

CYCLONE VISITS KANSAS.

Wellington, Kansas, Struck by a Destructive Cyclone.

FIRE BREAKS OUT IN THE DEBRIS

The Grand Army Hall Turned Into a Hospital and the Dead and Wounded are Being Cared For—The City in Ruins.

This morning papers announce that Wellington, Kansas, was struck by terrible cyclone last evening and the entire city was destroyed. About fifty people were killed and 125 injured, but the confusion was so great that the exact loss of life could not be stated definitely last night. Among the dead are:

MRS. WILLIAM SASHEN, KITTIE STRAHN, SILVIA and WALTER FORSYTHE, IDA JONES.

The Wellington hotel and the Phillips house, the two largest hotels in the city were completely wrecked and the ruins of the Phillips house took fire. Many of the guests were doubtless burned to death.

A heavy storm of wind and rain preceded the cyclone about half an hour. A few minutes after nine o'clock the cyclone struck the city, coming from the southwest. There were no premonitory signs. Every body was indoors and the clouds passed with its destructive rush unseen. Washington avenue, the principal business street, is lined on both sides for blocks with ruins. To add to the horror fire broke out in the debris of Colonel Robinson's block and a woman, Mrs. Susan Ashe, is supposed to have perished in the flames, and the Monitor, Press and Voice printing office lie a head of brick and mortar.

Just across the street a laborer named Fanning was taken out of the ruins dead, and there are supposed to be other bodies in the ruins. Hundreds of dwellings are either totally destroyed or more or less damaged. The city is in darkness, as broken mains made it necessary to shut down the gas works and save destruction from fire.

Hon. James Lawrence, candidate for attorney general, had an arm broken. Walter Forsythe was taken from the ruins dangerously wounded, and his brother Ed was talking for an hour before his relief. Seven bodies have been taken out of the Phillips house ruins, and a large force of men are hard at work removing the debris. Two members of the Salvation army are expected to die from injuries received.

At Squire Smith's residence seven persons are more or less injured. The streets are littered with tin roofing, cloth awning, broken glass and timbers.

Everybody is on the streets carrying lanterns, and it is utterly impossible to get to the exact facts. The destruction is simply awful, and every minute adds to the horror of the situation.

The Standard and Mail offices are wrecked. The opera house and dozens of the best business buildings are useless. Fine school buildings and churches are ruined, and the loss will foot up many thousands of dollars. No reports have been received from other points.

The storm came from the southwest and beyond demolishing a few residences did no material damage until Jefferson avenue was reached; here the Lutheran church was totally destroyed. The storm continued eastward, raising every building in the two blocks bounded by Jefferson avenue, Sixth, Seventh and Ninth streets.

Mrs. Sashen and Miss Strahn were sisters. They were killed by the collapse of the Sashen & Kirk carriage factory and their bodies are in the burning ruins of that structure. Silvia and Walter Forsythe received fatal injuries. Ida Jones was a dining room girl in the Phillips house and was instantly killed. Her body was the first to be taken from the ruins of that building.

Grand Army hall has been converted into a hospital and hundreds are now employed in carrying the dead and injured to places of safety.

Once upon a time a sweet faced, black-eyed school marm who was teaching the young ideas how to shoot, in a district not far from Elm wood, and this sweet dispenser of knowledge wanted to come to town every Friday evening and remain over Sunday with her people. About that time in the year there lived a young gentleman in town who owned a livery stable, and he sighed for the company of this young school marm, so he made it a point to "just happen" by the school house every Friday evening with a nice rig and would invite her to ride to town with him, which she did. Finally school was out, the girl departed, the liveryman wrote sweet missives to her but received no reply. He grew desperate and dunned her for $12 for livery hire, and in a few days he received a money order for the amount. The young man was a fish. The young lady paid for her bait.

"A Turkish Bath" "A Turkish Bath" drew a large audience at the Auditorium. The mirth-provoking company were enthusiastically received, and warmly applauded again as their gay sallies, realistic character sketches, or excellent singing received successively the praise which was their due.

For real merriment and an evening's entertainment brim full of fun and wit, without a single objectionable feature, nothing could exceed "A Turkish Bath." The wit of the Irish detective, McGoogle, was irresistible; and the singing of Mr. Eckert won for him repeated rounds of applause. Miss Emma Berg also charmed all with her sweet voice, and received repeated encores, to which she responded most pleasantly. The duet, "Farewell, Love," was especially well rendered by Miss Berg and Mr. Eckert, who responded to an encore with a trio, "I Can't Believe Her Faithless," assisted by the clear, melodious tones of Miss Eckert's alto.

But it was Marie Heath as Little Dot, the pet of "The Sparrows' Roost," who won all with her bright mischief, natural childlike grace and sweet singing. She was especially delightful in her favorite song, "Won't You Come Out and Play?" and responded to an enthusiastic recall with the old but never better done, "Listen to My Tale of Woe."—Spokane Chronicle.
