

Cleared away
—all the troubles and ailments that make woman's life a burden to her. She's relieved, cured, and restored, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, all "female complaints," are cured by it. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and strength.

It's a powerful general, as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, imparting vigor and strength to the entire system. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine—not a beverage.

If you're a tired, nervous, or suffering woman, then the "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine that's guaranteed, in every case, to bring you help. If it doesn't give you satisfaction, you have your money back.

WHITELEW RIED
of New York.

MINNEAPOLIS encouraged by her grand work in making a president, has again turned her attention to flour and last week sent out 214,930 barrels. This is the largest output on record for a single week.

The democrats raise a howl in the platform against the McKinley tariff law and demand its repeal. Why don't they repeal it? They have a majority in congress but are afraid to tackle it.

The democratic platform on the silver question as was predicted straddles the question. It first declares for free coinage and then in the same breath denounces the dollar unit of silver to be equal in intrinsic and exchangeable value as gold.

BREK HILL and Flower remind one of the old story of the two colored brethren who went out to hunt bears. They found the hole where the bear kept house. One of them crawled in while the other kept guard. Suddenly Mr. Bear came home, and as he entered his den was seized by the tail by the outside man. Then came the voice from the inside, "What's that darkens de hole?" From outside the answer: "You'll see what darkens de hole if tail hold breaks." Governor Flower is a practiced gymnast, but his "tail-hold" is precarious and uncertain—and the bald-headed old bachelor is doomed meat for the bear—Inter Ocean.

DEMOCRACY AND BUSINESS INTERESTS.

Responding to the toast "The Republican Party on Guard," at the Ann Arbor banquet, Gen. Russell A. Alger arraigned the democratic party not only as a destructive, anti-national organization, but as equally opposed to the economic welfare and prosperity of the country. Gen. Alger is a good witness to prove either proposition. As a gallant Union soldier he had many opportunities during his prolonged army service to size up southern democracy under its true colors, and arrayed in the proper uniform. Since the war, and in the course of an extended and successful business experience, Gen. Alger has often been called on to study the effect of democratic policies on the industries of the country, and he finds that party about as dangerous in one capacity as the other. The democratic party has never succeeded in substituting a low revenue tariff for a protective one and maintaining the same for ten years without enormously reducing the wages of labor, paralyzing great industries and involving the country in terrible distress. On each and every occasion where it has been able to carry out its traditional policy of "tariff reform" the country has been made to suffer dreadfully.

No intelligent democrat, familiar with history and with a decent respect for truth, will claim that the business interests of the north and west have ever been able to withstand ten years of democratic "tariff reform."

American workmen of no class have been able to preserve their wages and employment unimpaired through so much as a single decade of a democratic tariff for revenue only. Such tariffs when permitted to stand so as to work out their legitimate results have proved indeed that they were for "revenue only," and with nothing to maintain wages or protect the rights of labor. In no case has the country prospered for ten years under a democratic tariff. Disaster has been the invariable result.

In strict justice it should be said that there were two excepted classes on whom the heavy hand of the democratic tariff reformers was not laid in the way of affliction. They were the old slave-holders of the south and the northern importers of foreign goods—two classes that held together in firm alliance, and thrived under a low tariff just as all others suffered. Their chief interest was in foreign, not in domestic markets. As the northern farmers, manufacturers, business men and wage-workers were damaged by a low tariff, the planters who grew cotton for foreign markets, and the importers who wanted to bring back foreign goods in exchange for the great southern product, chuckled to themselves and declared it an ill wind that blew nobody any good. Disastrous as it was to all others the low tariff policy was desired by cotton growers and importers for the express purpose of increasing their profits at the expense of other interests, particularly those of the north. And as the planters and importers ruled the democratic party it was compelled to persist in its low tariff policy and look complacently on the ruin it wrought.

EROS COMES TO STAY.

Once a Fowler, young and artless,
To the quiet greenwood came;
Full of skill was he and heartless
In pursuit of feathered game;
And betimes he chanced to see
Eros perching in a tree.

"What strange bird is that, I wonder?"
Thought the youth, and spread his net,
Eros, chuckling at the blunder,
Gayly scampered here and there.
Do his best, the simple clod
Could not snare the agile god.

Blubbering, to his aged master
Went the Fowler in dismay,
And confided his disaster
With that curious bird that day:
"Master, hast thou ever heard
Of so ill disposed a bird?"

"Heard of him? Aha, most truly!"
Quoth the master with a smile;
"And thou, too, shall know him duly,
Thou art young, but bide awhile:
And old Eros will not fly
From thy presence by and by."

"For when thou art somewhat older
That same Eros thou didst see,
More familiar grown and bolder,
Shall become acquaint with thee;
And when Eros comes thy way,
Mark my word he comes to stay."
—Eugene Field in Chicago News.

The Cobweb as a Styptic.

When Bottom was "translated" and introduced to the attendants of Titania he endeavored to ingratiate himself with Good Master Cobweb by saying, "When I cut my finger I will make bold with you." To arrest bleeding the application of a cobweb to the wound has long been a rural custom. Experience has shown that the gossamer of which the web is composed forms a very useful styptic, but a very fatal objection to its use arises from the fact that as an application to an open wound it can never be guaranteed as surgically clean, forming as it does a net for insects and at the same time food for the germs of many an infectious disease.

Evidence of this was produced before the Liverpool coroner recently touching the death of Martha Roberts, who, following the timehonored custom, had applied a cobweb to her wounded hand to stop the bleeding. Blood poisoning followed upon its application, and this terminated, unhappily, in a fatal issue. It is not a solitary case. The principles of asepticism have not yet become part of the intellectual equipment of the people, neither have its lessons succeeded in overcoming prejudice.—London Lancet.

A Matter of Opinion.

She had been having fun with Dudekins right along and he made up what mind he had to get even. It took the form of a brilliant and cogent conundrum, whose answer Dudekins thought was locked in his manly bosom.

"I have a conundrum for you, Miss Fannie," he said, when he saw her next. "Ah," she replied, "what is it? Who gave it to you?"

"I made it up myself," he asserted, brimming somewhat.

"Indeed! What is it?"
"Why are my clothes like the moon?"
She hesitated a moment and Dudekins began to look triumphant.

"You may think," she said slowly, and Dudekins somehow felt the sand slipping from under him, "it is because they have a man in them, and you have a perfect right to think as you please, but, Mr. Dudekins, opinions differ."—Detroit Free Press.

Leaves Used for Paper.

Leaves of trees were used for writing purposes very early by the Egyptians, and probably by the Greeks. The Hindus continued the use of this material until within a few centuries. Even at the present time books of leaves are not uncommon in the south of India and the island of Ceylon. The leaves of some Asiatic trees, from their size and smoothness, are admirably adapted for books. If we may judge from the name "leaf" being still applied to the paper of books, we should imagine these leaves to have been formerly the principal material in use.—New York World.

A Cunning Child.

"Oh, Tom, the baby is so sweet! Today he took off his shoe and threw it in the fire, and when I told him that he was a bad, bad boy he only said 'Nah.'"
"Nah, eh? Well, what do you think I'm made of—money? That's the second pair he's lost in a week."
"Oh, no, dear; it was the mate of the one he tore to pieces."
"Oh, that's different—isn't he cunning!"—Harper's Bazar.

A Loving Jay.

Olive Thorne Miller tells of a jay that she once tamed, and that repaid her kindness with every mark of gentle regard. The jay never squawked at her as he would at others, but whistled gently and cooingly. He always got as near her as possible, and did as near kissing as a bird can; that is, he laid his beak on her cheek.
