Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.
 From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption coughs and colds. I gave it a trial took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." The Pogonip Fog.

The city of Carson, Nev., experienced the other evening the thickest and coldest pogonip fog "in the memory of the oldest inhabitant." The pogonip fog is peculiar to elevated altitudes in the Nevada Sierras, which is something for us to be thankful for. The pogonip ascends from the valleys, and its chill embrace is so much feared by the Indians, who are predisposed to affections of the lungs, that they change their camp if apprised by the atmospheric conditions that the dreaded fog is approaching.

Ogden, a chemist of the Nevada mining bureau, furnishes this pleasing description of the pogonip: "In the White Pine mountains, the Toyabi, the Myko and the Parranagat ranges it is quite common to see the trees, houses and everything out in the open gradually become white without any apparent cause. There is no perceptible fog, but the hot air from the valleys gradually ascends up the mountain side, and becoming crystallized, the minute crystals attach themselves to anything in sight. This phenomenon affects human beings in just the same manner, and when the fog passes by, the frozen particles will adhere to the hair and clothing, producing a very grotesque effect."—Providence Journal.

Two Kinds of Italians.

The monument which is to be erected in New Orleans in memory of the late Chief of Police Hennessey is nearing completion at the works of the Hollowell (Mc.) Granite company. The monument has three bases, the lowest 7 1/2 feet square. On the top base the name "Hennessey" is chiseled in raised letters. The capital is two feet in height with paneled sides. Surmounting the capital is a plain granite column thirteen feet in height. At the foot of the column is the coat of arms of Louisiana, and above that is a representation of the dead chief's badge. From the draped top of the column are suspended a policeman's belt and a club, like those worn by the dead chief.

A singular circumstance in connection with this monument is that seven of the nine men employed in making it are Italians. Speaking of that, Joseph Archi, who has charge of the work, said, "The Italians who are doing this work are of a different class altogether from the New Orleans Italians who killed Hennessey, and they are in perfect sympathy with the Americans who shot our evil minded countrymen."—Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Helwig's 5,034 Loose Teeth.

Armed with a search warrant Treasury Agents Soehngen and Harlan visited the residence of Dr. Emmy Helwig, a female physician, and after ransacking the place they located a big package of false molars. The teeth were all single, no sets being found. They numbered just 5,034. The woman was taken before Chief Treasury Agent Scanlan, where she admitted having brought the teeth from Germany. She came to America Oct. 4, 1890.

There is a duty of 60 per cent. on porcelain teeth, and as the lot was valued at $900 the duty would have been considerable. After safely passing the customs officers at New York Mrs. Helwig came to Chicago, where she opened a dentist's office. This failing to pay she hung out her shingle as a female physician.—Chicago Tribune.

Hens and Ducks.

Fish stories are good, but they cannot compare in interest with the hen stories that were told at the Ploverman Farmers' meeting in John Hancock building. James Rankin, of South Easton, the essayist, described a pair of healthy chickens hatched from a double yolked egg which were joined at the wings by a fleshy integument. They had to be separated, because one of them developed a tendency to turn somersaults, which proved a source of annoyance and danger to his less acrobatically inclined mate. He also told of a flock of ducks that would never enter the water unless accompanied by a young lady attendant, and at a certain hour every day they would come to the house and quack for her to come out and go with them to the water's edge.—Boston Transcript.

Vermont Deer Return to the Green.

The attempt to stock the Green mountains with deer will doubtless prove a complete failure. A number of years ago some of the animals were brought from New York and turned loose upon the mountain slopes in the thinly inhabited sections of the state. That they have bred and increased it is quite natural to suppose, but the reason that they are not now any more numerous than they were five years ago can be attributed to the fact that in the winter they cross Lake Champlain on the ice into the Adirondack wilderness, never to return.—Vermont Cor. Albany Journal.

The Preacher's Celluloid Cuffs Took Fire.

The Rev. Boles, the pastor who has been holding revival services at Manning, Ia., has met with a serious accident. A furnace used in the church for heating water for baptisms suddenly exploded, and the Rev. Boles carried it out. He had the misfortune to be wearing celluloid cuffs, which also took fire, and in an instant his clothes were on fire. Both of his arms were burned and charred in a frightful manner, and the attending physicians say his injuries are fatal.—Cor. Indianapolis Journal.

A very pleasant sight was witnessed on the Brooklyn water front a few days ago, and one that is of too rare occurrence nowadays; it was the docking of four American steamships almost at the same time.

A colored man at High Point, N. C., fell from an electric light pole to the pavement, a distance of twenty-five feet, the other day and is reported to have escaped without even a bruise.

The output of petroleum in this country last year surpassed all previous records, and amounted to 50,159,000 barrels. Russia is soon to construct an electric railway between St. Petersburg and Archangel, a distance of 899 miles.

SHE HAD TO SAY "FLY."

An Amateur Performer Who Insisted Upon Following the Lines.

It is not often that professional actors get mixed up in amateur theatricals, but when they do, as a rule, their lives are made miserable until the affair is over. A few years ago a young woman, who was one of the reigning belles of the Four Hundred in this city, wrote a romantic play, plentifully sprinkled with singing and dancing. She read the play to her intimate friends, and they one and all unanimously declared that it should be produced at one of the theaters where amateur performances are held, and that the author should play the part of the heroine. After much coaxing the lady consented. The play was called "Kismet." The cast was selected from among the best amateurs, the leading man being the head and front of them. The scene of the play was laid in Turkey, in the garden and palace of the sultan. The plot was hinged on the abduction of two beautiful girls and their final rescue.

A clever professional stage manager was engaged at a big salary and rehearsals began. Everything went along as smoothly as could be expected until the last rehearsal, which took place on the morning of the day appointed for the production, when a note was hastily delivered to the stage manager saying that the leading lady and author had lost her voice completely, and that her physician had ordered her not to leave the house. She was very sorry, but advised that a professional actress be engaged to take her place. Here was "a pretty kettle of fish"—how to get an actress at so short a notice. The costumes must be fitted and the part learned before 7 p. m. The manager thought of a friend of his, Mrs. Addie Plunkett, Charles Plunkett's wife, who had just closed her season with Liberty. He sent for her and requested her to return with the messenger. She did so, and after a long talk with the stage manager consented to rehearse the part. She was nervous, of course.

In the garden scene her sister's lover has discovered her hiding place and they are having a loving interview, the heroine remaining on the lookout for interruptions, which may occur in the form of the sultan's servants, which would mean death to the intruder. At a certain cue the heroine rushes up to her sister's fiancé and tells him to "Fly! fly for your life—some one approaches!" and the lover is pushed through a wicket and escapes. Mrs. Plunkett rehearsed the scene carefully and told the leading man that in case she should forget to say all the lines she would make him understand when it was time for him to make his exit. Thus it was settled between them. Evening came, and the time for the curtain to be rung up arrived. Most of the performers had stage fright, one fair amateur declaring that she had entirely forgotten her lines and was sure that she would faint from sheer fright.

The performance began and Mrs. Plunkett struggled bravely through her part, dropping an occasional speech now and then, but with professional tact she covered up her mistakes so that the audience was none the wiser. When the garden scene was reached the lover appeared in good time and she stood guard until the proper cue was given. It came all right, but alas for Mrs. Plunkett, she had forgotten her lines. When she heard the sultan's guard approach she rushed to the lover and said, "Away! begone!" but she received no response from that gentleman. She pushed him and tried to get him to go through the wicket, as agreed upon, but he refused to budge an inch, and said to her in a stage whisper, "Say 'Fly! fly!'" but Mrs. Plunkett was beyond speech by this time, so she continued to push him toward the wicket.

Her efforts were useless, however, for he resisted and declared he would not go until she said, "Fly! fly! for your life, some one approaches," so the audience can hear you." Still she could not speak, but with one heroic effort she gave him a tremendous push that sent him flying through the wicket and into some stage bushes which had been artistically arranged at the back of the stage. When the performance was over Mrs. Plunkett heaved a sigh of relief and said, "This is the first and last amateur performance for me!"—New York Tribune.

The Growth of Two Cities.

Just as the Atlantic cities were surprised when Chicago distanced all but two of them in population, and challenged all of them by her enterprise, so will they be astonished again and from another quarter if they refuse to study the forces that are operating to build up new capitals in the west. In another ten years there will be another claim of a million population, and the counting of heads will not make nonsense of it. The new and wonderful assumption of metropolitan importance will be that of the twin cities of the wheat region—Minneapolis and St. Paul. They may not be joined under one name and government—opinions differ about that—but all agree that they will jointly possess a million of population. The last census credited Minneapolis with 164,700 population and St. Paul with 133,000, or, jointly, 297,000. At the time of the preceding census (1880) the two cities included about 88,000 souls. At that rate of increase they will boast in 1900 a population of 976,000 and more.—Julian Ralph in Harper's.

Thoroughly Alive.

Young America is in thorough touch with the times. An up town boy of eleven, rejoicing in a little printing press, at once announced a forthcoming newspaper, of which he was to be editor and proprietor. "And Helen," he added, referring to a nine-year-old sister, "may do the woman's page."—New York Times.
