as she gave me a welcoming kiss.

"Then you were going to be my guardian angel and watch over me, were you, little woman?" I asked, leading her into the house. "Yes, Loyd, if there is such a thing as holding a charm over another's life, I would exercise that power and always shield you from harm."

"You do hold a charm, my sweet, precious wife. Your love for me gives me power to resist evil, and for your sake I am ambitious. To-day has brought out possibilities that will call forth all the untired energies of my nature, and I need your help and advice to give me courage to overcome the difficulties that lie before me."

She raised her clear brown eyes to mine, eloquent with love and trust, saying: "Dear Loyd, you know you always have all the encouragement I can give you. I am proud of my noble husband!" she said, with confiding love. "But do you think Mr. Parnell will elect his men?" "Yes, I believe he will. He has now gained his point in one of the worst counties in all Ireland! I think every man went home in sympathy with him and ready to work as he directs. Here comes the Colonel; he'll tell us how quickly they conducted such meetings in America," I said, welcoming the Colonel with a cordial hand shake.

"I think that if a crowd of Americans had been determined to fight as your people seemed to-day, it would have taken more than Parnell to have quieted them; though he is a wonderful man, I must confess, so calm, so quiet and yet possessed of so much magnetic force that he can command the obedience of all who come within the power of his voice. What a general he would make in the army! I do not wonder now why England is uneasy. If he holds to his purpose and can elect his men to stand by him, he will be a power she may well fear and strive to conciliate."

"But England will never grant anything to Ireland that she can avoid," I said. "No, it is against her principles to admit that she is in the wrong. If she grants any request she will try to put such a mortgage on coming generations that you will never dare to ask anything more," he said.

"But Parnell will never bind our people by any iron clad mortgages that will trammel the liberty of Ireland," I said, as we went in to dinner.

CHAPTER XXV.—THE PICNIC.
"It is such beautiful weather, let's have a picnic to-day," said Stella, one morning at breakfast. "Then it's the very last chance we will have while Col. Haynes is with us. Are you really going day after to-morrow?" she asked of him. "Yes, Lady Waverland, I must go then. I will stay and see Lord Waverland elected, which will take place to-morrow, then I must tear myself away. But I am in for a picnic to-day," he said, with animation.

"A picnic!" cried Myrtle, intensely excited, for, to her, a picnic represented a fairy world. "Who shall we ask to join our party?" asked Stella.

"We'll stop for the St. Clair's. They are always ready for pleasure. You remember them; the girls were those good archers that were here the night of our return," I explained to the Colonel. Then there's Johnny O'Rork. We must ask him for Annie's sake. He thinks she is the only girl worth looking at in all the world." "But wait," said Stella. "I must see if there is any thing in the house fit for lunch, and away she tripped as happy as a lark."

"Waverland, you are the most fortunate man alive in having won such a glorious wife! If I could only find such a dear little woman to brighten my life, I should be as happy as a king."

"You may well say that. I have the one woman of all the world that could make me happy. But there are others, from whom you may choose one just as dear to you."
