THE PARTY CAN STAND A CONTEST.

Senator Quay, in saying, as he has just said in a newspaper interview, that "a forced nomination of any one would be unfortunate," shows a nervousness regarding the situation which is altogether unwarranted. According to this notion a contest in the Minneapolis convention would be hurtful to the party. The nomination must be practically unanimous, or at least must be conferred on the first ballot, to be of much service. This is a theory which was never prominently suggested on either side in the past, and which will not command ready assent now. It might be well, of course, to settle the question of the nomination without a fight. Contests are apt to provoke ill feeling between the rival aspirants and their friends, and sometimes they produce feuds which endure for years, and which hamper the party in which they exist. Such results, though, come seldom. Rivalries subside after the convention, and, in most cases, the jealousies and bitternesses engendered, so far as regards their active manifestation, die out before the campaign is ended, or, at any rate, are confined to the unsuccessful aspirants themselves, and do not affect their friends. The esprit de corps which exists in both the great parties prevents any extensive prolonged sulking among the defeated men and their followers. The excitement of the canvass and the remembrance of former battles stir the blood and make the rank and file on each side eager for victory. For these reasons contests in national conventions seldom reduce a party's strength at the polls.

It will be conceded, of course, that Mr. Blaine could not afford to take the nomination, providing he were willing to take it in any contingency, unless it came to him without a struggle. His position is peculiar in this respect. He is the foremost in his party, he once led the party to defeat, and he has repeatedly disclaimed any further aspirations toward the nomination. Nothing short of a spontaneous, overwhelming and virtually unanimous demand from his compatriots for his candidacy would justify him in accepting it. None of the other men, however, whose names have been coupled with the nomination, not even Gen. Harrison, are under any such embarrassment. The president could take the nomination after two or three ballots without any material sacrifice of dignity or prestige. It is true the renomination of Jackson and Grant was unanimous, but either of these men would undoubtedly have accepted the candidacy if it were gained by them as the result of a struggle. Lincoln's second nomination came to him on the first ballot, but not by the unanimous voice of the convention, as the Missouri delegation voted for Grant. A contest in the convention would not have hurt any of these men at the polls to any perceptible degree. Nor would Harrison be injured if he were compelled to make a struggle to regain the prize. Neither Sherman nor McKinley would suffer in any way in the estimation of the party by the acceptance of an honor which part of the members of the convention preferred to give to somebody else. Therefore, the party is not at all alarmed at the prospects that a contest may take place in Minneapolis. The longest and most exciting struggle which ever occurred in a republican national assemblage took place in 1880, in which thirty-six ballots were taken, but Garfield, the candidate, was triumphantly elected.—Globe Democrat.

THE Atlanta Constitution is discouraged, and closes a long editor-

al on the democratic situation with

"We do not have the faintest hope that Mr. Cleveland can carry the country. He can not carry his own state, and we are firmly convinced that his nomination will divide the solid south." If it will do this, Mr. Cleveland should be nominated. He could afford defeat for the sake of knowing that he had broken up the fraudulently solid south, which is a disgrace to the country. It is solid only by corruption and bulldozing, and democrats even in the south no longer defend it as honest. They simply justify it on the ground that the end justifies the means.—Inter Ocean.

THE dedication of the new court house evidently threw Brother Race of the Weeping Water Eagle into a fit, as the Eagle rose on high this week with a scream and a flapping of wings which was intended to cause the court house to tumble into the Big Muddy and be swallowed up by the raging torrents. But it did not even shake the walls thereof, and the building still stands, so that when Brother Race comes over to the county seat he can walk into one of the county offices in the building, sit down in a chair, take off his hat and cool his over-heated brow.

ON the 6th of last February Mr.

Blaine wrote to Col. Clarkson as follows:

I am not a candidate for the presidency, and my name will not go before the republican national convention for the nomination. I make this announcement in due season.

There is no evidence that Mr. Blaine has changed his mind since writing the above. On the contrary, it is well known to Mr. Blaine's intimate friends that he still adheres to his determination not to be a candidate.

The constant demand of the traveling public to the far west for a comfortable and at the same time an economical mode of traveling has led to the establishment as what is known as Pullman Colonist sleepers.

These cars are built on the same general plan as the regular first-class Pullman Sleeper, the only difference being that they are not upholstered.

They are furnished complete with good comfortable hair mattresses, warm blankets, snow white linen curtains, plenty of towels, combs, brush, etc., which secure to the occupant of a berth as much privacy as is to be had in first class sleepers. There are also separate toilet rooms for ladies and gentlemen, and smoking is absolutely prohibited. For full information send for Pullman Colonist Sleeper leaflet. E. L. Loman, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Omaha Nebraska.

To Aid Nebraska.

The Burlington & Missouri River railroad has prepared and has now ready for distribution a new hand book, treating of the opportun ties which Nebraska, northwestern Kansas and eastern Colorado offer to farmers, business men and investors.

This book has been gotten out for the information of eastern people, particularly those who have friends west of the Missouri; it is written in pleasant, easily understood style by one who thoroughly knows his subject, and is confidently recommended as likely to stimulate immigration to a very considerable extent.

It pictures Nebraska and those portions of Kansas and Colorado adjacent to it, not as they might be, but as they are.

It is thought that the best method of distributing these hand books is as follows: Parties in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado, having friends in the east who are likely to be interested in such literature as this, are invited to send the names and addresses of these latter to Mr. J. Francis, Gen'l Passenger and Ticket Agent, Burlington Route, Omaha, Neb., who will take pleasure in forwarding, postpaid, to such addresses as many copies as desired.
