If the alliance statesmen are sincere in their loud cry that the country is on the brink of bankruptcy and poverty by reason of the exactions of the "money power," why is it that they favor large appropriations for every purpose?

The difficulty with Chili has caused the United States to look to her navy and it has developed that we have not such a poor one after all, and also shows us how quick we could have a navy that could cope with any nation on the face of the earth.

It is conceded by all people who love the American nation and its free institutions, that D. B. Hill of New York is a dangerous man. He would destroy the government if doing so would advance his own personal interests. Hill is a man the American people must never trust. Give the country Cleveland a hundred times, but Hill should be chained.—Indianola (Ia.) Herald.

LADY SOMERSET, of England, wants to get up a woman's petition against war with Chili. How many such petitions has Lady Somerset sent to the queen of England when as the head of the British government she was about to punish some of the little kingdoms and principalities of the old world for insult to her subjects or representatives? Great Britain has a very summary way of dealing with those who insult her flag. Lady Somerset had an excellent field at home for such missionary work as she is doing in America.—Inter Ocean.

We feel it our duty to say that the people of New England, in the case of Chili or any other nation, believe that the honor of our flag should be upheld, no matter at what cost. If nothing else will subdue Chili, the only thing left is to send such a force there as will overpower her at once, and finally. It will cost far more than it is worth, both in money and men, but if it must be done, then thoroughness should be the word. But in this section we do not believe that such a war is necessary. As the stronger party, we can afford to go to the utmost length of arbitration and conciliation. It will be no credit to us to whip Chili, and especially beneficial to set the example of making effort in behalf of peace. We want no war with any country, especially with our sister republics, and every effort should be made to avoid it. It will cost, in every way, far more than it will come to. Let us have peace!—Boston Advertiser.

The democrats have been calling the Fifty-first congress the "billion dollar congress." If the democrats were permitted to have their own way in the matter of appropriations, and if there were sufficient money to be had, the present national legislature might perhaps be called the "trillion dollar congress." It is said that over a thousand bills calling for the expenditure of money by the government have already been introduced by southern members or are in their pockets ready for presentation. They are for war claims by residents of the south. Many of these claims, it is understood, are based on the most frivolous sort of devices, and all call for considerable sums of money, the amounts, in some cases, running up into the millions of dollars. Doubtless before many weeks more the demands on the treasury from this source will be doubled or tripled. All sorts of claims from the southern states are to be presented this year, with the confident assurance on the part of the individuals seeking to be benefitied that these claims will be honored. This 140-majority democratic house is expected to make adequate recognition of the men who elected it, and not to examine closely into the merits or demerits of their appeals for aid. It is an "economy" congress, and it is being called upon to furnish an illustration of the democratic idea of economy by indorsing all democratic private snaps and letting the national demands and interests take care of themselves.

As the country has had abundant opportunities to learn, there is a good deal of hypocrisy and cant attached to the democratic cry for economy and reform in the national expenditures. W. S. Holman, while opposing disbursements for objects of national utility, favors and proposes expenditures for the benefit of his friends and of his locality. Democratic statesmen who vote for large sums to widen or deepen southern streams which are not to be found on the ordinary maps of that region, fight against projects to improve the great rivers or harbors of the country and oppose the adequate extension of the navy and the strengthening of the country's defenses. The country has never seen a more rapacious and unscrupulous body of legislators in the halls of congress than the bulk of the democratic members of the present house of representatives. Among them there are many new men who feel that they will never be elected again, and are determined to make full use of the present opportunity and gain all that can be had for their friends and their neighborhood. Many of the older members of the party, too, see that democratic preponderance is threatened, and they are not all reluctant to make hay while the sun shines. This is a good time for the republican members to keep their eyes on the democratic project to raid the treasury. The republicans should adopt the Pinckney motto with the required change of words, and declare in favor of "millions for the national interests, but not a cent for private jobbery."—Globe Democrat.

THE Chilians ask the recall of Minister Egan and also ask for six weeks more time to say whether they will make reparation for the assault on the sailors of the Baltimore or not. President Harrison fully approves the course of Mr. Egan and it is doubtful if he is recalled, although it is thought he will come home till the trouble is settled.

La Grippe.
No healthy person need fear any dangerous consequences from an attack of la grippe if properly treated. It is much the same as a severe cold and requires precisely the same treatment. Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed for a severe cold and a prompt and complete recovery is sure to follow. This remedy also counteracts any tendency of la grippe to result in pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it during the epidemics of the past two years we have yet to learn of a single case that has not recovered or that has resulted in pneumonia. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by F. Newly Married People Try a Novel Experiment with Poor Success.

When the train pulled into the way station the young woman was standing on the platform surrounded by several other young women, who were all talking at once, says the Brandon Buckshaw. The young man stood a short distance away, holding a big valise.
"Hop on there Maria!" he cried out.
"Don't be all day about it."
Every girl in the crowd, with the exception of the one addressed, exclaimed, "Oh!" and looked as though something dreadful had happened. She retorted:

"Hop on yourself if you want to, I'm coming."
The other girls said "Oh!" again and the young man got on the train. Then he called out again:
"Can't you get a move on you, Maria? You'll talk the arm off some one."
"I'll come when I get ready, Jacob!" she returned.
Then she hastily kissed the girls good-bye and boarded the train, while they retired to a corner of the station and held a whispered conference over something that seemed to trouble them.

"Hop down there!" he said, as they came to a double seat. "You don't mind riding backward, and it bothers me."
She sat down and he put a big valise on the seat beside her, and then settled himself comfortably on the other seat, while the old lady two seats behind exclaimed, "Well, I never!" and some one muttered "The brute!"

For fifteen minutes after the train started he pretended to be reading a newspaper and she was looking out of the window. But every minute or two he glanced at her over the top of his paper and her gaze frequently rested on his face.

And she seemed to be proud of him. Suddenly she turned toward him with the exclamation:
"Jacob, do you need every paper in this car?"
He threw her over one he had in his lap.

"I wonder you didn't think of it before," she said.
"You're able to speak if you want anything!" he returned. "You've got a tongue."
There were more comments from various portions of the car, and every eye was fixed on him or the young woman who was looking slyly over the top of her paper. He threw his down.

"Maria," he said, "they've sized us up! We can't fool 'em, and there's no use trying."
"Perhaps we overdid it, Jacob."
"Perhaps we did," he said; "but this is better anyway."

Then he kicked the paper into the aisle, and they carried on a whispered conversation for ninety miles.

On the Judge's Side.
A story is told of a well-known Judge who is noted for his fondness for conveying to jurors in his charges to them his own opinions with regard to the merits of the case. In one case he had done so with great plainness, but to his amazement the jury remained out for hours without coming to an agreement. The Judge inquired of the officer what was the matter, and learned from him that one juror was holding out against the other eleven. He sent for the juror at once, and, stating to the jurors that he had plainly intimated how the case ought to be decided, said he understood that one juror was standing out against the other eleven. He proceeded to rebuke the juror sharply.

"The obstinate juror was a nervous little man, and as soon as the Judge was done he said: 'Your Honor, may I say a word?'"
"Yes, sir," said the indignant Judge: "what have you to say?"
"Well, what I wanted to say is, I am the only fellow that's on your side."—The Comic.

Cows Wearing Blue Spectacles.
Deacon Green says he has never happened to meet with one of this special breed of Bostonian cows, but he has placed upon my pulpit an extract from a letter, which he thinks is well worth reading to you, my beloved:
During the past year thousands of cows in Russia have been seen wearing blue spectacles! Yes, blue glass was obtained from Vienna, Paris and London for the purpose, because Vienna alone could not supply the quantity required.

It must have been a funny sight. But it was not funny to the cows. They, poor things, had suffered so much from the blinding effect of light upon the snow that their eyes became diseased, and, to help them, the experiment of making them wear blue spectacles was tried, and with good results, I am told.

So you see some kinds of animals are kindly cared for in that far land of the Czar.—St. Nicholas.

Was a Vassar Girl.
Old lady—No use talkin'. I used to say this higher education of gals was all foledder; but I see I was wrong. There's my granddarter, for instance. She's just a wonder.
Friend—I understand she graduated with high honors.
Old lady—Yes, graduated from Vassar, and she kin do what neither her mother nor me could ever hope to do if our lives depended on it.
Friend—Indeed! And what is that?
Old lady—She kin tell the time a train is goin' to start by lookin' at a railway guide.—Religio-Philosophical Journal.
