La Grippe.
No healthy person need fear any dangerous consequences from an attack of la grippe if properly treated. It is much the same as a severe cold and requires precisely the same treatment. Remain quietly at home and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed for a severe cold and a prompt and complete recovery is sure to follow. This remedy also counteracts any tendency of la grippe to result in pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it during the epidemics of the past two years we have yet to learn of a single case that has not recovered or that has resulted in pneumonia. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by F. G. Fricke & Co.

La Grippe Successfully Treated.
"I have just recovered from a second attack of the grip this year," says Mr. Jas. O. Jones, publisher of the leader, Mexico, Texas. "In the latter case I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and I think with considerable success, only being in bed a little over two days, against ten days for the first attack. The second attack, I am satisfied, would have been equally as bad as the first but for the use of this remedy, as I had to go to bed in about six hours after being struck with it, while in the first case I was able to attend to business about two days before getting down. 59 cent bottles for sale by F. G. Fricke & Co.

PERSIAN HERETICS.
A PERSECUTED SECT DRIVEN OUT BY THE PRESENT SHAH.

The Rise and Fall of Bab, the Mohammedan Reformer—His Brave Though Untimely Death—The Greater Beha, Who is an Exile from His Native Land.

Professor Browne, lecturer in Persian at the University of Cambridge, has written a curious book, entitled "The Episode of the Bab." Probably a few people know who the Bab is, but Mr. Browne's researches are certain to awaken interest in the man who was the arch heretic of Persia in the early part of the reign of the present shah. He died a violent death at the hands of the government when it was learned that the heresy that he preached threatened the peace of the national church. His followers live and are faithful to his memory and teachings.

Their leaders are in exile, and Professor Browne's book tells of his extraordinary exertions to see them and get their story from their own lips. They are scattered far and wide. Some of them are in Cyprus; others are in Palestine, safe from the vengeance of the shah. All of them would expect to lose their heads if they showed themselves in Persia. Only the humble followers of the Bab live unmolested in their own country, holding their meetings secretly for fear of the persecution of the angry Mollahs.

The Bab was a Mohammedan reformer, who went to Mecca and came back with a new commentary on the Koran. He spoke of himself as superior to Mohammed and to all other great religious reformers, but he announced that a greater than he was coming. That greater one is Beha, who lives in an earthly paradise called Behje, near Tyre, where Professor Browne found him. The author says he feels quite unequal to the task of conveying a vivid impression of the faces and forms that surrounded him during his visit to this strange retreat. He almost runs short of adjectives when he describes the wondrous and venerable figure of the holy man. He says he beheld a face which he will never forget, although he cannot describe it. The piercing eyes seemed to read his very soul. "No need to ask in whose presence I stood as I bowed myself before one who is the object of a devotion and love which kings might envy and emperors sigh for in vain."

Beha's preaching is a prophecy of the "most great peace" and of the brotherhood and unity of man. The brotherhood of the entire race is coming, he predicts. Prof. Browne says Beha knows the exact position of European affairs and is sorry for the western nations. He sees kings and rulers lavishing their treasures in the purchase of means of destruction instead of procuring the means of happiness. Meekness, concord, obedience, submission are the essentials of his secret in the perfect way. He is loved and revered by all his followers wherever they may be, and many a message from him is read in the secret meetings in Persia of the humble followers of the Bab.

The Bab was not learned in the law like the great doctors of the church, and for that reason they held him in contempt. It was his habit to dispute with them in the temples, and although he was ignorant his wisdom put their knowledge to shame. They said he proved himself an impostor because he talked bad grammar. He showed them that his grammar was the grammar of the Koran, and asked them if it was not better to be wrong with the prophet than right with the rest of the world. Whenever he became too troublesome they beat him with rods. At last they had him shot. A company of infantry was drawn up, and the Bab and one of his followers were placed before it as targets. The first discharge killed the follower, but only broke the cords that bound the prophet. He might have converted his executioners then if he had had time to make the most of the situation. But before he could speak the second volley was fired and the Bab died of many wounds.

His followers were terribly incensed at the outrage, and tried to assassinate the shah. It is said that he fainted with terror at the sight of the conspirators, and was only saved by the timely arrival of his escort. For a time he made Persia very unsafe for the followers of the Bab. He killed their leaders, and to this day those who escaped from their native land have never dared to return. Among the victims was the one Salvation Lass of the movement, the beautiful Kurratu'l-Ayn, who, it is said, was a miracle of learning and of every feminine charm. She was killed by slow torture, and to the very last she declared her supreme faith in the teachings of the Bab. The Mollahs who slew her came near rebelling a few months ago when their lord and master threatened to interfere with the tobacco question in Persia. They made him tremble for his life and throne until the obnoxious measures he proposed were rescinded. Meanwhile Beha is waiting patiently in exile, confident that the day will come when his teachings will triumph in Persia and the leaders of his faith can return to their land.—New York Sun.

A Coon Story.
Two men located a varmint in a tree and one scaled up for the prize. After an interval of several minutes, which were enlivened by skirmishing among the foliage, the man on the ground called out, "John, have you got him?" "I have," came the decided response. "Do you want me to climb up and help you hold him?" "Thunder and lightning, no! I wish you'd come up and help me let loose!"—Nashville American.

Faith.
If I were as rich as my right hand neighbor, I should have his faults; if I were as poor as my left hand neighbor, I should have his. Being myself, I have mine.—Mauley H. Pike in Century.

The Street Band.
"I like the flashing cornet and the sprightly clarinet," said Colonel Calliper, "but I like best of all that brass fountain of cheerfulness, the big bass horn. Care takes a back seat when the big horn sounds. It paints the air red and defies all creation, but it is vastly good natured withal, and it never fails when its friends the cornet and the clarinet pause for breath to come in with its oomph-ah! oomph-ah! oomph-ah! preserving the harmony unbroken."

"Relieved from this duty, it rolls off over the edge of a cliff and brings up suddenly at the foot with a tremendous oomph! Rebounding, with dignity unruffled, with undiminished vigor, and with undimmed, inextinguishable and overwhelming good humor, it tosses off sound in large decorative effects that excite the wonder of every hearer and fill every hearer with broad delight."

"Just why the big bass horn is usually played by a short, stout man, while the slender clarinet is played by a man who is tall and thin is one of those things that nobody knows. The time may come, indeed, when the short, stout man will play the slender clarinet and the tall, thin man will play the big bass horn; but by whomsoever it may be played let us hope that the big horn's thunderous jollity will never be abated."—New York Sun.

Too Much.
Mrs. Laverty, an Irish lady, who lived thirty miles from the American Richmond, was in the provident habit of laying in a store of groceries to last an entire quarter, since she could not repair to Richmond oftener than four times a year. On one of these provisioning expeditions she laid in a store of matches—a disastrous investment, since not a match would strike. Wild was her fury, which was kept alight and aglow by her recurring daily trouble to get her fire alight and aglow without a match. Her wrath, thus kept at boiling point for three months, gave the storekeeper a hot quarter of an hour, when she burst at last into his store and thundered down the parcel of matchboxes upon the counter. Having waited with deferential patience until the storm had spent itself, he said suavely, "Allow me, madam."

Taking a matchbox from the parcel and a match from the box, he struck it, after the manner of men, upon his trousers. "See, madam?" he exclaimed in smug triumph, holding up the kindled match. "The devil fly away wid ye!" shrieked Mrs. Laverty. "Do ye think that every time I've a fire to light I'll travel thirty miles to strike a match on the sate of yere breeches?"—Richard A. King in Belgravia.

A Gallant Irish Boy.
The biographer of General Crawford tells the following story: During Wellington's campaign in the Peninsula, the Light division was defeated by the French under Marshal Ney, and forced to retreat across a river. A young soldier from the north of Ireland, named Stewart, was nicknamed "The Boy," as he was only nineteen years of age and of gigantic stature.

He had fought bravely, and was one of the last men who came down to the bridge, over which the division was retreating. He refused to pass over, but gazing at the French with a grim look, said in a loud voice:

"So this is the end of our boasting! This is our first battle, and we retreat! The Boy Stewart will not live to hear that said."

Striding forward, he fell upon the advancing Frenchmen with his bayonet, and died fighting.

"Gallant, but rash!" the reader says. Yes, but so were the unyielding warriors at Thermopylae.

Fly Fishing.
There is no doubt that certain flies are best adapted to different seasons, times of day and conditions of weather, but a dozen flies of different names will fully answer all of these requirements. An angler's flies resemble nothing when cast upon the water. They are simply a something which attracts the trout. Color has more allurements than form, and as there are not so many colors there is no use for many flies. The general rule is for light flies on dark days and dark or darkish flies on light days. Sizes are more to be considered than form and mixture in makeup. A large trout wants something worth his making an effort to secure. It is doubtless true that an arbitrary cast of flies cannot be made up which will be adapted to all waters.—Forest and Stream.

Looked Like Her Doll.
A little miss at the South End has a favorite doll, which is of Celestial outline and bears the name of Chum Chum. Until within a short time she had never seen a Chinaman, but the other day, while walking with her mother, one chanced into view. The young woman immediately recognized the similarity between the life and the facsimile at home.

"Oh, mamma," said she, "there's Chum Chum." But almost instantly the difference in size appealed to her and she corrected herself:

"No, no! Chum Chum's dad."—Boston Times.

How Interest Accumulates.
If one cent had been loaned out at 5 per cent interest per annum with the beginning of the "year of one," that cent and the interest on the first day of January, 1892, would have amounted to the enormous sum of $58,454,185, 339, 747, 568, 426, 258, 965, 555, 20; in other words and characters, 58 thousand 454 quadrillions 185 thousand 339 trillions 747 thousand 568 billions 426 thousand 258 millions 965 thousand 555 dollars and 20 cents.—Cor. St. Louis Republic.

The Best Part of the Music.
"Shall I play the rest?" she asked, as she paused in her performance at the piano.

"Yes," he answered, "by all means. I enjoy the rests very much. I hope you won't think of skipping any."—Washington Star.

The Apostles' creed is not the creation of any single person. It grew. It is found in practically its present form in writings of the Fifth century. The Nicene creed was formulated in A. D. 325.

A Spider Completes the Circuit.
A correspondent relates that his family were disturbed one evening by a mysterious ringing of the electric bells all over the house. Investigating the cause, he found that a large spider had established itself at a point where the bell and the electric light wires ran close to one another, with one leg on either wire, thus establishing a connection.—Geneva (Switzerland) Tribune.

Doctors' Writing Very Ancient.
Many of the chemical signs are derived from the alchemists, and are also to be found in works on magic. Some of them are very ancient, and may be traced to Roman stenography and to more ancient sources. The Comte de Gobineau has something on the history of the magic alphabets still used by orientals in his "Ecriture Cuneiforme."—Notes and Queries.

The Life of a Thunderstorm.
Mr. William Marriott asserts that thunderstorms, instead of traveling at a rapid rate over the country as one continuous storm, consists really of a series of storms following one another, and it is his opinion that the average life of each is not more than about twenty miles.—London Public Opinion.

Uses of Chinese Wax.
The white wax is a substance of great utility in China. It melts only at a high temperature, and is used chiefly to cover candles made of animal and vegetable tallow, to prevent too rapid combustion. It is used also as sizing for paper and cotton goods, a glaze for silk and a polish for furniture.—New York Sun.
