A Red Headed Girl Talks.
Many people in Chicago are familiar with the sight of a red headed girl who sometimes rides a spirited white horse through the principal streets of the city, and sometimes drives a team of whites attached to a chariot. The writer hailed her and brought her to and asked her of her mission. She asked if public opinion was to the effect that she was making a fool of herself. Her answer to her query has no connection with the story:
"I am making an honest living," she said. "I am not more conspicuous in my manner of doing than that are some others of my own sex in what they do. I know, and so do you, that if I put on a subdued garb and went from house to house with the articles I have to sell I would not make enough to earn a cracker. I must do something that has in it an attempt at originality in order to make people talk. When one succeeds in doing that an entering wedge has been found. It is a hard world to please. If I pursued some beaten path, and failed the world would turn me away when I became an object of charity. I would be a burden to society. As it is I make my own living. I suppose I am severely criticised for the show I make of myself. In addition to the conspicuous part I play, that which I have to offer is meritorious and contributes to health. Am I as big a fool as some think me?"
And with that she clucked to her gray steed, which cantered away, carrying on its back philosophy as well as red hair. - Chicago Tribune.

Genuine Bay Rum.
Genuine bay rum is always imported. There are few barber shops where the genuine article is used. Genuine bay rum is manufactured only in the West Indies. It is the distillation of the green leaves and berries of the bayberry tree, mixed with absolutely pure rum, St. Croix being used in the very best quality of the preparation.
There is but one true bayberry, but there are many varieties of it in the West Indies, and so closely do they resemble the Primemora oeris, or true bay, that great care is necessary in gathering the leaves, for the presence of a small quantity of the leaves of any other variety is sufficient to destroy the entire product of a still. Ripe berries are mixed in the still with the leaves. The best bay is distilled by steam in copper pipes, but the ordinary commercial spirit, such as bay rum is made from here, is distilled over an open fire.
The genuine steam distilled bay spirit is not only many times stronger than the other, but the refreshing odor that characterizes it is ten times as lasting. The West Indians find the true bay rum so necessary to their comfort among the numerous discomforts attending a life in the climate of their country that they use about all that is made, and hence its scarcity in this and other countries. - Interview in New York Evening Sun.

Twenty-five Hundred People at Dinner.
Some time ago the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour was entertained at a big banquet in the Waverley market, Edinburgh. Two thousand five hundred guests sat down at table. There were 360 waiters, sixty wine butlers and fifty-four superintendents engaged to wait upon them.
Two kitchens were specially erected in the market in which to prepare the banquet. One kitchen had fifty-four Bunsen burners, representing one for each table. There were four large steam boilers for heating puddings, seven stoves for the boiling of sauces and for frying purposes, and three boilers of large size, each with a capacity of about seventy gallons, for dealing with the plum puddings which formed part of the dessert.
The quantities of viands were 150 turkeys, 200 fowls, 400 game pies, 2,500 oyster patties, 200 gallons of turtle soup, about half a ton of sirloin of beef, and jelly and cream shapes to the number of 600. There were 20,000 plates required and 30,000 pieces of silver, including spoons, knives and forks; 10,000 wine glasses and about a thousand pieces of decorative ware for the tables. - London Tit-Bits.

Electricity for Deaf Mutes.
One of the recent medical applications of electricity is in the treatment of deafness. The apparatus for this purpose comprises a battery, a belt, an electrode supporter on the belt and shaped to rest on the ear, and connections between the electrode and the battery. This provides a convenient and efficient mode of receiving the current, which can be applied in finely graduated strength.
Superintendent Johnson, of the Deaf and Dumb institute at Indianapolis, is reported as having found in a series of experiments that the phonograph concentrates the sound at the drum of the ear in such a way that many of the pupils, otherwise deaf, are thus enabled to hear. Out of fifty-six boys and girls, only three girls were unable to hear anything at all, while forty could hear music and twenty-six could distinguish spoken words. - New York Telegram.

Snakes Used by Charmers
Cobras are selected by the so called snake charmers of both Egypt and India for their performances. The Egyptian charmers sometimes pretend to change the serpent into a rod, and according to Geoffrey St. Hilaire, this appearance can be induced by giving a strong squeeze to the animal's neck, which induces a convulsive rigidity from which the animal soon recovers. It need hardly be said that the snake charmers always carefully extract the fangs of the snakes they use. - Quarterly Review.

Johnny's Mind Dissatisfied.
Mr. Fizzletop was under the painful necessity of administering a severe castigation to his son Johnny. After he had completed his labors he said sternly to the suffering victim:
"Now tell me why I punished you."
"That's it," sobbed Johnny; "you nearly found the life out of me and now you don't even know why you did it." - Exchange.

BUYING PICTURES.

A REPORTER CHATS WITH SEVERAL WELL KNOWN ARTISTS.

The Painters Fretfully Generally Agree That One Should Buy the Paintings Which Please Him—Judgment Is Capable of Cultivation and Will Improve.
"How do people buy pictures?" Colin Campbell Cooper repeated. "Well, I suppose the majority of collectors consult the advice of a dealer or some artist, and yet there are those, not pretentious connoisseurs, either, that know a good thing when they see it, and evince unusual wisdom in their purchases. To some, however, self reliance in investing on a large scale in paintings has proved rather a disastrous experiment. The other day a collection made by a man thirty or forty years ago was sold. There was hardly half a dozen good things in it, simply because he bought and he did not know what he was getting."
"Art in this country is gradually waking up. Perhaps the Centennial might be called the American Renaissance. We know infinitely more about art than our grandparents did, and with opportunities increasing from year to year it is fair to suppose our children will show a still more marked improvement in taste. Greater facilities for traveling have done much to bring about a change in our little world, and the tendency of our art is rather toward the cosmopolitan than provincial. Naturally, time is required to educate the public taste along artistic lines."
"I think people will buy more pictures when they understand painting is not an accomplishment merely a pleasure to the eye, but that it is a part of education, of civilization. It will require time to realize this. Exhibitions are visited and the majority like to look at pictures with an admiration rather ephemeral. When the picture is out of sight the impression is gone. With a general diffusion of art paintings will be bought not solely because they appeal to the senses, to personality, but for their artistic qualities; not simply because the subject illustrated is rather a pretty idea, but because the work is technically a good art production."

Stephen Ferris said: "The world is full of good pictures to be bought for reasonable prices, but unfortunately many thousands of dollars, many fortunes, are spent for nonsense, while good work remains unsought and unbought. Common sense is happy capital in picture buying as in any other business. One can hardly provide a set number of rules to be observed in buying. Many books have been written on military science, yet the world has seen comparatively few fine generals. Judgment rules the world, and in picture buying one person is more successful than another because a spirit of superior intelligence dictates his purchases."
Thomas Eakins would like to have people buy pictures that please them and appeal to their taste. "The majority are afraid to buy what they like; they must have some one else's advice. Well, if they start with bad art, perhaps before long they will come to the good. Let people buy what they want."
"I have not thought much about buying pictures," said Mr. Frederick Waugh. "We artists are more chiefly concerned in trying to sell them. It is the privilege of the artist to paint pictures which appeal to people; which they understand and want to have for their own. But he should have a high standard, and he cannot succeed if he lowers it to cater to the popular taste. He is fortunate if in working out his ideas he pleases the public and yet does not lose his independence nor forfeit his originality. His work may be appreciated by large numbers, but it is always certain that some few will recognize his endeavor and will want to buy it."
"In the Old World art is accessible to all. The Luxembourg and the Louvre are filled permanently with the masterpieces of all ages, the best that have been done. There, too, the spirit of union is strong among artists. They gather together and talk of everything pertaining to the art world, consequently they live entirely in a congenial climate and they grow and develop in an essentially art atmosphere. Impressionism? Yes, this is the great word nowadays. Many have an idea that it is a synonym for vaguely treated and partially unfinished pictures. Impressionism claims to record facts as observed by the artist. Sincerity to nature is its aim. After all, there is nothing so beautiful as truth, and the nearer we get to it, as we find it in nature, the better artists we are."
"Many Americans buy pictures," Mr. F. de B. Richards responded, "because they have accumulated money, and pictures are the proper thing to have. Generally they know very little about it, and a dealer does the work for them. If people purchase pictures to flatter their vanity, let them spend big sums and buy high priced pictures. If they buy for pleasure, let them buy what interests them. I remember meeting Edwin Forrest after a sale. 'I've bought a picture,' said he. 'You told me not to do it, because very likely it is not original. But it pleases me, and I should buy it if it were by somebody I never heard tell of.' A picture pleasing to the eye is a source of education for the time being at least. Adverse criticism may lead a man to scrutinize it and study it more closely than if he had bought one he did not like half so well."
"I think I should be inclined to buy what I liked personally," was the opinion of Edwin Swift Balch, "not forgetting that the pictorial qualities should not be lost sight of in the desire to get a pleasing subject. Good handling, the proper placing of values and meritorious color, allied to a sympathetic subject, will tend to keep our interest in a painting alive." - Philadelphia Times.

How the Map of Peking Was Made.
How a military map of Peking was secretly made is told by General Sir Robert Biddulph. During the China war of 1860, in which Sir Robert was engaged, our army was greatly embarrassed by the absence of any map of the city. But it happened that the Russian legation had, only a few months before, contracted to make a map in spite of the jealous watchfulness of the Chinese. They had sent an officer, in a small covered cart, such as they use to carry their women about, completely covered in. An indicator was attached to the wheel. He drove for a certain distance to a certain crossroad, for example, and "took a shot" with his instrument; then down the next road, and in that way, made a complete plan of Peking, with all its streets and roads, both in the Tartar city and in the Chinese city. General Ignatieff, who produced the map, offered its use to the English. There were no photographers then attached to the army; but an Italian photographer, who had followed the army for his own private purposes, being set to work, produced a number of copies, which proved extremely serviceable. - London News.

Faith of Italian Fishermen.
The blind faith of the Italian fishermen in the efficacy of holy relics is pathetic. Many of them keep themselves in a state of utter impoverishment in providing necessary amulets and charms. Not only is the fisherman's person covered with these, but his boat must also possess all possible saving power through these religious appliances. Should some great storm arise and genuine danger come, one by one these objects are cast upon the waves with a faith that is positively sublime. Meanwhile his wife ashore, possessed of the same implicit and pious confidence, gives her most precious relics to the sea that her husband may come safe to land. And I have no doubt that when fatal disaster comes, as it always does, this man sinks into the silence beneath the tempest with his last spark of vital consciousness an undimmed flame of trust and faith. - Exchange.

Greivous Superstition in Hungary.
A strange story of superstition is reported from Homoloz, in Hungary. Several bodies of men had been found there with their heads cut off. An investigation was made by the police, and it turned out that these mutilations had in every instance been committed by young men who were betrothed to the widows of the decapitated persons. The husbands had died a natural death, and their widows believed that in case they married a second time their first husbands would reappear and destroy their wedded happiness. Hence they had persuaded their new bridegrooms to decapitate their deceased partners. - Pall Mall Gazette.

A Judge Compliments a Lawyer.
It is related that Judge Jere Balch said of Thad Stevens: "That he was one of the brightest men ever born, and could say the smartest things, but that, so far as being under any sense of obligation to his creator for superior mental endowments, his mind was a bowling wilderness."

Saved by His Boots.
General Marbot tells, in his "Memoirs," how his light boots once saved him from being killed by Austrian lancers. At the battle of Eckmuhl he was ordered by Marshal Lannes to conduct a regiment of cuirassiers to a point where it was to charge a regiment of Croats. The French charged and annihilated the Croats, but carrying their charge too far, were in their turn repulsed by a regiment of Austrian lancers. As the French retreated at a gallop they came to where Marbot was standing, his horse having been killed. Only a few hundred feet intervened between the lancers and the cuirassiers, and if Marbot had been left behind he would have been killed.
Two mounted soldiers gave him their hands, and thus, half lifted from the ground, he bounded along, while they galloped at a rapid pace into their own lines.
"It was time for my gymnastic course to end," he writes, "for I was completely out of breath and could not have continued. I learned then how inconvenient are the heavy long boots of the cuirassiers in time of war, for a young officer in the regiment who, like me, had his horse killed under him, and was supported by two of his comrades on the return gallop in the same manner I was, found himself unable to keep pace with the horses on account of his heavy boots. He was left behind, and was killed by an Austrian lancer, while I escaped by reason of my light boots."

Took the Lesson to Heart.
"Going home!" he exclaimed. "Well, I should say I was going home."
"Oh, well, there's no hurry. Wait a few minutes."
"Not a minute. I'll never be late to any kind of a meal again. My wife has taught me better."
"Curious lecture?"
"Never a lecture, but—well, you've eaten steak?"
"Certainly."
"Real nice, tender, juicy steak?"
"Of course."
"With the potatoes just right?"
"Yes."
"There's nothing in the same class with it when a man is real hungry, is there?"
"No; I can't say that there is."
"Tomatoes, croquettes, terrapin and all such things have to take a back seat, don't they?"
"Yes."
"Well, did you ever eat a real good steak cold?"
"Um, yes; I believe I have."
"Ah! Now you're in my class. I was half an hour late yesterday and she just let one of the finest steaks I ever saw stand on the table till I came. Did you ever try to measure the amount of regret in every mouthful of cold steak that you could have had hot?"
"Go home, old man. Your wife has all the best of it." - Chicago Tribune.
