MY ASTRAL BODY.

"There's no doubt at all about it," said the rajah, relighting his cigar. "It's perfectly easy, if you know how is nothing less than disgusting."

The rajah had come to Oxford to self with the culture of Europe; and he sat in my rooms, in a frock coat of per- and he passed on leaving me standing feet cut (he always wore a frock coat), in the rain. What had happened? smoking one of my weeds and drinking whisky and soda. The rajah took | understood its threats. It had proto European culture with avidity, and | jected me! I have very little doubt that he learned many new things with which it might or might not be expedient to acquaint his fellow countrymen and subjects when he returned to India. But all the intellectual interests of Oxford were not strong enough to wean him from his love for the ancient lore of his own country, and he was always ready to expound the hidden wisdom of the East to any inquiring spirit. As soon as I found this out I cultivated his acquaintance sedulously; for, in common with all intelligent men of the present day, I took a keen interest in that strange learning which seemed to give its possessors such extraordinary powers.

"Can you do it?" I asked. "I should hope so," said the rajah contemptuously. "If I could do that I'd turn mohammedan." "I wish you'd teach me."

The rajah took in a deep puff of smoke.

"You're sure you could manage it?" he asked. "I beg your pardon?"

"Well, of course, like anything else. an astral body must be treated with tact, or it gets out of hand." "Does it?"

"Why, yes: you must be firm and yet kind. Don't let it take liberties, or you don't know where it will land you. I rather doubt if I ought to show you?"

I implored him to do so. I was young, rash, self - confident, and I could manage an astrai body as easily as I did the dean.

"Don't blame me if you find it too much for you, that's all," said the rajah. "And of course you must promise not to tell any one."

"Oh, must I?" "Yes, you must; because it is quite irregular in me to show you like this. You ought by rights, you know, to go to Thibet for seven years." "That would be rather a bore." "Beastly," said the rajah; "but of course they insist on it, because they get the fees." He swore me to secreey by all manner of eaths and lastly on my word as a gentleman and then showed me. I practiced all that evening and was tolerably proficient by the time the rajah knocked out his last pipe and went to bed. I must not tell how it is done, as I promised not to; besides, if any one reads this narrative through he will never want to know. At first it was very convenient.

always used to project it to chapel instead of going myself. It did capitally there, because it had only to behave itself and hold its tongue. At lectures it was a failure: it was such an inattentive beggar that its notes were worth nothing. And it was no sort of use in the torpid; I was told that I should be turned out if I went on "sugaring" like that there's no plack or endurance in these orientals. On the whole, however, I was very well satis-Sed with it, and came to rely on it more and more for all the unpleasant duties of life. "Well, how do you like it?" asked her. the raish one day in Quad.

"My dear fellow, it's splendid," I answered. "It's up in nown being measured for tensors now. You can't think how much trouble it saves."

"Will it? What will it do?" "Why, if it's always being projected, it's as likely as not it'll learn the trick of it and take to projecting itself. Then you'll be left in the lurch." "What shall I do then?"

"I don't see what you can do?" said the rajah, scratching his head. "Of course, I should merely report at headquarters; but you can't, because you've Tal apologetically. "I'm demonstrat-

"I ought to have a little relaxation," it answered sulkily. "I never heard of such a thing in connection with you. Isn't it enough for you to meditate in four dimensions when you're not at work? That would satisfy most people."

"It's all very well in Thibet," it grumble I; "but a follow doesn't come to Oxford to do that," "One would think you had nothing to do with mes. You seem to forget that you are simply a projection of We had some high words and parted -I mean united—in very bad temper with one another. It was in the middle of a most impertinent and positively threatening speech when I terminated the interview by resuming it. It was very unreasonable and irritating and I made up my mind to ask the rajah to speak to it the next morning. I had an engagement that evening or I would have done it then. How I wish I had!

At 9:30 I went to an "at home," at Professor Drayton's. As a rule "at homes" are dull; but I had a reason for going to this one. The professor had a very pretty daughter, and I was vain enough to think that my presence was welcome to her. In fact, we were great friends, and I had not been at the house a quarter of an hour before I had forgotton all my worries with my unruly Astral Body, and was sitting by Bessie in the small drawing-room, enjoying myself immensely. Sudden-ly-mysteriously - I felt something like a violent push. Bessie vanished, the drawing-room vanished, and I found myself in the High, standing in to do it. The skepticism of the West the dripping rain without a hat or coat. I stood still in bewilderment. What had happened? A moment later complete his education and endow him- the proctor was upon me. I gave my name and college in a mechanical way Then it flashed across my mind. I

П.

I woke up next morning determined to have it out with it. I found, as I expected, that it had waited till I was asleep, then it slunk in and united without my knowing it. I went and paid my fine, and then, not waiting to breakfast, I proceeded to project it. It wouldn't move! I tried it again and again. I had no more power over it than a child. I knew it was there, but I could not move it an inch. In wrath I jumped up, seized my cap, and started for the rajah's rooms. The rogue saw what I was up to. I give you my word I had not reached the door when it projected me most viciously and I landed down in the parks.

My only chance was to engross its attention in some way so that it would forget me for a little while and leave and it had actually left me in peace ever since breakfast. I hoped its better feelings were beginning to get the mastery of it, and, in order to see, I Suddenly I saw Bessie Drayton just in front of me. In delight at seeing her I forgot about it, and, quickening my pace, overtook her, and lifted my hat. She smiled divinely, saying: "Why, Mr. Nares, I was just going to write--" At that moment when I was listening to her sweet voice, it projected me! Could ill-nature go further? But luckily its mind was not really concentrated on what it was doing. believe it was thinking of Bessie, and consequently it only carried me about one hundred yards. I landed behind one of the big elms, where I lay perdu till it had gone by. It and Bessie passed me together, and it was grinning from ear to ear and looking as pleased as Punch. And poor Bessie, who thought she was talking to me, was being most charming to it.

I did not waste time in swearing. I ran like the wind back to college, hoping that Bessie's society would prevent it coming after me till I had spoken to the rajah. I still retained one pull over it. In order to unite it had to come where I was; it could not resume me from a distance as I used to resume it; so if it united now it would have to leave Bessie.

By a blessed chance the rajah was at home, and in trembling haste I poured my story into his ear. He burst out laughing.

"I was afraid of it!" he gasped, holding his sides. "How splendid!"

I restrained my annoyance and after a time he became a little more grave. "Do help me!" I urged. "It may unite at any moment and project me the deuce knows where." "Oh, it'll be all right with the young lady. "Not for long. She's very particular, and won't let it walk far with

"Oh, then we must act. You don't feel it yet?"

"No, but do be quick!" The rajah sported his oak, took off his coat, lay down on the floor, and went into strong convulsions. I regretted putting kim to so much trouble; but my need was argent, and I knew he not use it too much or it'll presume on | was a good-natured man. Presently he cried (and I was just getting alarm-

"My friend couldn't go to Thibet." "He might have paid the fees, anyhow," grumbled Nani-Tal, "and taken correspondence lessons."

We soothed him down with the premise of a handsome donation, and at last he consented to help us. It was only just in time, for at that very moment I felt my astral body uniting. A project me. Of course it saw Nani-Tal and knew it was in tor it. The old gentleman was too quick for it.

"Come out of that!" he cried imperiously, and the wretch stood in the middle of the room.

It did my heart good to hear Nani-Tal fall on the creature. And after giving it no end of a lecture, he concluded: "And now, young man, you'll sand years and learn better manners."

"Be off!" The creature vanished. Simultaneously Nani-Tal began to disintegrate.

"Wait a bit!" cried the rajah. "I can't. I'm summoned to St. James' Hall. There's a large audience and the professor has been in convulsions seven minutes."

I tried to grasp his hand in thanks. "If you want, another you must go through the course-the full course. There's no other way. Let this be a remark he disintegrated.

The rajah lit a cigar, and I, lighter at heart than I had been for many days, followed his example. "It was wrong of me," said the rajah.

"I won't do it again." "It's a pity it turned out so badly." I remarked; "it was quite a comfort at An Anecdote of Professor Stowe.

Calvin E. Stowe was a man of mark in college, and was universally esteemed and respected. He was an untiring student and a deeply religious man, yet full of wit and quaint humor, which he strove to subordinate to his graver thoughts, that he might the better qualify for the important life-

No, it wouldn't deference belitting a colored mes-move! The creature was still recalsenger-boy, I entered Stowe's room holding out a letter. He was deeply engaged with a book, but he rose to receive the letter, remarking, "Oh. it is from Mr—," at the same time taking out a piece of money to pay me for my trouble. This unexpected boon so upset my gravity that I laughed outright. Stowe was first surprised, then provoked, by my impertinence, and he seized the tongs and cried, "You black rascal!" Whereupon I beat a hasty retreat, closing the door behind me just in time to escape the tongs which I think that Stowe did not suspect me, for we never spoke of the silly prank for more than tifty years. But after that long interval, having received a kind message from him, asking me not to pass through Hartford without calling, I went to see him, and we had a pleasant talk about old times. Then I made my tardy confession, to which Mrs. Stowe was an amused listener, and she seemed to enjoy hearing this proof of her husband's ebullition of temper in his early manhood, which I thought it safe to divulge after the lapse of so many years .- Horace Bridge, U. S. N., in Harper's Magazine.

Mind's Mysterious Workings.

In the Marchioness of Dufferin's Canadian Journal there is an account of one of those "coincidences" which Dr. Weatherly is at much pains to explain away:

You remember that I told you that a poor man servant of ours was drowned at the Mingan. As we knew not about his people we were make to communicate the news of his death to them, so D. ordered any letters that might arrive for him to be brought to himself. The first of these-which we have just received-was from a servant girl to whom he was attached at Ottawa, and was dated exactly seven days after the accident. In it she said: "I have been in my new place a week and I like it very much, but I had such a dreadful dream on the day of my arrival. I dreamt that you and Nowell were upset in a boat together, and that Nowell was saved, but you were drowned." As the spot is in an uninhabited region on the coast of Labrador, more than five hundred miles from Ottawa, without either telegraph or posts, it was impossible that she should have received the news of her lover's death when this letter was written.
