It is recommended that no proxies be admitted to the convention, and that the delegates present be authorized to cast full votes of the delegation.

It is recommended that the republicans of every county in this state be requested to select their county central committee at the first county convention held in their respective counties. Said committee to serve until the county convention of 1893 be held.

DR. S. D. MERCER,
 Chairman.

WALT. M. SEELEY,
 Secretary.

FIRST DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The republican electors of the first congressional district of the state of Nebraska are requested to send delegates from the several counties comprising said district to meet in convention in the city of Falls City, Wednesday, April 20, 1891, at 7:30 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of electing two delegates and two alternate delegates to the republican national convention to be held at Minneapolis June 7, 1892.

THE APPOINTMENT.

The several counties are entitled to representation as follows, being based upon the vote cast for Hon. W. J. Connell for congress in 1890. One delegate for each 100 votes and major fraction thereof and one delegate at large from each county:

Counties	Del.	Counties	Del.
Adams	10	Johnson	13
Antelope	10	Pawnee	13
Blaine	10	Richardson	16

It is recommended that no proxies be admitted to the convention, and that the delegates present from each county cast the full vote of the delegation.

W. H. WOODWARD,
 Chairman.

FRANK MCCARTNEY,
 Secretary.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at F. G. Fricke & Co.'s drug store, regular size, 50c. and $1.00.

A Great Surprise.

Is in store for all who use Kempf's Balsam for the throat and lungs the great guaranteed remedy. Would you believe that it is sold on its merits and that any druggist is authorized by the proprietor of this wonderful remedy to give you a sample bottle free? It never fails to cure acute and chronic coughs. All druggists sell Kempf's Balsam. Large bottles 50c and $1.

Cough Following the Grip.

Many persons, who have recovered from the grippe are now troubled with a persistent cough. Chamberlain's cough remedy will promptly loosen this cough and relieve the lungs, effecting a permanent cure in a very short time. 25 and 50 cent bottle for sale by F.

TO TRAVEL IN AIR.

AT THE MODEST SPEED OF THREE HUNDRED MILES AN HOUR.

Mr. Loeber's invention and the remarkable Claims Made in Its Behalf, are other Addition to the Literature of Aerial Navigation.

Charles G. Loeber, a lawyer of Union street, in this city, has invented a system of aerial navigation which he claims will solve the question and permit vessels of any size and weight to travel through the air with the greatest ease, safety and rapidity if constructed on his principle. His invention is based on his discovery of means which make the air unyielding to force and impact and this unyielding state of the air he has named anthexis, from the Greek meaning that which sustains force without yielding. It must not be inferred from the statement that Mr. Loeber is a lawyer that he has developed his system and perfected his invention without an acquired knowledge of its surroundings. He has given aerial navigation his careful study for over a quarter of a century, and especially has studied the quality of the air or atmosphere, and one of his notable inventions is an air pump.

This new invention has had as yet no practical test, because no machine for navigation has yet been constructed. The inventor claims, however, that he has satisfied himself of its correctness beyond a doubt. He naively states that his position is the same as that of most inventors. He lacks the funds. Not that he is without means, but the amount needed to build a vessel of the proper size for conveyance would be $50,000, and he says that $50,000 is a large amount to some men. He also wants the privilege of control in the matter of construction, which means a great deal to capitalists. At the same time he is as hopeful and also as buoyant as his machine will be, according to his statements, and believes that the opportunity will come for him to make, as he says, an epoch in history.

When questioned as to the principle on which he works he said to a reporter: "If I were to detail to a thorough scientist, the strongest kind of a personal friend, in the strictest confidence, the principle I work upon, there would enter into his acceptance of it an element of doubt, because it is opposed to all the present ideas of aerial navigation. The air is a power substance, but its power is occult and made manifest only by the use of means. The balloon is the means to obtain two opposite vertical air columns and the excess of the lower over the upper air column; vacuum space in the pneumatic tube is the means to obtain the full pressure force of one air column. A third means which I have discovered brings forth anthexis. Anthexis is the foundation and embodiment of my invention of the air car. I can say no more than this at present."

The startling part of Mr. Loeber's proposition is that he proposes his air car shall be made of iron or steel to prevent fire; that its extreme length shall be 79 feet; mean breadth, 27 feet; height, 35 feet; length and breadth of wings, 40 and 27 feet; total wing area, 2,160 square feet, and that it shall have a net carrying capacity of 600 tons. The minimum unyielding air support underneath the wings, he says, will be 1,188 tons and the area of the machine will be 40 square feet. The means through which anthexis are brought forth are constant, he says, and the control of the rudder absolute. Three hundred miles an hour speed, according to his statement, are as easily obtainable in the air as are thirty miles an hour on land. The normal height of the car in the air will be above mountains, so as to keep it out of the zone of cyclones and an automatic register denoting the height of the car, coupled with a simple rule fixing the heights for the various cars, will make collisions practically impossible.

This is comforting to know. That this invention, if carried out, will practically bring the millennium. Mr. Loeber does not hesitate to say. As illustrations of the feasibility of his plan and the existence of anthexis, he uses the vulture, which, when weighted with a load heavier than itself, is able to rise in the air to any distance. Were not the air unyielding the bird would have no fulcrumage, and the air would slip by it. The bird does not obtain this by the exertion of force, as is shown by the motionless wings of the eagle poised in air. In the case of the laden vulture the force needed would be a force equal the weight of the vulture and its prey, added to that needed for fulcrumage and its flying force. This would make flight impossible, he claims, unless nature had provided a letter means, the simple force, and this, Mr. Loeber says, he has discovered.

When called upon to account for his discovery he claimed it was due to providential good fortune, added to many years of unremitting study expended on a subject as to which little or nothing was already known, and all of which had to be elaborated by original conception and design. He says a trial of the test car could be made in less than six months, and that large cars could be built and air conveyance used as a regular method of transportation.

Who knows but the aerial navigation and transportation company, carrying passengers across all the continents and wastes of waters, without seasickness or the dangers of being out of possession through the diabolical railway station sandwich, maybe a thing of the near future, while the men who doubt, as do those opposing ocean steamers and locomotive transportation, may have to regret that they did not try to take a day off in the summer time for a good evening in Siberia and return. All this is possible, according to Mr. Loeber, and his standing in the community as a man of reason in other matters warrant some degree of faith in his sincerity and sense.

Opera Box Women.

The whole horseshoe of boxes—two tiers high—was filled with the flower of New York society. The young women were one and all frail and fine, having that delicate slenderness so far removed from thinness that is an eastern American woman's greatest beauty. Blondes were in the majority—graceful, fragile, exquisite creatures, gleaming with diamonds and ethereal as spirits of the moonlight, in pale tinted, fleecy dresses. They were all decollete—thin or fat—but not one was scraggy. Almost all wore their hair high and bound around in the style of the First Empire with a band of ribbon or of gold, while on their foreheads and sometimes over their ears lay little ruffled, careless curls like a baby's. The men were not so good looking and were somewhat effaced by the show of feminine beauty. Almost all the younger ones were smooth faced and wore inordinately high collars. These young fellows are very prominent in the gay circles of Gotham.

The showing of jewels—every one being bedizened for the ball—was wonderful. Mrs. Bradley Martin was covered with diamonds. She is not a pretty or young woman, in fact is florid and common in her style, and so did not set off her gems to advantage. On her head she wore a diamond crown as big around as a teacup and made in a design of small, fine points. It was set back on the crown of her head and inclosed her hair. Around her neck were several chains of the same stones, long and short. Another line of enormous diamonds followed the edge of her corsage from the shoulder to the front, and from her other shoulder to the point of her bodice a superb reviere of diamonds traced a blaze of light. Mrs. Ogden Mills was also crowned, her crown being small and round and high, also inclosing her hair. Her neck and bodice glittered with other jewels. She is thin and somewhat passe, but she has high, aristocratic features and a great deal of air and style.—New York Cor. San Francisco Argonaut.

Mrs. Charles H. Spurgeon.

Mr. Spurgeon was but twenty-two when he made choice of a wife in Susanna, the daughter of Mr. Robert Thompson, a merchant of Falcon square, in the city of London. But if young in years, the preacher was of course even then old in wisdom, and the excellence of his judgment fully atoned for the earliness of his marriage. Mr. Spurgeon was then pastor of a small chapel in South London, and resided in the poverty stricken neighborhood of the borough. During the first fortnight of the year 1856—the marriage took place on Jan. 8—the young man was preaching in several of the provincial cities.

Not long after marriage Mrs. Spurgeon fell a victim to a disease from the effects of which she has never wholly been free. In 1868, in accordance with the wishes of the most eminent surgeons, she consented to a painful operation. It was performed by Sir James Simpson, of Edinburgh, and eventually had the happy result of greatly mitigating, though not entirely removing, her sufferings. Until that time illness had prevented her giving very much active help to her husband's work; probably she had been most helpful to him in the loving sympathy she gave while her husband was the target for so many attacks, from the churchmen on the one hand, from the Freethinkers on the other, attacks which had become more frequent with his appointment to the position of pastor of the Metropolitan Tabernacle.—London Letter.

Woman's Most Recent Profession.

A new profession is open to women, one in which they are scarcely likely to have any male competitors. Moreover, it is one which should be eminently agreeable to the feminine mind. No special qualifications are required beyond good looks and good taste. The profession is that of window gazing. Already a number of ladies have become window gazers as a matter of profit as well as pleasure. The duties are light and the pay is good. All that is required is to stand in front of your patron's street windows during the fashionable hours of the afternoon, and, in sufficiently enthusiastic terms draw the attention of your companion to the merits of the latest sweet thing in bonnets, or that perfectly ideal theater cloak, for the benefit of the genuine shoppers who are passing. The professional window gazers must go in couples in order to be able to start a conversation.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Work of Women in Philanthropy.

The lady managers of the World's Fair are in communication with Mrs. Aubrey H. Smith, of Philadelphia, who compiled a book of interesting and valuable statistics for the Centennial concerning the charities conducted by women. It is the intention of the woman's board to take up the work begun by Mrs. Smith and bring it up to date, showing the advancement of women in philanthropy during the last decade. The lady managers have already collected much supplementary data of an international character, and are consulting Mrs. Smith as to the best methods suggested by her experience in arranging the available materials.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Difference in Calling.

In the south the voices of women as well as of men were often utilized for "long distance calls." It may be amusing to note the difference in intonation which was usually exhibited by the sexes. When a man had occasion to summon any one from a distance, the prolonged tone was placed on the first note, the emphasis on the second; thus, "O—John!" If a female called, the prolonged tone and the emphasis were both placed on the last note; thus, "You—John!"—Dr. J. Harvie Dew in Century.

The Man in the Infant.

If a baby has a will of his own he will be intolerant of neglect, and whatever he wants he will want at once and there will be no end of a fuss unless he is kept waiting. Thus, in embryo, is seen the irascible, impatient and dictatorial man.—Cor. Baby.
