THE EARS WILL SHOW.

The ass in the lion's skin was readily recognized by his ears. The noble beast's skin could not hide them. So it is with Mr. Bryan of this district. His distressing effort at cheap notoriety as a revenue reformer needs only the passing scrutiny of the citizen to detect the assinine ears. The following passage from the remarks of Congressman John Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, during the tariff debate at the present session of congress fully illustrates Mr. Bryan's cheap bid for the farmers' support by the introduction of his binding twine measure. Mr. Dalzell said:

"But the wounds of the farmer are to be healed by giving him free binding twine. A more glaring attempt than this to impose on the credulity of the farmer could not be conceived. The present law calls for a duty of seven-tenths of a cent per pound on binding twine. This twine is made from foreign products, manilla, sisal grass and jute, and from an American product, hemp. The raw materials of its manufacture are free.

"Under the protection afforded by the act of 1883, 2½ cents per pound, an American industry was built up, and we now have thirty-five cordage and binding twine factories that pay out in wages to American workmen the sum of $2,000,000 annually. With what result? to the farmer? With this result, that whereas, before protection he paid 17 cents a pound for his binding twine, he now pays 7½ cents, and his entire supply is furnished by American manufacture. Even the Mills bill placed a protection equivalent at present to 2 cents a pound on binding twine, but the new apostles of English doctrine for American conditions would make it free. Why? Because if there are no importations there is no need for a tariff. A brilliant idea, truly! To repeat my answer to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McMillin], because your neighbor's hogs do not come into your clover patch when the fence is up, you should take down the fence.

"Binding twine is made in India at a cost of $5 per month for labor; it is made in Belfast and Dundee at half the cost for labor that it is with us. The present bill is not even good democratic doctrine. The democratic platform of 1884 says:

"The necessary reduction in taxation can and must be effected without depriving American labor of the ability to compete successfully with foreign labor, and without imposing lower rates of duty than will be ample to cover any increased cost of production which may exist in consequence of the higher rate of wages prevailing in this country."

"And the democratic platform of 1888 reaffirms the same doctrine. 'No man asserts that this seven-tenths cent duty increases the price of the farmers' twine. Let me read you what the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Bryan], who is the champion of this bill, said on the subject:

"We agree there were consumed in this country last year about one hundred million pounds of binding twine. We agree that if a tariff of seven-tenths of 1 per cent is added to the price of the binding twine that it costs the people of this country $700,000 because of that tariff. We agree, also, that no binding twine was imported into this country last year. We agree, therefore, that this tax upon the consumer, it was a tax of $700,000 taken out of the people's pocket, not one cent of which reached the treasury. According to the republican idea that is an ideal tariff; it enhances the maximum of burden with the minimum of revenue.

QUEEN VICTORIA has signed the Behring Sea treaty, which indicates that we have a secretary of state who is a better diplomatist than Lord Salisbury.

The free silver democrats will be compelled to support anti-free silver Cleveland this year just the same as the free trade democrats did twenty years ago, when they supported the protectionist Greeley.

We have received at this office the Evening Repository, of Canton, Ohio, dated Saturday evening, May 7, 1892. It consists of 40 well filled pages, giving all the news of the day and is well illustrated with the industries of Canton. It is one of the best boom additions we have ever seen.

THE democratic New York Sun says, "The present congress, with greedy fingers, has been elbow deep in the people's money." It might have added—and the democratic party in New York, which the Sun boosted and aided, is the most corrupt and unscrupulous organization that ever existed in American politics, and only told the plain truth.

Some of the Grand Army boys may be interested in the following from Alex. B. Pope, A. D. C., Commander, Dep't. Tenn. and Ga. He says: "We have had an epidemic of whooping cough here, (Stewart, Tenn.) and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been the only medicine that has done any good." There is no danger from whooping cough, when this remedy is freely given. It completely controls the disease. 50 cent bottles for sale by F. G. Fricke & Co., druggists.

FACTS FOR AN OBITUARY.

The Good Men Do Lives After Them and Is Detailed to the Reporters.

As disagreeable a duty probably as any that ever falls to the lot of a reporter is the getting of facts for the obituary notices of persons who are not especially prominent. Newspaper men usually shrink from the work and are loath to enter a house of mourning. The exigencies of the profession demand it, however, and strange as it may seem, sometimes the men actually have comical experiences.

This is best illustrated by the narration of a recent occurrence in New York. A death notice had been received late in the evening, and to the trained eye of the night city editor bore all the earmarks of a "good obituary." These are indicated by the pomposity of the notice, the location of the home of the deceased, the name, the wording and numerous other minor details, such as one unfamiliar with newspaper work would scarcely notice.

The reporter assigned to the task proceeded to the residence given with a feeling akin to a desire to exchange places with the corpse. In response to the ring of the bell an Irish young woman, presumably the widow of an elderly man, opened the door of the house, which was in a good neighborhood. The reporter introduced himself and the subject as delicately as possible.

"Oh, I'm delighted to see you," replied the woman effusively, in answer to the deprecating words of the man. "I've always wanted to see a reporter," she added, looking curiously at the specimen before her, as though astonished at seeing a respectable appearing individual.

Then followed the ordinary questions by which the reporter found out when and where the man was born, where he was educated, the list of clubs and fraternal lodges of which he was a member, whether he had fought in the war, and a dozen other things.

"It does seem so strange," remarked the woman. "Here I am telling you all these things, and he will never read your article. He would have been so pleased. You know, he was a literary man himself."

"Indeed?" said the reporter, brightening up at the prospect of swelling his stick of matter to at least a quarter column. "I had forgotten to ask the occupation. Will you kindly furnish me with a list of his works?"

"Oh, he didn't write books!"

"Magazine articles?" queried the reporter, with wavering hopes.

"No," said the woman.

"Newspaper man perhaps?" asked the reporter sadly, for his imaginary quarter column had again shrunk to an actual stick.

"He did not write at all," remarked the woman, at last brought to bay.

"What?" said the reporter, his curiosity at last thoroughly aroused, "not even for trade papers, advertising literature, theatrical posters, programmes?"

"No. His father was an editor, though," exclaimed the woman, with a pleased smile, "and he worked for a publisher. He had the agency for Long Island of the 'Cyclopedia of Useful Information.' Of course you need say nothing about that. Just write it down that he lived a simple, Christian life and was engaged in literary pursuits."—New York Herald.

And Yet He Gave Him Six Months.

A fine, stalwart man, with a frank, open expression, was arranged for stealing a pair of shoes from a dealer. "Did you steal the shoes?" asked the judge. "He caught me, judge, with the shoes and the box in my hand. I'll tell you how it was," began the complainant, but he was cut short and reminded that the prisoner had pleaded guilty. "How did you come to steal the shoes? You look like a hard working man," remarked the court. "Well, I stole them, judge, and he caught me," was the reply. He was committed for six months. The judge remarked later: "I was rather taken with that man. He came up to the bar like a Marc Antony, not with the sleek expression, 'Your honor,' or a whine of any kind. Had he given me any good excuse I would have been very lenient with him, for if I am not very much mistaken in my judgment he is no thief, but an unfortunate fellow who was pinched by poverty."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Carlyle's View of Aprons.

Carlyle in his "Sartor Resartus" was able to find a deep philosophy in aprons. "Aprons are Defenses; against injury to cleanliness, to safety, to modesty, sometimes to roguery. From the thin slip of notched silk (as it were, the emblem and oedipal Ghost of an Apron), which some highest bred housewife has gracefully fastened on; to the thick tanned hide girt around him with thongs, wherein the builder builds and at evening sticks his trowel; or to those jingling sheet iron aprons, wherein your otherwise half naked Vulcans hammer and smelt in their smelt furnace—is there not range enough in the fashion and uses of this vestment?"

A Tree That Furnishes Real Lace.

The lacebark tree grows in the West Indies. It is a lofty tree, with ovate, entire, smooth leaves and white flowers. It is remarkable for the tenacity of its inner bark and the readiness with which the inner bark may be separated—after maceration in water—into layers resembling lace. A governor of Jamaica is said to have presented to Charles II a cravat, frill and ruffles made of it.—Goldthwaite's Geographical Magazine.
