I feel it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it more or less half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since I was a little boy and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do even that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Great Surprise. Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the throat and lungs the great guaranteed remedy. Advice to Girls.

Don't conclude that a man is a gentleman because he has the manners of one. Don't think because a man is a graceful and interesting talker that he is everything else. Don't fail to take a man at his word when he says he is poor. Don't be familiar with men, and don't permit familiarities from them. Don't think because a man likes you that he wants to marry you. Don't think that a man is not in love with you because he has not proposed to you. Don't be silly about the men. Don't be rude to a man in order to show your independence. Don't let a man impose upon you simply because he is a man. Don't believe everything a man tells you, either about himself or yourself. Detroit Free Press.

Why He Couldn't Believe It.

"Talking about snakes," he began. No one had said a word about snakes, but he thought it about time to spin a yarn. "Talking about snakes, there was a man down in our township—" "You know him?" interrupted his companion. "Certainly I knew him." "I thought so. He was a truthful man, too." "George Washington wasn't a circumstance to him." "I knew it. Go on with your story." "Well, sir, one day he was out on the marsh and he saw a snake that—" "Told you about it himself, didn't he?" "With his own lips. Now that snake—" "Pardon me! He isn't a drinking man, is he?" "No, sir." "Never touched a drop of liquor in his life, did he?" "Never since he was born." "I thought not. Say! did you ever hear of a snake story being told by a drinking man?" "Um, well—" "Did you ever hear of a real good one that wasn't told originally by a man who never drank a drop in his life?" "Why, now you speak of it—" "A strictly temperance man is always willing to make an affidavit to the truth of it. Bring me one verified by a drinking man some time and I'll take some stock in it."

ANY AMOUNT OF FUN.

But His Dad Licked Him for It, Coolly, but Thoroughly. Old Sam Johnson, who lives down in a Kennebec county town, is about the sourest and most straitlaced fellow you ever saw, says the Lewiston Journal.

The other day he heard an awful clatter out on a long hill near his house. He got out to the scene just in time to see his son Jed mount the ox cart, hold up the tongue and coast down the hill with a thunderous roar and a cloud of dust. The old man started on the trail down the hill, picking up a club on the way and yelling for Jed to come back and take a licking. But the nearer he got to the trembling Jed the more the real novelty and humor appealed to him. When he got to the foot of the hill he was grinning like a "chessy cat," as Jed afterward declared.

"What in tarnation you doin' with that ox cart, Jed?" "By gorry, dad, I'm a-slidin' down hill in er, dad; and it's more fun 'an de Injuns. Jest help me toost 'er up hill and take a ride," said Jed, taking courage from his father's grin. "You sassy imp," sputtered Sam; "I'm a good mind to welt you."

"Oh, dad, come on; it's slathers of fun." "Not by a darned shot! And 'sides, some one may see me." "Git out; they won't neither. Take hold here an' we'll run 'er up hill."

The old man couldn't resist. Chuckling, he helped push the cart up hill; chuckling still, he crawled in, and he tittered as he told Jed to "hold tight an' steer straight."

Away they went. But they had just got under headway when a team came jogging around a bend in the road at the foot of the hill. The old ox cart roared down in its headlong rush. A wicked smash-up seemed imminent. The frightened Jed, bewildered by a volley of squawks and yells, yanked the tongue about, and the flying cart sheered for the fields. It careered wildly, hopped the highway gutter, crashed over a stone wall and came to a wrecked standstill, bottom upward. Jed and the old man were beneath.

It was six weeks before Johnson got the crack out of his back and recovered the use of his battered members. His first duty at the end of those six weeks was to lick Jed, not passionately or intemperately, but thoroughly, conscientiously, earnestly, according to a carefully matured plan and determination.

LEFT HIS VOICE BEHIND.

It Fell on the Floor, but He Ficked It Up Good as Ever.

The curtain was down, the house was empty, the last few patrons were struggling out of the California Theatre, and all the lights were out. Chief Usher Williams was coming down the main staircase when a figure darted past him in the gloom, says the San Francisco Examiner.

"Where are you going?" he called, and he grabbed the stranger by the coat tails.

The man struggled madly, but never uttered a sound. "Where in thunder are you going to?" again asked Williams. "Don't you know the show is over and we're locking up the house?" And he dragged the man down a few steps into the light of the lobby.

Meanwhile the intruder gesticulated wildly; his eyes rolled like marbles and he hissed at Williams like a snake. Suddenly he bent over to the usher. "I lost my voice," said he in an almost inaudible whisper; "left it upstairs. Goin' up ter find it!" Williams gaped in amazement, let go his grip on the man and followed him up-stairs.

After a few moments' rummaging among the seats the stranger stooped down and picked up something. "Found your voice yet?" called Williams. "Yes, I'm all right now." The chief usher nearly dropped. The voiceless stranger spoke with all the metallic resonance of a bassoon. "What the dickens is your voice made of, anyhow?" he asked, as he piloted the stranger down-stairs.

"Silver," replied he in the same stentorian tone. "See; here it is. I must have jerked it out with laughing, and I never missed it till I got outside."

He pointed at an office at the side of his throat. The metal lips of a canula were gleaming there. Without the metal tube he was silent as the mummy of Iphigeneis II. of Egypt.

Didn't Wait to Be Discharged.

"There was a mistake in that last order that Sellers sent in from the road," said the proprietor, scowling at one of the clerks.

"Was there?" asked the clerk carelessly. "Yes, sir, there was, and it wasn't corrected."

"No?" said the clerk pleasantly. "No. You shipped the goods according to that blamed fool order."

"Why, of course. I supposed that Sellers—" "You've no right to suppose anything of the sort!" exclaimed the proprietor. "He makes more mistakes than any man on the road."

"He does?" asked the clerk. "Certainly he does. He's one of the most careless men I ever knew."

"And I'm supposed to correct them?" "Of course you are."

"I'm supposed to be absolutely accurate?" "Certainly." "And know all about his business?" "You should detect his errors."

"Well, why don't you pay me for it?" "What?" The clerk dropped his pen in his excitement. "Look here!" he said. "You hold me responsible for his errors, and you pay him more for making them than you do me for correcting them. Good day!" He left without waiting to be discharged.—Chicago Tribune.

Slangy Australian Girls.

An Australian writer deprecates the use of slang by the girls of Victoria. If he is to be believed, "Take the cake" is not strong enough for them and they say, "Yank the bun." He even understands that in the critical moment when a gentleman asked one of these ladies to be his wife she replied, "You bet your life I will."

Sunset Cox in 1850.

"The first time I ever saw Samuel Sullivan Cox, known as Sunset Cox was in 1850," said Thomas Ruick to a St. Louis Chronicle reporter.

"I was then superintendent of bridges on the national turnpike in Ohio and Cox was making a tour of taverns on the road delivering political speeches. "The turnpike in those days was the great highway between the East and the West. It was thronged night and day with teams from every part of Ohio, and country taverns with big wagon yards, were located ten miles apart."

"Every night these taverns were crowded with teamsters and travelers and Cox spoke at every one of them, beginning at the Indiana line and ending at the Pennsylvania border."

"Mr. Cox was a young slip of a fellow with real dandy ways, but his speeches were so inexpressibly funny that he captured the hearts of the rough teamsters, who carried his fame to every part of the state, and as long as he lived they were always his solid friends."

"Ex-Governor Allen once made a tour of those taverns and made friends that stood by him for years, and I have no doubt but that influence still existed and aided in electing him governor thirty years later."

A Dog That Tells the Hours.

Col. F. N. Barksdale of the Passenger Department of the Pennsylvania railroad has a dog that can tell the time of the day. Col. Barksdale has a very fine clock that strikes only on the hour and then very slowly. The Col. got into the way of making the dog tap with his foot at each stroke of the clock. He got so he would do so without being told. Just before the clock strikes it gives a little cluck, and whenever the dog heard this he would prick up his ears, raise his paw and gently tap his paw at each strike without being told. After awhile he got so that when anyone clucked like the clock he would get into position and wait for the strokes. He was for a long time confused at not hearing the clock, but after awhile began tapping his paw anyway. The remarkable point is that after a while he remembered how many strokes were due at each succeeding hour, so that now when the Colonel clucks he gets into position and taps the number of strokes the clock should make next time. Thus, at any time after 10 o'clock he taps eleven times; after 4 o'clock, five times, etc. Some learned scientists are going to investigate the matter to see whether the dog actually possesses reasoning faculties. Col. Barksdale will not part with the dog under any conditions.—Bellfonte (Pa.) News.

Too Old to Be Interested.

Not long ago, in a public school examination, an eccentric examiner demanded:

"What views would King Alfred take of universal suffrage, the conscription and printed books if he were living now?"

A pupil wrote in answer. "If King Alfred were still alive he would be too old to take any interest in anything."—London Figaro.

A Fatal Mistake.

Physicians make no more fatal mistake than when they inform patients that nervous heart troubles come from the stomach and are of little consequence. Dr. Franklin Miles, the noted Indiana specialist, has proven the contrary in his new book on "Heart Disease" which may be had free of F. G. Fricke & Co., who guarantee and recommend Dr. Miles' unequalled New Heart Cure, which has the largest sale of any heart remedy in the world. It cures nervous and organic heart disease, short breath, fluttering, pain or tenderness in the side, arm or shoulder, irregular pulse, fainting, smothering, drowsy, etc. His Restorative Nervine cures headache, fits, etc.

It Should be in Every House.

J. B. Wilson, 371 Clay St., Sharpsburg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with Pneumonia after an attack of "La Grippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber, of Cocksport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for Lung Trouble. Nothing like it. Try it Free trial bottles at F. G. Fricke & Co's drugstore. Large bottle, 50c, and $1.00.

The girl's industrial school building at Geneva is well along toward completion, and is said to be admirably arranged for its purpose.

A Mystery Explained.

The papers contain frequent notices of rich, pretty and educated girls eloping with negroes, tramps and coachmen. The well-known specialist, Dr. Franklin Miles, says all such girls are more or less hysterical, nervous, very impulsive, unbalanced; usually subject to neuralgia, neuralgia, sleeplessness, immoderate crying or laughing. These show a weak, nervous system for which there is no remedy equal to Restorative Nervine. Trial bottles and a fine book, containing many marvelous cures, free at F. G. Fricke & Co's, who also sell and guarantee Dr. Miles' celebrated New Heart Cure, the finest of heart tonics. Cures fluttering, short breath, etc.
