THE JOURNAL'S SIDE OF THE SILVER QUESTION.

The Journal is never ashamed or afraid to declare its convictions on any question. On the silver question, as on the tariff question, the Journal is on the side of the people; it believes that money is merely a measure of value; that real value exists only in those things which are useful and necessary for the comfort and satisfaction of man, and that money comes in only as a basis of trade between men to enable all to have a common standard by which wants and satisfactions are measured. This standard can best be fixed by government acting for the whole people, disinterestedly. The stamp of the government is and should be merely the guarantee of genuineness, quality and quantity, and upon whatever that stamp is placed it should be made equally receivable for the payment of dues and debts, public and private, and when it does that the "money" will be honest, whether made of gold or silver.—Journal, April 29.

The stamp of the government is no better than that of an individual. As long as the government has the gold and goods behind it and is able to pay on demand, then its stamp is good, but when the government fails to have this backing its stamp becomes worthless. The supreme court holds that it is within the sovereignty of congress to issue United States notes, whether in peace or war, and to make them a legal tender, this authority extending to the determination of the volume of such currency. As to their redemption, these notes bear their face a promise to pay, which means in coin, but no time is fixed for their redemption, nor is any interest allowed on them. Such, in fine, is the greenback, both under congressional law and the decision of the supreme court of the United States. There is no law prohibiting the issue of this greenback to the public, and issuing them and in mint stop and silver certificate issue. Why did they not buy them? Because a dollar would in as much as a gold dollar in our own country. If Mr. Sherman wanted a gold dollar he had to pay a premium. Now, Mr. Sherman, if you called at the treasury department, when you were in Washington, you would have seen gold and silver bullion, not coined into money, piled up in the vaults there for every dollar issued by the government. This bullion is bought at the market price and a certificate issued for as many dollars as its value calls for in the market by weight. Take this gold and silver bullion away and let the government have nothing to back it up except its stamp of a promise to pay and you would soon find that a dollar in gold would buy more than any other kind of a dollar in this country.

A BILLION DOLLAR COUNTRY.

The billion dollar country is a proud of its record. It has made this a billion dollar country. For the first time in the history of the exports for twelve months, ending March 31, exceeded one billion dollars, or exactly $1,006,284,506. It takes a billion dollar congress to enact the laws that will bring about such results. How was it done? By the enactment of reciprocity through which the country has been able to demand the removal of restrictions placed by foreign countries on American products, both in Germany and France, for instance. In spite of this record the denocratic free trade papers are continually talking about the McKinley law as a law that restricts exports. There never was a law on the statute books of the nation that has done more for extending the foreign markets, while at the same time building up American industries and widening the American market. During the same year the imports reached $837,053,000, leaving a balance of trade of about a quarter of a billion in favor of this country. Of these imports more than one half, or exactly 55 per cent, came into this country absolutely free. Under the old law 37 per cent of imports in value, came in free, under the McKinley law this has been increased to 55 per cent. Where is there a record of national legislation that is more satisfactory to the people than this?—Iowa State Register.

THE JOURNAL AND SILVER.

Mr. Sherman of the Journal tries to get around the silver question with a lot of stuff about a father repudiating his own offspring and winding up with the following paragraph: "To test this matter the Journal is ready and anxious to pay the editor of THE HERALD or anybody else a twenty per cent premium in gold for all the silver dollars he can buy for seventy cents, or even seventy-four cents."

Now if Mr. Sherman was going to Europe the first thing he would do when he got to New York, he would step into a bank and exchange all of his silver for gold or buy a draft or a bank note in the country to where he was going, and he would be particular to see that the draft called for gold. Why? Because a gold dollar will buy more there than a silver dollar will. But Mr. Sherman does not need go so far for a proof, he can find it right here in America with our sister republic, Mexico. In the city of El Paso, Texas, you can buy a Mexican silver dollar for 80 cents and these dollars have more silver in them than the U. S. silver dollar, and if you are going into Mexico what do you do? Why you go to work and buy up all the Mexican dollars you think you will need while you are there. Why do you do that? Why not take U. S. silver dollars? They pass just as readily in Mexico as the Mexican dollar does. It is just because a gold dollar will buy 20 cents worth more of goods in Mexico than a silver dollar. THE HERALD wants a dollar that will buy just as much goods in Mexico as a gold dollar will. Silver rises and falls in value just the same as iron, tin or any other metal that is mined, and such metal is in demand, and that is one reason to-day that our silver dollar has not 100 cents in it. THE HERALD wants enough silver put into a dollar so that it will strike the medium or center as near as possible it fluctuates in price.
