WHAT CONSTITUTES A CAUSE FOR WAR?

Senators Kyle, of South Dakota, and Peffer, of Kansas, the only two northern representatives of the alliance party in the senate, seem to have very absurd ideas of national honor; also Miss Frances E. Willard and Lady Henry Somerset. These ladies are calling upon the W. C. T. U. all over the country to send petitions of protest against war with Chili as its being inhuman. Susan B. Anthony, the leader of the suffrage movement, has been urged upon to join the "protest of American womanhood against this needless war proposed to be waged by 63,000,000 people against 2,000,000.

Senators Kyle and Peffer also seem to think it depends on the size of the nation whether a nation should defend its citizens and representatives on foreign soil and afford them protection from outrage and murder. According to Mr. Kyle, it would be a national disgrace to go to war with Chili, and adds, "The bare idea of going to war with a country smaller than one of our states, is criminally ludicrous. That sixty million of people—the biggest, richest and most prosperous nation on earth—should entertain the idea of a war with a little country like Chili is absurdity."

It is the duty of the government to try in all cases of international difficulty to reach an amicable settlement, if practicable, irrespective of size or power, but the doctrine that a great nation can not assert its rights in the face of another great nation is preposterous. Did these two senators ever hear of Tripoli, and what the United States once did in bringing that little country to time? Do they hold Commodore Decatur and Preble in contempt for forcing the Bey of Tripoli to respect the American flag? That was early in the present century, and the whole civilized world rejoiced and applauded. Whether a war be justifiable or not depends upon the merits of the controversy and the thoroughness with which all pacific remedies have been tried. Great Britain, which is really the largest and strongest nation on earth, has often been at war with countries far smaller and weaker than Chili, being censured or commended according to the nature of the controversy.

The real obstacle in the way of an honorable settlement of the present difficulty is the contempt in which Chili holds the navy of the United States, and the correspondingly high opinion it entertains of its own ironclads. But all that is foreign to the real merits of the case. The Chilians, like all other semi-barbarous people, treacherous, brutal and quarrelsome. They are the bullies and swaggerers of South America. They are ignorant and vain, and their successes in conflicts with their neighbors have impressed them with the belief that they can whip the United States. Such a people know little of the usages of enlightened countries in matter of this sort, and care nothing for the considerations which govern diplomats in international controversies. They respect no appeal or demand which is not backed up by force.

ANOTHER TIN PLATE ITEM.

The Tin Plate Consumers' association, which is an association of importers and not of consumers, can find another answer to their query, "Has the price of plate advanced in consequence of the tariff?" in the news of the bankruptcy of F. C. Davenport, who, not improbably, was one of their number.

Mr. Davenport is an importer of tin plate. He believed in the free trade fiction that we should have "higher prices on account of the tariff." Believing in it, he acted upon it and bought immense quantities of Welsh plate. He expected that the increased duty, which came into effect about seven months ago, would be "added to the price." The free traders told him that it would, the protectionists told him that it would not. He believed the free traders. To-day he wishes that he had not. He has failed in the sum of $200,000 just because the price of tin plate would not advance to the American consumer; $200,000 is a small sum in the vast aggregate of our yearly trade in tin plate, but it has been enough for Mr. Davenport, and too much for his creditors.—Inter Ocean.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE, 1892

True and tried friends are always welcome, consequently "Vick's Floral Guide" is sure of a warm reception, especially when dressed as daintily as this year. The "Nellie Lewis" Carnation on the front of cover, and "Brilliant Poppies" on the back, are unusually attractive, and the numerous colored plates of flowers and vegetables, are certainly works of art and merit. The first twenty-four pages, printed in violet ink, described novelties and specialties. Send ten cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., and procure a copy of this attractive and useful catalogue. It costs nothing, as the ten cents can be deducted from the first order.

The democrats decided on the fifteenth ballot yesterday to hold the national democratic convention on the 21st of next June at Chicago.

Notice.

MAN'S SEVEN AGES.

A Modern View of the Theme Illustrated by the Great Dramatist.

"Mrs. Jones has a baby." "The deuce you say." "Fact." "Girl or boy?" "Boy." "Let's hunt up old Jonesey and make him set 'em up." So is ushered into the world Baby Jones, very red and hungry, and very much troubled with insomnia. The former grows on him, and in wearing off the latter Papa Jones loses his hair and several pounds of flesh and Mamma Jones loses some of her good looks. "Pay?" says Papa Jones in astonishment. "Do babies pay? Well, I should say they did." "Pay?" says Mamma Jones; "why, the whole world could not buy him."

And so Baby Jones becomes Willie Jones, and with his little primer and immaculate tie marches proudly to school. Thereupon the boys "christen" his new shoes by spitting on them, and they soil his white tie rolling him over in the sand. And Willie Jones cries and teacher comforts him by letting him sit on the platform and by calling his tormentors "bad boys." And they grin and look ashamed.

But Father Time keeps his scythe a-swinging, and lo! "Billy" Jones is in the high school. "Billy the kid" he is called now, and he nearly breaks his mother's heart one day because she sees him smoking a cigarette and evidently enjoying it. Billy Jones is also inclined to partake of the fruit of his neighbor's pear tree, said fruit being obtained after dark.

Will Jones is a different boy a few years after his graduation from the high school. Life has become a question of neckties and fits on clothes. He ushers strangers into seats at the Church of the Dan and Bersheba Pilgrims. He leads the German, and one day Deacon Potts is pained to see him coming out of a bucket-shop, where he has taken a floor on wheat.

William Jones aged 40 is the cashier of the Hightop National bank. Mr. Jones is known as one of the best and brainiest business men. Mrs. Jones speaks of him as Mr. Jones, or William, and Deacon Potts takes his advice on the investment of a few hundred dollars he has laid by. They talk of running him for the legislature, and the Evening Squash has boomed him for mayor. The little ones call him papa, and ran to meet him at night when he comes home.

At 60. "You know old Bill Jones? He was telling me the other day how he used to play ball where the post-office now stands. He's a jolly old fellow, I tell you. Told about helping to pitch a teacher out of the window when he was a boy, about forty or fifty years ago." Billy is a jolly old boy. Kept the company in a roar at his daughter's wedding with his queer stories. They say Bill has laid up quite a little pile in his day. Smooth old boy is Bill. He has accumulated quite a stock of experience, at any rate, and is always ready with a word of counsel if you ask his advice.

Seventy-five years old today is "Old Bill Jones," or "Old Billy Jones," as his younger friends love to call him. There is no term of reproach in familiarity unless it is used by the thoughtless or inconsiderate. His old friends have dropped by the wayside, one by one, and old Bill Jones is the last leaf on the tree. It is well ripened by time and frost, and the first breath of winter will detach him gently, and he will fall to his parent earth in sweet peace. "Old Bill Jones!" He has done his work well, and he is ready to go. He wonders if he will meet the old boys again and talk over the old days. His mind is much on his youth. He loves to recall the old associations. The old voices are in his ears. He smiles as he sees the children play.

"Hello, colonel, whose grave is this you are filling?" "William Jones', sir." "What? Old Billy Jones? Well, well. So he has gone. But he lived to a good old age. Let's see, '78 years 3 months," the stone says, don't it? That's doing pretty well in these times. Jones was a good old fellow, though. I remember hearing my father tell how Jones let him over a crisis and he never took a bit of security. He and father were great friends once. How long ago? Oh, that must have been twenty or twenty-five years back. Father's been dead eighteen years. Well, good luck to him wherever he is. Good-day."—Minneapolis Journal.

Southern Localisms.

"I have a swap for you," said a smiling southern woman to a northern acquaintance, and then to the latter's puzzled understanding the meaning of localism was unfolded. To give one a swap is to retail something complimentary received from a third person. The term is so used, apparently, because one retailing pretty speeches expects a like return; so a swap is really an exchange of compliments obtained at third hand. Another equivalent is a "tell," and the woman who learns that a friend has a tell for her expects a compliment.—N. Y. Sun.

Rhinestones.

Years are the poorest possible measure of a person's age. In the case of bad temper and dyspepsia it is an open question as to which is cause and which effect. When a man begins his remarks with the phrase, "there's no use talking," you may as well settle yourself down to listen to a long argument. When a blackberry is green it is red; it is different with a newspaper. Happiness and whiskers are two things that money cannot buy.—Indianapolis News.
