REPUBLICAN NATIONAL TICKET.

For President
BENJAMIN HARRISON of Indiana.

For Vice-President
WHITELAW RIED of New York.

The defeat of Blaine does not keep him from supporting Harrison and the whole republican ticket.

The republican nominee for the presidency and the republican platform are in perfect harmony with each other.

NOTWITHSTANDING the howling of the democratic press, Blaine gracefully resumes his position of 1888 and desires to be known again as a Harrison man.

The demand for 1-cent letter postage is reiterated in the republican platform, and the republican congress to be elected next fall will see that the people get it.

CLEVELAND has nothing to say about Harrison's renomination. But we should not wonder if he remembers when the same man was nominated four years ago.

PRESIDENT HARRISON promptly sent his check for $200 to the Oil Creek sufferers. In other words he manifested just ten times as much sympathy for them as Cleveland did for the victims of the Charleston earthquake.

REPORTS from the census bureau show that Iowa leads Kansas very considerably in the yield per acre of cereals. The figures for Iowa are as follows: Barley, 25.84; buckwheat, 11.39; corn, 41.28; oats, 39.09; rye, 15.42; wheat, 14.09. For Kansas the figures are: Barley, 23.01; buckwheat, 9.72; corn, 35.40; oats, 30.49; rye, 14.65; wheat, 19.21. In the yield per acre of wheat alone Kansas makes the better showing.

A NEW ORLEANS grand jury has made a report, in which it says that gambling cannot be suppressed and recommends high license as a means of controlling and limiting the evil. The suggestion is made to the legislature that a uniform license of $200 per month be assessed upon each gambling house in New Orleans, the license fees to be turned over to the charity hospital. As the gamblers are not likely to do much for charity voluntarily, and as they are pretty sure to go right on pursuing their calling in New Orleans, perhaps some good would come of such a law. Two hundred dollars a month from each gambling house would give charity a great boom.—Omaha Bee.

ORIGIN OF OUR ELAC.

As our existence as a nation had its origin in the English colonies, so our national ensign had for its basis the flag of England, the mother country from whom the colonies revolted. The yoke was shaken off; but the impress remains on our character; and the colors were retained.

The English flag was the one in use in the Anglo-Saxon settlements in America from the time of the arrival of the Mayflower until January, 1776. It was a red flag with a blue canton, or corner, upon which was the cross of St. George, the patron saint of England, and afterwards the united crosses of St. George and St. Andrew, the patron saint of Scotland.

During the stirring times just preceding the Revolution, the style of the American flag was as chaotic as were the affairs of the country. Some dozen or more different ones were carried on different occasions, each indicating, in some way or another, the state of mind of the people. But in the latter part of 1775 it was deemed necessary to settle upon some design, and it was decided to retain the united crosses of King James on a blue ground in the corner, thereby recognizing the sovereignty of England, but to still further carry out the idea of a union flag by replacing the red field with one of thirteen red and white emblematic of the union of the thirteen colonies against tyranny and oppression. The new striped flag was called the "grand union flag." It was not destined to wave long, for it soon became necessary to abandon the last symbol of loyalty, and on June 14, 1777, the blended crosses of King James were erased from the blue canton, and the American congress resolved "That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." June 14 is now known as "flag day," and is celebrated as such by the Sons of the American Revolution.—From "How to Make an American Flag," in Demorest's Family Magazine for July.

Half Rates to New York.
To accommodate Christian Endeavorers and their friends along its line who desire to attend the national convention of the Y. P. S. C. E. at New York, July 7-10, the Burlington route will on July 4 run a special train from Omaha through to New York, via Chicago and Niagara Falls, leaving at 11:40 p. m., after arrival of all trains from the west. A rate of one fare for the round trip has been authorized and will be open to the general public. Tickets, good to return any time within thirty days from date of purchase, will be on sale at dates to be announced later. The low rates in force, the through car facilities at the disposal of travelers by the Burlington route, and the delightful season of the year, combine to make this an unequalled opportunity of visiting the east. Remember that you can purchase tickets from your station agent through to New York. Full information may be had upon application to the local agent of the B. & M., or by addressing J. Francis, General Passenger Agent, Omaha.

Just as sure as hot weather comes there will be more or less bowel complaint in this vicinity. AN INTERESTING QUESTION THAT MAY NEVER BE ANSWERED.

Are the Movements of the Head and Face After Decapitation Involuntary or Are They Attended with Some Slight Action of the Will—Some Experiments.

The question of the duration of consciousness in the brain of criminals after execution by hanging or by the guillotine is being discussed with greater interest than ever since Anastay, the murderer of Baroness Dellard, paid his debt to society. It is said that this remarkable criminal sent to his brother a letter on the subject as follows:

The separation of my body and that which constitutes my thinking being cannot so soon be accomplished. I believe there is a survival of about an hour. Come, then, Leon, be present at my execution and insist that my head be given to you. Call me with your voice and my eyes will reply to you.

This is but the repetition of a popular belief that has prevailed for centuries. There is a legend of a state execution in England at an epoch when the ax and block were in use, which sets forth that after the instrument had fallen the person whose head was on the block exclaimed, "You have missed me!" to which the executioner replied with a slight kick that sent the head rolling to a distance. The story never gained much credence, but is still worthy of discussion. Its truth or falsity would depend on the possibility of the instrument being so thin and sharp that the walls of the veins would not be displaced, in which case the circulation of the blood might continue for a few seconds, and whether consciousness might continue for a moment after the vertebrae of the neck was severed. This last difficulty would be the greatest, since utter unconsciousness is supposed to be simultaneous with the severing of the spinal cord or the breaking of the neck. In any event, scientists who have taken the trouble to study the faces of the guillotined for a few seconds after the fatal stroke, or who have made experiments with decapitated animals, do not favor the theory.

Several French physicians, and among them Dr. Paul Loyer, now deceased, but once a professor at the Sorbonne, have experimented with dogs, using for their hanging or decapitation machinery like that employed in public executions. The dog was chosen for the experiments as having the most mobile face and being able to reproduce the movements which in rare cases have been observed in human subjects. Persons whom this treatment of dumb animals might revolt are begged to remember that the suffering is much less than in vivisection, since these methods of execution are generally recognized as producing the least pain. The guillotine employed by Dr. Loyer was similar to that used for the execution of ordinary criminals in France. It consisted of a triangular knife or ax, surmounted by a mass of lead weighing over twenty pounds and falling over six feet upon the neck of the animal, which was severed at the third vertebra. The phenomena observed were similar to those remarked by other French and by foreign savants whose experiments have been less elaborate.

At the moment the head was detached from the body the mouth opened wide, as if the animal was making an extraordinary effort at inhalation. The tongue was applied to the lower part of the mouth and underwent a brief period of agitation. The eyelids were closed with light contractions. Then the eyes were opened and rolled from side to side and top to bottom, the pupils in the meantime gradually contracting. At the same time the jaws were opened and violently closed, and the face was rapidly convulsed. This was followed by changes at the corners of the mouth, vibration of the nostrils, trembling of the lips and erection of the ears. The ensemble of these movements constituted a series of horrible grimaces like those seen on the face of the guillotined, and seemed to express the most intense agony. If the cornea of the eye was touched the eyelids closed, but if an object, no matter of what kind, was placed before the eye there was no movement. Neither did crying nor whistling into the ears of the dog appear to cause the slightest sensation. The pinching of the tongue caused a slight shrinking of that organ. Although the pupil of the eye was contracted, the approach of a light rendered the orifice still smaller.

These phenomena occupy about ten seconds, and are followed by a period of repose continuing to the fifteenth or twentieth second, during which the mouth rests closed and the eyes open and without movement. At the end of this time the mouth opens and closes quickly, the nostrils dilate and contract. During this time, although the irritation of the cornea has caused a slight winking, neither whistling in the ear nor touching the tongue or nostrils with ammonia or cologne has been able to produce any effect. The opening and closing of the mouth resemble yawning, and are reproduced a dozen times, after which the motions gradually cease. Then the cornea loses its sensibility to the touch, though, half a minute having elapsed, the yawning is still active. The pupil of the eye dilates at the approach of light, but does not contract, and the cornea loses its glistening appearance. At the end of two minutes the yawning ceases.

The duration of the movements of the head and the head takes a corpulent look.—San Francisco Chronicle.
