She Committed Suicide.

Mrs. F. D. Boe, at Watkins, left this letter: "My husband—Forgive me if I cause you trouble, but I suffer so. You do not know what these long, wakeful, wretched nights are to me, and I am so tired, darling—the pain will never be better. It is not easy to take my own life, but I have been sick so long. Good-by, my husband, I love you—your wife." This is but one of thousands that give up, instead of using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and being speedily cured of their wretchedness. Go to F. G. Robert Shiffler, while playing ball Saturday in Philadelphia, was struck on the temple with the ball and died yesterday from the effects of the blow.

General John H. Stubbs, the chief pension examiner at Chicago, has just unearthed a large pension fraud. It appears that Dr. John S. Taylor was a surgeon in the Twenty-third Illinois volunteer infantry. He lost his health in the service of his country and in March, 1869, made an application for a pension. Two months later Dr. Taylor was adjudged insane and sent to the asylum at Jacksonville, Illinois. Since then he has been hopelessly insane and has been by turns confined as a pauper in the asylums at Dunning and Kankakee, where he now is, a man sixty-seven years of age. His wife, Mrs. Alice L. Taylor, who lives at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, and who has been prominent as a lecturer and writer on temperance, has been drawing her husband's pension of $72 a month since 1874, not one penny of which has been spent for the benefit of the insane man. In all she has received from the government $16,564. Mrs. Taylor invested it in securities and at the advice of District Attorney Milchrist, she returned $8,100 to be spent for the benefit of Mr. Taylor.

The reported success of Melbourne, the rain wizard, in Colorado has induced the efforts to bring him to Lincoln, or a near-by locality. Correspondence the last week culminated in an agreement by Melbourne to sprinkle five Nebraska counties with a good shower of rain. If he succeeds he is to get $25,000 to be paid in subscriptions. The counties selected for operation are Lancaster, Seward, York, Hamilton and Fillmore, situated in a line from west to east in the order named. Details of the test have not been fully arranged, but it is to occur within a week, at a point yet to be designated in one of the counties named.

W. J. Campbell of Illinois was elected chairman of the republican national committee in place of J. S. Clarkson, who refused to be a candidate for renomination, and De Young of California was chosen vice president. Carter of Montana was elected secretary.

The Mississippi river is reported as being higher than was ever known before, and a fuel famine is threatened at Rock Island, Davenport and other towns along the river, as all of the coal roads are under water.

Mrs. John Skillman of Phillipsburg, N. J., while playing with a flobert rifle yesterday, accidentally discharged the weapon, the ball passing through the heart of her eleven-year-old daughter, killing her instantly.

A Mormon bishop named Lot Smith, who used to be a Danite chief during the overland route days, and who fled to Arizona when the government got after the polygys is reported killed by the Indians. From his ancient reputation one would judge that the Navajoes got the right man. He is generally believed to have been a major in the Mormon battalion that perpetrated the Mountain Meadow massacre.—Lincoln Journal.

The quiet little village of Central City is all broken up over a church trial wherein Hon. N. R. Persinger figured quite prominently with having too much freedom with a certain young lady. It is understood that he will be churched.

BEFORE HE THOUGHT.

The Poor Fellow Was Really Hungry and Spoke His Mind Too Frankly.

Tom De Witt, Jack Ford and Ed Stillman had been living on cigars and hope for two days and were nearly starved to death.

They had decided to honor some of their Vassar friends with a visit, at the time of the commencement, when the college discipline is somewhat relaxed; but a short stay in the place had convinced them that the fare of the Poughkeepsie boarding house was inadequate to satisfy Murray Hill appetites.

So when, after a morning drive, the girls announced that they intended to effectually silence the current feeble sneer at the cooking abilities of fair collegians by giving the party a lunch prepared by themselves, there was joy in the hearts of the men. At the word "lunch" Tom looked at Ed and Ed looked at Tom, and Jack looked straight into the face of the prettiest girl and said most felicitously, "Oh, thank you!"

It was to be served in one of the rooms at 2 o'clock; "in the meantime they would stroll about the grounds and get up an appetite."

At last the lunch came. It was a "pink" one. The table was artistically and tastefully decorated. Big pink bows and bunches of roses covered the cloth, and elaborately painted dinner cards directed the guests to their seats.

As course succeeded course the men began to wonder where the substantial were coming in, and to realize that a third disappointment had fallen to their lot.

The little tubs of deviled salmon, the impalpable croquettes with tender asparagus tips, the tiny dabs of shrimp salad in the center of cool, green lettuce leaves, the salted almonds, the olives, the meringues glaze and the strawberry sherbet were all very dainty and delicate, but not particularly satisfying to earthly mortals whose thoughts were running on thick, juicy English chops and big pewter mugs the size of an infant's bathtub.

And when as a finishing touch came little packages of tutti frutti, cunningly tied up in pink ribbons, were passed around on a silver plate, the men felt unequal to further conversational effort.

A few hours after the feast Tom De Witt remarked that it was time for them to be starting, as they expected to catch the 7:50 train for New York.

"Oh, you'd better stay over until the 10:10," remonstrated a sweet sophomore; "you will just spoil your evening. What will you do when you get back to the city?"

Here was the great opportunity of Jack's life, and unconsciously he rose to it.

"Oh," he said earnestly, "we'll go straight to a hotel and get something to eat, for we haven't had a square meal since we have been in this town!"

For a moment three girls stared blankly at each other, and then the young men gathered their hats and canes together and, saying hurriedly "good nights," sped, with horizontal coat tails, in the direction of the depot.—Harry Romaine in Homemaker.

How the Cobra Gives Warning.

The most dangerous reptiles of India and Africa are the cobras. No snakes, not even rattlesnakes, are more dreaded, and with reason. As the rattlesnake warns the ear by its significant "rattle," so the cobra warns the eye by the mode in which they expand the upper part of the body when irritated. This expansion is produced by a sudden movement of the ribs of that region of the body. Usually they incline backward, but the animal, when irritated, makes them stand out at right angles to the body, and so, of course, forces outward the skin which covers them. Thus the neck, or part just behind the head, becomes greatly expanded and flattened, as it also does, though in a less degree, in the Australian blacksnake. This expansion is called a hood, and so the animals are called hooded snakes. In some of them there is on the back of the hood a dark mark, something like a pair of spectacles, and they have therefore been called spectacle snakes.—Quarterly Review.

How Hawthorne Wrote.

We never think of local color in connection with Hawthorne. Apparently he didn't need to put it on. Perhaps he would not have understood about it. He might have thought that the counterpart of the literary term (local color) applied socially would refer to the women who paint, the term has such an artificial sound. One has an idea of a colored photograph; the local color is not a part of the substance, but is imposed. Hawthorne was not conscious of any necessity of giving local color to his creations. He wrote of that into which he was born, and his creations, even when they were in foreign settings, glowed with that internal personality which is never counterfeited by veneering.—Charles Dudley Warner in Harper's.

Definition of a Journalist.

"A man of literature compelled by circumstances to be also a man of business." That is the definition of a journalist, given by Mr. Sala. It is a good enough definition in its way, though it cannot be considered as invariably accurate. There are a good many soi-disant journalists who are certainly not "men of literature," and a good many more, whose claim to the title of journalist is unquestioned, who are certainly not "men of business."—London Globe.

Nearly $100,000,000 a Year.

Mr. James Wright, second vice president of the Inman line, says that when the end of 1892 comes at least 100,000 people will have left for Europe from all parts of this country during the year. Half of them will sail during the fifteen weeks of the season, from April to August. Some travelers will carry hundreds of dollars in their pocketbooks to spend where others carry thousands. Nine-tenths of those hundreds and thousands will be transferred to foreign owners before the tourists return.

Even the money spent for passage and during the voyages must be counted in that which bids goodby to this land of liberty, for the great steamship companies are, with one exception, foreign corporations. Including tips and fees these corporations will take an average of $160 from each passenger for the round trip. The majority will pay less, but there will be enough rich men who will pay a good deal more to bring the mean amount up to that figure.

The money which each tourist carries with him is harder to estimate. A foreign exchange clerk said that the letters of credit issued by them to European travelers average about £600, or $3,000 each; but this is above the ordinary figure, and of course this in many cases covers a party of four or five. Eight hundred dollars is estimated as the average amount taken by each passenger in the cabin. This makes the total average expenditure of the average European traveler $960. When this is multiplied by the estimated total of these travelers the result is astounding.

It is $96,000,000.

Ninety-six millions of dollars carried from America to Europe in a single year by travelers alone! If this were saved for a few years Uncle Sam might buy a good slice of Europe and bring it over here for exhibition purposes.—New York Press.

Lenten Offerings.

The Lenten offerings of the Sunday school children of the Protestant Episcopal church throughout the United States thus far received in behalf of the general board of missions are largely in excess of those for the same period in 1891. In the two weeks immediately succeeding Easter 1,137 Sunday schools sent $36,699, and it is believed a total of $100,000 will have been received when all of the 4,000 schools in the country shall have been heard from. This is double the sum donated last year.

The Lenten Sunday school offering is a feature of the work of the board of missions. Just before Lent this year the board sent a package of folding paste-board savings banks to each Sunday school superintendent for distribution among his pupils for the reception of the children's savings during the fasting season.

No sooner had Easter passed than the little banks began to arrive at the offices of the board in the Bible House.

The twenty-five young women in Bishop Leonard's school in Reno, Nev., sent $250. One school sent in 5,000 pennies and another 10,000 pennies.

It will be July before all the returns will have been received.—New York Herald.

Macaulay's Birthplace.

Rothley Temple, Lord Macaulay's birthplace, is for sale by public auction. It is an old manor house, some six miles from Leicester, and there the historian was born at the end of the year 1800. It cannot be said that Rothley Temple derived more than nominal lustre from the association, for Macaulay left Leicestershire before he had left infancy, and Birchin Lane, in the city, was the home of his earliest childhood. Instead of a manorial park he had Drapers' gardens for a playground, until he went to live in the old High street at Clapham.

The Leicestershire manor, however, has many historical interests besides this one, and a Thirteenth century chapel of the Knights Templars is attached to the estate. It is a wealthy manor, too, for 900 acres produce £2,000 of annual rent; and, moreover, it is at the headquarters of the famous Quorn Hunt, and in the heart of some famous scenery.—London Star.

Cost of an Epidemic.

Dr. Thresh, the medical officer for the county of Essex, having obtained full returns of the late epidemic of influenza, estimates that no less than 540 persons died under the immediate attack, and that no fewer than 1,400 deaths occurred in the county from its direct or indirect influence. The monetary loss for the two months during which the epidemic prevailed he states at no less than £30,000, on the basis of the loss of wages of adults calculated at twelve shillings a week. He adds: "I am, however, afraid that had the county suffered from an epidemic among cattle, causing in the time the same number of deaths and indicating the same pecuniary loss, the alarm produced would have been greater and more permanent."—British Medical Journal.

A 100,000 Pound Chip of a Rock.

A stone quarry company of Bedford, Ind., has shipped the largest single block of stone ever quarried and shipped in the United States. The block was 12 feet 8 inches long, 6 feet 3 inches high and 6 feet 3 inches wide, containing 500 cubic feet, and weighed 100,000 pounds. The car on which it was shipped had to be ordered specially for it, and was the car that was built for the purpose of transporting the thirty-foot cannon sent by the government to the Pacific coast a few months since. The stone is perfect, not having a flaw or defect.—Indianapolis Journal.
