I REMEMBER one incident of my father's indulgence, writes Horace Greeley's daughter in an article on "My Father's Home Life," in the February Ladies' Home Journal. One day he brought home an umbrella with a wooden dog's head as a handle. My covetous little heart proceeded to set itself upon that canine effigy. In vain papa offered me a whole dog. But I pleaded that no other head in the world would be like that head, and the result was he sawed it off and went back to town with a handleless umbrella.

FOREIGN WOOLS CHEAPER.

The London correspondent of the Boston Journal of Commerce says of the wool market there:

"The fifth and last series of Colonial wool sales for the present year terminated on the 15th inst. The outcome of these sales is an average decline of about 7 per cent in the value of Colonial wool, reducing prices to a lower level than has prevailed at any time since the spring of 1876. In considering the causes in the depreciation of values, while not underestimating the bad effect of the McKinley tariff other factors, undoubtedly the principal reason is the enormous quantity of wool imported into this country. In 1867 the production of Colonial wool first passed half a million bales; in 1879, twelve years later, it reached a million, and now this year, after a lapse of twelve years, it has risen to two million bales, thus doubling in each twelve years."

"GOOD MORNING."

"Good morning; fine day." Generally, throughout the country the morning and days are very fine, but there is a lurking mischief behind these blandishments of the season which it will be well to watch and provide against. It comes like a thief in the night, stealthily, and it is numbering its victims by the thousands. Men are careless or indifferent. It is so pleasant to be out in the air. But it must be remembered that the air is charged with excessive moisture, which penetrates and chills. The grip has become so epidemic that whole communities are prostrated. A peculiar feature of the malady is that all so affected have rheumatic aches and pains, stiffness and soreness of the muscles and acute misery in the joints. All these symptoms indicate what ought to be done to prevent and cure. One good rubbing with St. Jacob's Oil, in time, will so strengthen and soothe that no further trouble will be had. In all rheumatic complaints, whether transient or chronic for years, in every form of pain, mild or violent, it is the best remedy of the age.

GIVE BENJAMIN HARRISON HIS DUE.

In all the great matters of administration the president's ability, sagacity, and wisdom are unquestioned within his own party and admitted by many of the leaders of the opposition. The contemptuous slur of "grand father's hat" has lost its point, if it ever had any, and is no longer indulged in by anybody except by those who have some personal pique or ill concealed sore.

In fact, the observant and thoughtful recognize that the president has demonstrated that he has brains more than sufficient to fill the largest sized hat in the country. Many who were disposed to underrate his ability now place him in the foremost rank among our great statesmen, Mr. Blaine, according to Secretary Foster, has said that he is "the ablest president since Lincoln." Senator Spooner, the brilliant statesman of the northwest, says President Harrison "makes one of the ablest executives because there is not one of the great departments of the government that he could not take charge of and manage as well, or perhaps better, than any one else.

Without any disparagement of the great abilities of Mr. Blaine in the management of the extremely difficult and delicate questions growing out of our foreign relations in the judgment of those best informed, the president has shown wisdom, ability and tact unrivaled in our diplomatic history. Owing to the sickness of Mr. Blaine and his long absence from duty the consideration of these questions, the negotiation of the reciprocity treaties, and in fact all important matters usually confided to the secretary of state, have largely devolved upon the president and have been conducted by him with consummate skill. It remains to be seen how the trouble with Chili will be settled, whether by peaceful arbitration or at the cannon's mouth, but we venture to predict that when the correspondence is laid before congress it will be found that the president's wisdom, sagacity and prudence have maintained the dignity and honor of the nation and aded increased luster to his administration. The masses of the people judge the president not by what disappointed office-seekers may say of him, but by what he has done in the higher domain of statesmanship for the public good and the enhancement of the glory of the country and its flag.

The president submitted his message on the Chilean affair to congress yesterday. It contains all of the correspondence and shows that insult was added to injury. The president highly indorses Mr. Egan and the result lies now with congress whether we have war or not.

The Lesson Not Lost on Him.

He settled himself back in his chair with a self-satisfied air and said: "Things have changed some since we were married, haven't they, Mary?" "A great deal, Joe," she replied quietly. "The first year was pretty hard," he went on. "I didn't make any more than enough to pull us through. But I told you then I'd get up, and I have." "Yes," she admitted, "you have. You've made it much easier for me financially."

"And I've worked hard to do it," he said, with some pride. "I've practically worked night and day." "See nodded, and he continued: "I'll do better yet, Mary. I'll have you even more comfortable than now." "You will if you keep on working as you have worked," she said, "but—"

"But what, Mary?" "I've sometimes wondered, Joe," with a faint smile, "if you quite understood the clergyman."

"The—why, Mary?" "The clergyman who married us."

"Why, what have I done?" he asked suddenly, straightening up in his chair. "Nothing wrong, I suppose, Joe," she replied in the same quiet way, "but it has seemed sometimes—just a fancy of mine, perhaps—it has seemed as though you had married the office. It seems more of you than—than—"

She stopped. It wasn't necessary to say more. It was only necessary to kiss him to show that it was not in a purely fault-finding spirit that she spoke, and she did that. And the lesson that money—well, the lesson was not lost on him—Chicago Tribune.

The Boston for It.

She was a dainty Boston lass with a soul above pork and beans and vocabulary above the ordinary, and she carried them both into a Woodward avenue restaurant with her. "Waiter," she added, after giving her order, "bring me also a few tuberculous fungi." "A few tuberculous fungi," she repeated with a supercilious elevation of her eyebrows. "What's them, mum?" inquired the waiter, helplessly. "This time she looked positively severe, yet withal pitying. "They are a species of morbid extravasation of vegetable sugars analogous to oak-balls or nut-galls, doubtless originating as these latter from the sting of some of the insectivorous family," she explained, lucidly. The waiter was paralyzed. "What's the matter with you?" interposed his partner at the next table, coming to the rescue. "The young lady wants truffles. You had ought to be raised in Boston, like I was." The customer was served properly. —Detroit Free Press
