Lord Lorne and Some American Girls.

The following pleasant and unusual experience happened to a party of well known American girls who were traveling in Europe one summer. Its truth is told by one of the young ladies: "On our way to Edinburgh we stopped over a train at Stirling to see the castle, and there an adventure befell us of which I will tell you. When we got out of the train and were looking about for the ways and means of reaching the castle we were accosted by a tall, fine looking, middle aged man, who asked if we were not from the 'other side of the water.' We said 'yes,' and that we wanted to get to the castle. He said that he was going there and would be glad to show us the way and also to show us his old family house, which was close by. We got into a carriage, and our new friend mounted the box beside the driver and so we went.

"We finally stopped before a quaint old house, with coats of arms carved in stone, and he led us into the courtyard, which was very quaint and old. He said the place was called Argyle Lodge and then added: 'Perhaps I ought to tell you who I am. I am Lord Lorne, the last of the house of Argyle!' He then took us all over the castle, the old Gray Friars' church, and rushed about so that we saw twice as much as we could possibly have seen by ourselves, for he knew just what was worth seeing and could shake off the guide when he started on his long, rambling story. Lord Lorne was perfectly lovely, and we have all lost our hearts to him, and have serious designs first upon the life of the Princess Louise, his wife, and then upon each other."—Rochester Post-Express.

What Some Men Spend on Amusement.

Probably few persons who sit around a pool table witnessing a clever game of pool have any idea of the time and money necessary to become a crack player of either pool or billiards. New York boasts many fine amateurs. The latter are to be found everywhere for that matter. I have seen men hanging about a livery stable in a country village in their shirt sleeves who can hole all the balls on an opening at pool, and can run fifties and hundreds at French carrom.

The great body of pool and billiard players are in it for the amusement and exercise. They spend from an hour to four hours daily walking around a table and punching the ivory. Two hours a day is thought necessary to keep up practice. A dollar an hour is not an extravagant estimate of the average expense in New York. The better the player the more he plays, and $500 a year in walking around a table isn't much for that kind of man. Twenty to forty years of this, however, represents in good hard cash considerably more than that kind of a man has on hand at the end of his career.—New York Herald.

The Pearl Hunters' Superstition.

The pearl hunters of Borneo and the adjacent islands have a peculiar superstition. When they open shells in search of pearls, they take every ninth find, whether it be large or small, and put it into a bottle which is kept corked with a dead man's finger. The pearls in the vial are known as "seed pearls" or "breeding pearls," and the native Borneo firmly believes that they will reproduce their kind. For every pearl put into the vial two grains of rice are thrown in for the pearls to "feed" upon. Some whites in Borneo believe as firmly in the superstition as the natives do, and almost every hut along the coast has its "dead finger" bottle with from nine to fifty seed pearls and twice that number of rice grains carefully and evenly stowed away among them. Professor Kimmery says that nearly every burial place along the coast has been desecrated by "pearl breeders" in search of corks for their bottles.—St. Louis Republic.

Mrs. Sheldon's Curiosities.

Mrs. French Sheldon, the well known African traveler, has received a very pressing invitation from Mrs. Potter Palmer, lady manager of the women's department in the Chicago exhibition, to exhibit her splendid collection of African curiosities at the coming exhibition. Mrs. Sheldon won the confidence of the natives and especially of the women in a way no man could ever hope to do, and in this way she succeeded in gaining information of much interest and novelty and securing objects which had never been seen out of Africa before. One woman followed her 250 miles up country before she could be induced to part with a leather apron which only married women wear, but which they never sell or give to strangers, as they have an idea that should they do so, the person to whom it is given will have some mysterious power over them forever.—London's Woman's Herald.

A Hero of Today.

History and poetry celebrate no sublimer act of devotion than that of Albert G. Drecker, the watchman of the Passaic river drawbridge, on the New York and Newark railroad. The train was due, and he was closing the draw, when his little child fell into the deep water. It would have been easy enough to rescue him if the father could have taken the time, but already the thundering train was at hand. It was a cruel agony. His child could be saved only at the cost of other lives committed to his care. The brave man did his duty, but the child was drowned.—New York Press.

Endurance of a Horse.

A horse attains his growth in five years; he will live twenty-five years and average sixteen years. A horse will live twenty-five days on water without solid food, seventeen days without eating or drinking, but only five days on solid food without drinking.—Humane World.

Use Tepid Water for Inflamed Eyes.

Cold water should not be used for bathing the eyes when inflammation is present. Tepid water may be used night and morning, keeping the eye carefully closed the while.—Hall's Journal of Health.

IF I COULD KNOW

If I could know, ah, me! if I could know That for the space Of one brief moment, in the long ago, You gave me place Above all other women in your heart, It would not be so hard from you to part. If I could know you hold me dearer yet Than any one, And that you nevermore would quite forget The bright days gone, I would be more content, and courage gain In time, perhaps, to live down all the pain. If I could know you feel regret today To see me turn Away from you and go my weary way, Then I would learn To find, perhaps, some comfort in the thought So full of saddest consolation fraught. If I could know that at some future tide We two should meet, And linger for a moment side by side In converse sweet, I would not dread this parting as I do, For hope would trim the light of love for you. If I could know that when this life is o'er, In that bright land Where all is peace, our souls should meet once more, And understand Each other better than in days gone by, I would be more than satisfied to die.—E. C. Longmire in New Orleans Picayune.

It Stopped the Fainting.

A story of "fainting beauties" is told in the memoirs of the Rev. Julian Young, subchaplain of Hampton Court palace. One very hot Sunday a young lady, not a resident of the palace, but living in the vicinity, fainted in the chapel during the service. Sir Horace Seymour, a widower, a Waterloo hero, of commanding presence and striking good looks, raised the prostrate lady in his arms, carried her to his apartments, deposited her on a sofa, left her to the charge of his housekeeper and returned to his seat. Strange to say, on the following Sundays a young lady, each time a different one, fainted; and on each occasion the same gallant knight performed the same kind office for the sufferer and then returned to his post. On the last of these three fainting Sundays Lady Seymour, the aunt of Sir Horace, said to the chaplain after service: "I say, Mr. Young, this fashion of fainting will degenerate into an epidemic if it is not put a stop to. With your permission, I will affix before next Sunday this notice in the cloister, at the door of entrance: 'Whereas, a tendency to faint is becoming a prevalent infirmity among young ladies frequenting this chapel, notice is hereby given that, for the future, ladies so affected will not be carried out by Sir Horace Seymour, but by Branscombe, the dustman.'" This warning produced the desired effect, and the plague of fainting beauties was staid.

The Married Belle's Influence.

A woman who has great influence over young men is the young married woman who has been a belle among them and who still has them calling at her home. She is the one who knows what they really are, and if she is a good woman she can do a wonderful amount of good to these young men who admire her and prize her friendship, knowing they cannot keep it unless worthy of it. Her happiness and her husband's prove the best of object lessons. And what sweet praise it is to her to hear that one of these young men has remarked: "Mrs. Youngwife is a superb woman; she keeps us straight and does us ever so much good." It is the sweetest bit of compliment a woman could desire; just as it is the keenest anguish to know that some one we love has done wrong for our sake; or that we have led him to wrongdoing. And from that, dear women, let us all pray to be saved.—Philadelphia Music and Drama.

The Oregon Boot.

A decided novelty in footwear is the "Oregon boot," so called, with one of which a train robber who arrived in St. Louis was manacled. The boot weighed 18 1/2 pounds, and a detective spent fifteen minutes in opening the combination by which it was secured to the prisoner's foot. This hobbled there would seem to be a small chance for a malefactor to effect his flight from custody unless he should somehow learn the combination. Practically he might as well be chained to a fireproof safe.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Smuggling a Painting Out of Italy.

If a usually well informed correspondent is correct, this is how the famous picture of Caesar Borgia, sold for 600,000 francs to the Rothschild family by Prince Borghese, was sent out of Rome. A coating of wax was laid over the famous Caesar, and an artist painted the portrait of Pope Leo XIII on the wax. It was then dispatched to its Parisian destination, the coating of wax carefully peeled off, and the famous Caesar now ornaments the Rothschild's great gallery of masterpieces.—Fall Mall Gazette.

Babies Afraid of Black Clothes.

At sight of a strange person, object or animal a baby will cry. Anything black will produce more disturbance in the mind of a baby than anything white. A child refusing to go to a relative in dark clothes would not hesitate if the suit were changed to a light color, with a white, red or blue necktie.—Baby.

Accustomed to Irish Bogs.

One Irish snipe shooter, Mr. Foster, of Dublin, was used to Irish bogs. He was so cool that he had been known, when bogged and going down, to kill a bird with his right barrel, another with his left, and then throw his gun for a friend to catch.—"Forty-five Years of Sport."

The demand for willow wood for artificial legs has grown immensely in recent years. The funny men on the stage talk glibly of cork legs, but light willow limbs are more popular.

A New York woman photographs odd people in odd situations. She picks up subjects on the streets or anywhere and pays them to sit for her. She sells the photographs to artists.

Patsy Sears, of Howard county, Ind., aged 108 years, has been a church member a hundred years.
