There are unmistakable signs that the free trade system of England is tottering, and that at least a partial resort to protection by that country is among the probabilities of the near future. The McKinley law has edy at d believe it to be reliable: "I bought a 50-cent bottle of Chamdealt a severe blow to her commerce, and our reciprocity policy is certain to deprive her of many markets from which she has long derived a large with rheumatism at intervals for one year. At the time I bought the Pain Balm I was unbought the Pain dealt a severe blow to her commerce, profit. Her manufacturing indusprofit. > to be well pleased with the situation, on the baggageman's lap and expired. s acc it demonstrates is a direct and some thought in a fit, but probably convincing way the fact that free tale is not a source of strength under the present conditions of civilization. In the contest for commercial advantages throughout the world protection is not a drawback, as the democrats are so fond of asserting. Our foreign trade is increasing at an unprecedented rate, while that of England is steadily decreasing. We are able to compete with other nations and yet not expose our domestic industries to any danger. The tariff is at once both an assurance of safety at home and a means of assurance abroad. Those who argue that it prevents us from gaining access to new markets are contradicted by the record of our growing exports, and the acknowledgment on the part of England that she is losing ground in that respect. The truth is that our system answers our purpose in a most satisfactory and encouraging way. It is not perfect by any means, but in a general sense its operations are such as to vindicate its wisdom and justify its continuance. The lesson of England's misfortune is manifest and important, and it comes in a good time to be of much service to the cause of protection in this country. Our people can not fail to see that free trade is condemned by its results where it has been thoroughly tried, and that the best thing they can do is to maintain the policy that has proved to be so remarkably beneficial.-Globe Democrat.

THE south takes to the free silver saue with a wry face, and while it may take its medicine if contained in a national platform sugar-coated will it does so under protest, and because it would still vote to commit suicide on the solid south principles that still dominate its politics. But it is seeing light, as witness this from the Charleston News and Courier .: "There is no reason why any southern state should be in favor of free coinage, and least of all why any of the states named, each with the distinct understanding that in of which is a large producer of cotton, should imperil its interests on the hazard of cheap money. There is absolutely no danger of losing any of these states in November for the reason given by Mr. Bland; but patents have been granted, has for its we object to his making the silver object the protection of the exposed we object to his making the silver tion. > An Old Man and a Still Older Watch. A hale and hearty old gentleman named Everett Howard, residing on Chelmsford street, visited the city hall the other afternoon. He exhibited a curious watch, which he said was 150 years old, made by a man named Howard, in Liverpool, England. It has been passed from Howard to Howard, and keeps excellent time. Everett Howard came to Lowell in 1843 and was married here in 1847, when he resided on the Merrimack corporation. Mr. Howard was present at the col-lege in Waterville, Me., when General Butler graduated. The Howards are a long lived race, Everett Howard having a sister aged seventy-six and a brother aged seventy-eight.

He is the youngest of the family .-Lowell (Mass.) News.

The Age of the Playing Card. Dr. Rudolph Lothan, of Vienna, says this year "is the fifth century of the playing card." He says the first game of cards ever played was tarok or naili, in which every card was symbolic of "a phase of life, a degree of knowledge or one of the powers ruling human existence." One of the pasteboards was named "Il Misero," doubtless our knave, and was easily involved in all sorts of unpleasant complications. Tarok has been revived in Paris, where the search for novelties is so resentlessly prosecuted, even at the expense of the old.

An English "Home."

It is to be questioned if a scheme which has just taken practical shape in London would find a field over here. A "home" has been established for ladies deprived of their natural support by death, the home to be supported by contributions which would otherwise be expended in costly funeral flowers. It is called after the late Duke of Clarence, whose memory, by the way, is perpetu-ated in so many charitable plans as must almost be confusing.—Her Point of View in New York Times.
