

"There's something behind it." That's what you think, perhaps, when you read that the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer $500 reward for an incurable case of Catarrh. Rather unusual, you think, to find the makers of a medicine trying to prove that they believe in it. "There must be something back of it!"

But it's a plain, square offer, made in good faith. The only thing that's back of it is the Remedy. It cures Catarrh in the Head. To its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, the worst cases yield, no matter how bad or of how long standing. It has a record that goes back for 25 years. It doesn't simply relieve—it perfectly and permanently cures. With a Remedy like this, the proprietors can make such an offer and mean it. To be sure there's risk in it, but it's so very small that they are willing to take it.

You've "never heard of anything like this offer?" True enough. But then you've never heard of anything like Dr. Sage's Remedy.

WESTERN REPUBLICAN LEADERS'

The fact that the republican party has taken its candidates for the presidency from the west in every instance but one is more significant than is generally realized. It was not a mere accident that this practice was inaugurated at the beginning of the party's history, nor has it been prolonged by the rule of chance. The east has always possessed able and worthy republican statesmen, and could at any time have furnished a first-class presidential candidate; but her favorite sons have been systematically shut out for logical and judicious reasons. It was not until the anti-slavery sentiment gained controlling force in the west that the republican organization became really effective; and that result was brought about by the contest in Kansas, which checked the extension of the servile labor system and saved the territories to freedom. The west took the right side in that fight not so much upon moral grounds as because of material interest. When the south proposed to establish its peculiar institutions in the country beyond the Missouri river, the west readily saw that the success of such an undertaking would practically exclude free white labor and prevent landless citizens from securing homes. And so the west gave its sympathy and support to the republican party, and that party was thereby enabled to acquire control of the government. The republican creed was particularly conducive to western welfare and prosperity, and western votes accordingly gave it popularity and potency.

It was not surprising that western men, under these circumstances, became the most influential republican leaders, and that the party adopted the custom of taking western men as its candidates for the presidency. Ever since 1860 the surpassing strength of the republican party has been in the west, by virtue of the increase of population and the founding of new states. Its principles and purposes have been in harmony at all times with the interests of the western people. The homestead law commended it to special favor, and its general policy of facilitating the extension of civilization gave it a decided advantage. The fact is that the west is the supreme force in national politics, and is likely to maintain this position for an indefinite period. No party can hope to triumph through eastern or southern strength as against western sentiment. The republicans have acted wisely, therefore, in giving preference to men representing the section which holds the determining power. That is one of the secrets of its wonderful vitality and its unprecedented achievements. It has not only chosen good men, but it has been careful at the same time to respect the just claims of the locality which first placed victory within its reach.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

WHY WOMEN'S WAGES ARE LESS THAN MEN'S.

There is of course no other man in the United States who has collected and handled with competency so large a mass of statistics of wages as Col. Carroll D. Wright, United States commissioner of labor. Through all his investigations Col. Wright has made an especial study for himself of the bearings of the facts that he has collected upon the condition and advancement of women. He has brought together his conclusions of many years' study and investigation in an article which appears in the July number of the Forum, bearing upon the question as to the relative wages received by men and women for the same work.

Are women paid as well as men for the same work? Col. Wright maintains that in a great majority of cases they are, but that confusion has arisen because it often happens that the work which women do is not the same which men do. As women, for instance, have forced their way into such employments as bookkeeping and lighter clerical work, the same grade of men that formerly did this work have sought higher and more remunerative occupations. The proper comparison to make is not so between what women receive and what men receive, but what the wage-earning women now receive, and what they received before the great advance of women into industrial life.

There are reasons, however, why women are not in every case paid as well as men, and they are large economic reasons which deserve consideration. Among them are these: There is undoubtedly a cheaper standard of living among women than among men; women as a class have less good equipment for life-work than men, because the expectation in many cases is that the work will be interrupted by matrimony; and most of all, women have come into the industrial field as a new economic factor, and industry has not yet adjusted itself to her.

THE democratic papers have ceased all talk about the republican billion dollar congress. They have one of their own that is now occupying their attention. They have also ceased their talk about tin plate. The facts are, the democratic press has not got much to talk about these days.

Financially Embarrassed

A large manufacturer, whose affairs were very much embarrassed and who was very much overworked and broken down with nervous exhaustion, went to a celebrated specialist. He was told that the only thing needed was to be relieved of care and worry, and have change of thought. This doctor was more considerate of his patient health than of his financial circumstances. He ought to have advised him to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the best remedy for nervous prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, headache, ill effects of tobacco, coffee, opium, etc. Thousands testify to it. Book and trial bottle free at F. G. Fricke & Co's.

CHARLEY'S PRECIOUS HAIR.

Heartless Deception of a Trusting Maid by a Bald Young Man.

He had the air of a man of the world. His dress was becoming and not too showy. He seemed to be an individual who had dined well, who would tell good stories at the club.

Stretched out in the barber's chair in the hairdresser's room on School street, instead of settling down with that indifferent, self-satisfied air that usually comes over a man in that situation, he seemed troubled. He looked about from chair to chair, and yet he was not happy. The barber shaved him and was so impressed that he even forgot to talk him to death. Then the man sat bolt upright in the chair and took an envelope from his pocket. It was scented; the barber could tell that. It was written in a lady's hand too.

The strange man opened it, took out a note, read it over and over again, then from its folds withdrew a lock of hair. It was golden, and the victims who were waiting for their turn in the chair saw him kiss the sunny lock and put it back in the envelope.

"Hair cut?" asked the barber, as he rubbed the tufts of hair which surrounded a bald spot on the strange man's head.

"No, no, not for the world," he replied. "I cannot spare any."

"Man in next chair has hair like yours, only a little more of it," suggested the barber.

"By Jove, he has," said the troubled man, and he darted out of his seat and almost jumped to the occupant of the next chair.

"Going to have a hair cut?" asked the strange man.

"No," was the rather curt reply.

"Well, will you have a hair cut at my expense?" said the man without hesitation. "I must send my best girl a lock of hair, and I can't spare mine. Come, how much is it worth?" and the eyes of the colored boy who brushes coats bulged out beyond his forehead.

"Sell it for a small bottle!" replied the man with a good growth on his head, and the stranger answered, "I'll go you."

The barber began his work, and a lock of the man's hair was handed over to the stranger, who put it in a little silver locket that bore a monogram. Then, when the work was finished the two walked out together.

The stranger was smiling contentedly, the clubman grinned, the barber laughed and the customers gazed on in astonishment.

"Wasn't Charley a dear, good fellow to keep his promise and send me a lock of his hair?" said the pretty girl that night as she took the daintiest sort of a lock from the little box. And all was still but for the beating of her faithful heart.—Boston Herald.

A Mirror in Your Glove.

Without merely desiring to remind herself of her good looks a woman has often need of as much looking glass as she can see her face in.

In the street, at a ball, at a theater, in the shops, all sorts of little disarrangements may occur, and to set them right with a mirror is an absolute necessity. The very handiest form of portable mirrors is the new "mirror glove." A little flap is buttoned up into the palm of one glove. When it is let down a small circular mirror is disclosed.—New York
