TEN LITTLE DEMOCRATS.

Ten little candidates
Worked it very fine,
One of them was traded off
Then there were nine.
Nine little candidates
Feeling good and great,
One of them a tumble took
Then there were eight.
Eight little candidates
Almost fit for heaven,
One of them a letter wrote
Then there were seven.
Seven little candidates
Cutting up their tricks,
One took the silver crape
Then there were six.
Six little candidates
Very much alive,
One talked himself to death
Then there were five.
Five little candidates
Set up quite a war,
One made a southern trip
Then there were four.
Four little candidates
Went out on a spree,
One took the Keeley cure
Then there were three.
Three little candidates
Tried to worry through,
One became a mugwump
Then there were two.
Two little candidates
Started with a gun,
With a free trade load it burst
Then there was one.

FINALE.
One little democrat
Sorry, mad and tired,
Tried to fight the campaign out
But very soon expired.

GOLD AND SILVER.

Once upon a time a Silver Dollar was standing on the dock watching a steamer coming in. And the silver dollar was looking unhappy, for it was thinking. When the steamer had landed, a Gold Dollar came rattling merrily along down the gang plank and met the Silver Dollar on the dock. "Where have you been?" asked the Silver Dollar, sadly, for it knew all about the state of the case. "Oh, I've been abroad," chirped the Gold Dollar. "Why don't you go some time?" "Me go?" whimpered the poor Silver Dollar, as the tears rolled down its face. "Me go abroad? I'm not built that way."
MORAL.—Sound money is the life of trade.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

Not long ago a distinguished Englishman and jurist visited our country. On the eve of his return, in a public address, he alluded to the fact that wherever he went he was asked whether he was not amazed at the size of our country. This student of law and government very kindly, but very decidedly, rebuked this too prevalent pride of bulk, and called our attention to the finer and higher things that he had observed in our American civilization.

So to-day, as I look into these intelligent faces, my thoughts are turned away from those things that are scheduled, that have their places in our census returns, to those things which belong to the higher man—his spiritual and moral nature. I congratulate you, not so much upon the rich farm lands of your country as upon your virtuous and happy homes. The home is the best, as it is the first, school of citizenship. It is the great conservative and assimilating force. I should despair for my country if American citizens were to be trained only in our schools, valuable as their instruction is. It is in the home that we first learn obedience and respect for law. Parental authority is the type of beneficent government. It is in the home that we learn to love, in the mother that bore us, that which is virtuous, consecrated, and pure. I take more pride in the fact that the republican party has always been the friend and protector of the American home than ought else. By the beneficent homestead law it created more than half a million of homes; by the Emancipation

Proclamation it converted a million cattle-pens into homes. And it is still true to those principles that will preserve contentment in our homes. I greet you as men who have been nurtured in such homes, and call your thoughts to the fact that the republican party has always been, and can be trusted to be, friendly to all that will promote virtue, intelligence and morality in the homes of our people.—Benj. Harrison.

DIVERSIFIED INDUSTRIES.

One of the objects and results of a protective tariff is to diversify the industries of a country, both agricultural and manufacturing. We are all more or less dependent on each other for what we consume, and protection enables us to produce nearly all our wants at home instead of buying them abroad. If our farmers were to grow nothing but wheat and our manufacturers were to make nothing but steel rails, they would have no home market of any value for either; but by protecting everything that can be grown or manufactured, we make the best use of all the natural resources of our country, we lessen the cost of transportation, we bring prices down to a reasonable level, and at the same time good wages and good profits are insured to all. For instance, by putting an adequate duty on tin plate we not only establish that industry, but aid a score of allied industries way back to the mining of the ore and coal. Protection brings the farm and the factory together, each helping the other. Every new industry created, every new product successfully grown, gives employment to otherwise idle hands and more purchasing power to consumers of both. The McKinley law has already started scores of new industries and each has helped those already established. To repeal the present law or any part of it would shut up the mills, decrease wages and sadly cripple if not ruin our splendid home market.—American Economist.

THE coming republican national convention will be the first since 1872 without a contest for the presidential nomination. In that year Grant was renominated unanimously. There was an exciting contest in every convention afterward up to and including that of 1888. In 1876 seven ballots were required for a choice, in 1880 thirty-six ballots, in 1884 four ballots and in 1888 eight ballots.

For a number of years, I have been subject to violent attacks of inflammatory rheumatism which generally lasted about two months. On the first of this month I was attacked in the knee and suffered severely for two days, when I prepared a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it relieved me almost instantly. I therefore most cheerfully recommend it to those who are similarly afflicted everywhere.—R. D. Brought into Court. Messrs. Cage and Sherman, of Alexander, Texas, write us regarding a remarkable cure for rheumatism there, as follows: "The wife of Mr. Wm. Pruitt, the postmaster here, has been bed-ridden with rheumatism for several years. She could get nothing to do her any good. We sold her a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and she was completely cured by its use. We refer any one to her to verify this statement." 50 cent bottles for sale by F. G. Fricke & Co., druggists.

The promptness and certainty of its cures have made Chamberlain's cough remedy famous. It is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, and is the most effectual remedy known for these diseases. 50 cents bottles for sale by F. G. Fricke.

Not Even the Commonest Civility.

Women who think it so strange that New York men occupy seats in crowded cars, elevated and otherwise, while female passengers clutch for straps, should draw the moral from an incident that happened in a Fifth Avenue stage a few days ago. One of those clumsy vehicles was lumbering up the avenue with two passengers, one a middle aged man sitting by the door. At Nineteenth street the stage stopped, and an old lady, after bidding an affectionate farewell to a friend at the step, climbed in and sat down opposite the middle aged passenger. The latter was gazing idly into the street, when he felt a touch, and suddenly found himself in possession of a nickel. Evidently it came from the newly entered passenger, though she favored him with neither word nor glance. It was equally plain that it was her fare, and that she expected the middle aged man to deposit it in the box. After a moment's hesitation he arose, groped his way to the forward end of the stage, dropped the nickel into its proper resting place, and returned, glancing involuntarily at the old lady for some word or look of thanks. None came. She adjusted her fur wrap and seemed oblivious of his presence. The bus rumbled on up Fifth Avenue for some minutes without incident, when the old lady suddenly leaned over and said, "Stop the stage at Thirty-fourth street." The middle aged man flushed slightly with evident annoyance, and said decisively: "Madam, you compelled me to deposit your fare a few moments ago, and omitted the commonest civility in doing so. I am neither the driver nor conductor of this stage, and though I should instantly respond to a courteous request, you may stop this stage whenever you please—for yourself!" and she did.—New York Tribune.

An Ineffable Cruelty to Children. Mrs. Fenwick Muller, a London writer of note, comes out strongly on the subject of Lady Montague's methods of discipline, and incidentally has some plain words to say about punishments for children in general, and especially in the case of that ineffable brutality, the shutting up of young children in the dark. "Darkness is full of terrors to a child. Out of the gloom come all sorts of horrible imaginings, and many a child has been half ruined for life by the terror of darkness, willfully inflicted by some woman either too brutal to care or too ignorant to understand the infernal cruelty of leaving children, whose imaginations are often far more vivid than those of adults, in all the horror of blackness, out of which they, in their combined fancy and ignorance, ring forth all kinds of terrible and threatening things. No young children should ever be left without a glimmer of light in a bedroom all night long, as a touch of indigestion, a troublesome dream, a sudden awakening, afraid and into darkness, may work nerve mischief that may last a lifetime.

"There is no crime that a child can commit that would entitle us to expose him or her to the mental agonies of solitude in darkness, many peopled as it is with phantoms and terrors. We know that even in our prisons this terrible punishment is only resorted to to subdue the most violent and refractory prisoners, and that even then it is hedged round with many restrictions, and only permitted to be used for a limited space of time. If there is a woman living whose heart does not respond to these strong words there is something very radically wrong with her."

Egyptian Architecture. Egyptian architecture, the oldest of known styles, placed the weight firmly on the ground. In the first stages of building the strength of materials and the art of construction were but imperfectly understood, and to obtain security masses of material were placed on a broad base, narrowing upward in the form of a pyramid. It suggested security and permanence. The earliest extant monument of the work of man—the pyramids by the Nile—still rest on the sand of the desert in their majestic massiveness. The Egyptian buildings were constructed on the model of the pyramid. Truncated at various heights, details and ornamentation, however varied, left the same impression of security and permanence.

The shelving base, from which springs the propylon or porch, the multiplication of short, stunted shafts, the shallow reliefs, are all subservient to the one idea. The building rests on the ground, and you know it. The slender obelisk placed in front as a foil brought into prominence the massive solidity of the building. The accessory sphinx, with its front paws placed flat on the pedestal, the body firmly recumbent and the head solidly draped was a type of immobility and rest.—London Tablet.

Learning to Pop. It is queer how small an occurrence serves to attract a crowd. The other evening a popcorn kiosk at the corner of D street and the avenue was surrounded by a gaping crowd, ranging in character from gamins to gentlemen, all breathlessly watching the proprietor as he shook a pepper over the gas flamer. A couple of young ladies happened to be passing, and one of them inquired: "What are those men staring at?" "They are learning how to pop," replied her companion.

"Oh," sighed the speaker, "how I wish Charlie would take a few lessons!"—Washington Post.
