Notice.

The republican county central committee of Cass county Neb., is hereby called to meet at Weeping Water on Saturday March 26th at 1 o'clock p. m. Important business will come before the meeting and a full attendance is earnestly requested.

ORLANDO TEFFT, Chairman.

A. L. TIMBLIN, Secretary.

A. J. GRAVES will be the new councilman from the Fifth ward.

G. Longenhagen of the First ward will be a councilman after election.

WHILE Hill is down south, Grover Cleveland is busy making hay in the northern states.

UNCLE SAM has concluded that if England does not help to abolish the seal poachers he will do it himself.

F. H. Stenkier, of the Third ward, will be elected to be a member of the council by a handsome majority.

THE Democrats put up a good ticket last night, but the republicans will put up a better one to-night.

JOE LAKE, of the Fourth ward, will make a number one councilman and the republicans of that ward will see that he is elected.

HILL is not in the south duck hunting and fishing or for his health. He is after delegates, and he is getting them, but he is losing in the north.

THE report comes now that the south will be almost solid for Hill, because he holds that the democrats should have the office whether they carry the election or not.

ROGER Q. MILLS says he is "certain" to be chosen to the senatorship, and he is probably correct in this prediction, but it should be remembered that he was, three or four months ago, just as "certain" of gaining the speaker-ship.

OUR NEW DIPLOMATIC ERA.

The number of international complications which the country has figured in in the past three years has been altogether without a precedent in an era of peace. We have had trouble with Germany in the Samoa affair, with Italy in the New Orleans lynching, with Chile in the Valparaiso murder cases and with England in the Behring Sea matter. The latter question, it is true, comes to us from the Cleveland regime, but it has taken on its most alarming phases during the days of the present administration, and into one of them the question has again entered. Disputes with Great Britain, indeed, were common enough in the past. They occurred several times between the close of the war of 1812 and the beginning of the civil conflict. In those days, however, they were concerned with the boundary question between this country and Canada chiefly, and excited but little interest anywhere except in the two countries immediately affected. The controversy in the Behring Sea affair, however, is outside the line of all previous disputes between these countries, and the audience which it attracts is more extended than any which was ever called together by a discussion in which the United States was ever a participant. In the Samoa affair, also, this country appeared in a new role, and it was brought, in diplomacy, into collision with a nation with whose interests and ambitions hitherto ours never clashed.

Indeed, a new diplomatic epoch has opened for the country. The circle of its interests and activities has immensely broadened within the past few years, and the old era of seclusion and separation has closed. Our home industries and enterprises no longer completely monopolize our energies. A field for our talent and capital outside our own borders is being sought, and the quest is being pushed with intelligence and vigor. We will thus touch the current of the life of the rest of the world more closely than before and at more points. The new conditions, of course, will give rise to new issues and precipitate complications and controversies which would have been impossible in our old state. As these are the inevitable consequence of the altered circumstances we must try to meet the requirements of the situation. Our old policy of avoiding alliances with foreign nations must be adhered to. Europe will be required to keep its hands off this continent, and we will refrain from interference in Europe's combinations and quarrels. Our commercial conquests in the western hemisphere and in the rest of the world will often bring us into collision with other nations, but in such cases our well-known freedom from ambition toward further territorial absorption will do much to disarm outside hostility toward us. But in any event the new diplomatic period which we have entered is full of perplexities and perils, and the situation demands a forbearance, a sagacity and a tact which will call out all the resources of our statesmen and executives. -Globe-Democrat.

YOUNG BRYAN had a little sheep:

Its wool was white as fleece;
It got into the house one day,
To hear him speak a piece.
Alas! poor thing, a foolish break -
It gave offense most sore;
He talked the wool all off its back
And strewed it on the floor.
He lambled that sheep for one full hour,
Oh! bold and brave was he;
And when he yielded up the floor
He'd talked for full hours three.

Gentlemen would not use "Blush of Roses" if it was a paint or powder, of course not. It is clear as water, no sediment to fill the pores of the skin. Its mission is to heal, cleanse and purify the complexion of every imperfection, and insures every lady and gentleman a clean, smooth complexion. Sold by O. H. Snyder. Price 75 cents.

New Washington Penn. People

Are not slow about taking hold of a new thing, if the article has merit. A few months ago David Byers, of that place, bought his first stock of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has sold it all and ordered more. He says: "It has given the best of satisfaction. I have warranted every bottle and have not had one come back." 25 cent, 50 cent, and $1.00 bottles for sale by F. G. Gricke & Co., druggists.

Some Foolish People

allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They say "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c and $1. Trial size free. At all druggists.

LORE ABOUT HORNS.

Facts About the Horned Lizard, Horned Animals Carry on their Heads.

"There are a good many queer things to be told about horns," said Orestes Estlin to a Washington reporter. "Take the horn of the rhinoceros, for example. It is a thing more than a mere protuberance of the forehead. You cut it in two and, examining its structure under the microscope, you find that it is made up entirely of little tubes resembling hair tubes. Of course tubes are not themselves hairs, but the structure is the same. The horns of the African rhinoceros sometimes grow to the length of four feet. From them the Dutch Boers make ramrods and other articles. You may remember that the handle of the ax used by Umslopogais in 'Allan Quatermain' was a rhinoceros horn. In old times rhinoceros horns were employed for drinking cups by royal personages, the notion being that poison put into them would show itself by bubbling. There may have been some truth in the idea, inasmuch as many of the ancient poisons were acids and they would decompose the horny material very quickly.

"Several species of rhinoceros, now extinct and only found in a fossil state, used to exist which had no horns at all. The name, meaning as it does 'horned nose,' is rather a misnomer in their case. Several kinds of rhinoceros in Africa have two horns, one behind the other, but the extinct rhinoceros, known as the dyceratherium, had a pair of horns on its nose side by side. Many of the giant reptiles of long ago had enormous horns. The great lizard known as the triceratops had a big horn over each eye and a little one on its nose. The dinosaurs and the gigantic mammals of the tertiary epoch, had three pairs of prominent horns on their heads which are believed to have supported horns. However, the material of which horn is composed quickly decays, being largely composed of gelatine and other animal matter, so that these appendages are apt to be found absent when the fossil bones of beasts which had them are found.

"Some fishes have horns which are actually outgrowths of bone on their heads. The box-fish which inhabits the warm waters of the globe—a little fellow six or eight inches long—has horns an inch in length. Birds have horns also sometimes. The horned screamer, which is related to the duck, has a single horn attached to its skull, springing from a cartilaginous base and curving upward. It is really a modified feather, though a true horn.

"Plenty of reptiles have horns. Lizards are very commonly provided with them. There are chameleons with three horns, like the ancient triceratops. Horned toads have a sort of crest of four horns on the back of their heads. There is a small African snake which has two horns. No horned tortoises now exist, but a fossil specimen was found awhile ago on Lord Howe's island in the southern Pacific, which had four horns on its crest and resembled a cross between a horned toad and a snapping turtle. Doubtless you have often heard of human beings with horns. Such appendages in their case are abnormal developments of bone.

AN ANCIENT IDOL.

The Modest Clay Deity of the Early American Heathen.

The State Historical Society was enriched yesterday by an image of pottery supposed to be an idol of some prehistoric race, probably the mound builders, says the Topeka Capital. The idol was found near Aron, Independence County, Arkansas, and was dug from a mound by relic hunters along with a number of decayed human bones, copper arrow heads and broken domestic utensils. It is the property of G. W. Hume, of Strasburg, Mo. The idol is seven inches in height by five inches in diameter. It is rudely constructed, having evidently been formed by hand, or at best very crude tools, from common clay, and afterward hardened by being dried in the sun.

The idol represents a human figure in a kneeling posture, the arms extending at the side. The features are rudely formed, yet, notwithstanding this, are not altogether repulsive, the nose being gracefully aquiline and the lips well formed. The ears are missing, but the remnants show that they were adorned with rings. The body is "squat," and might be said to resemble a toad. At the top of the head there is a hole which seems to have served a purpose, probably that of fastening a headdress to the figure. The image would hardly be catalogued with the works of art, but it is nevertheless an interesting relic.

The race whose deity was represented by this clumsy bit of clay inhabited the Mississippi Valley from the great lakes to the gulf at a time to which the traditions of man runneth not. Who they were, where they came from, what their manner of life was is all a mystery. True, many mounds, excavations and burying grounds of this lost people have been discovered, but so far they have given but little of their history. That they lived and died before the race of American Indians existed is proved by the fact that the traditions of the latter race contain no reference to this lost people, although their mounds and relics are mentioned. Many mounds of this kind are found in Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio and Indiana, and a few have been discovered in nearly all of the states of the Mississippi Valley.
