According to the census of 1890, Chicago takes rank, by virtue of her population of 1,098,376 people, as the eighth largest city on the globe. Most of us desire, at one time or another, to visit a city in which so many persons find homes, and, when we do, we can find no better line than the "Burlington Route." Three fast and comfortable trains daily. For further information address the agent of the company at this place, or write to J. Francis, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Omaha, Nebraska.

Mr. Van Pelt, editor of the Craig, Mo., Meteor, went to a drug store at Hillsdale, Iowa, and asked the physician in attendance to give him a dose of something for cholera morbus and looseness of the bowels. He says: "I felt so much better the next morning that I concluded to call on the physician and get him to fix me up a supply of the medicine. I was surprised when he handed me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy. He said he prescribed it regularly in his practice and found it the best he could get or prepare. I can testify to its efficiency in my case at all events." For sale by F. G. Fricke & Co.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Campbell will Resign the Chairmanship in a Few Days.

FOURTH OF JULY AFTERMATH.

Business Engagements will Not Allow Him to Serve—Other News of Importance Around the State.

Hon. W. J. Campbell, chairman of the republican national committee, arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon and went to the white house at 2:30, where he was in consultation with the president, Secretary Elkins, Commissioner Carter Secretary Rusk and ex-Senator Spooner of Wisconsin. At the conclusion of the conference Chairman Campbell gave out the following statement for publication, saying that he had nothing further to say with regard to the question at issue. This is the statement referred to:

"When I was elected chairman of the national committee it was with the distinct understanding that my business engagements, then pending, might render it impossible for me to act in that capacity. This contingency was fully understood by the committee and others directly interested. Since the adjournment of the committee, I have been unable to adjust my affairs so as to render it practicable for me to act as chairman; and I, therefore, as I reserved the right to do, announce that I will not so act. Under the authority vested in me by the national committee, I will probably announce the executive committee within the next few days and that committee will meet at an early date. At that meeting I will formally tender my resignation and my successor will be then elected. My successor will be chosen by the executive committee as authorized by a resolution adopted by the national committee."

The resolution alluded to was adopted to meet just such a contingency as has arisen. The names most prominently mentioned last night in connection with the chairmanship are Commissioner T. H. Carter, J. H. Manley of Maine, Samuel Fessenden of New Hampshire and Mr. Hobart of New Jersey.

Chairman Campbell will probably appoint the executive committee today and those whose names follow, with perhaps one or two exceptions, will it is believed, be found upon the list: J. H. Manley, Maine; Garrett Hobart, New Jersey; Samuel Fessenden, Connecticut; J. S. Clark, Iowa; W. O. Bradley, Kentucky; H. C. Payne, Wisconsin; S. C. Krens, Missouri; E. Rosewater, Nebraska, and J. N. Huston, Indiana.

Beatrice Drops.

At a meeting of the directors and stockholders of the Beatrice base ball association, held last night, it was decided that the club would be disbanded. This move is the result of the action of the league directors in demanding a $40 guarantee from the Beatrice team for games played at home and the announcement that the Beatrice team was to get but $25 from the other cities. The whole transaction was considered manifestly unfair. Beatrice, it was urged, was not responsible for Lincoln and Plattsmouth dropping out, and should not be expected to pay a greater guarantee than the other towns. The players have been paid in full, and a few are waiting for advance money now on the way from other cities.

The citizens of Hastings yesterday voted and carried the $25,000 intersection paving bonds without opposition.

During the parade at Fairmont a boy threw a large fire cracker so as to set fire to the dress of Mrs. Treadwell. In an instant the dress was in flames. She was carried home and is now in a critical condition.

Wm. Norton, a young man twenty-three years of age, employed near Fremont, went to Hooper. He became disorderly and his horses were taken from him. He then bought a bottle of horse liniment and drank it.

A Heifer in a Bathtub.

A number of cattle were landed at the Weems line wharf yesterday morning. Their driver was James Groucher. The animals seeming quiet, Groucher started to drive them without any ropes. On reaching Conway street a heifer, which had been moving along very placidly, became very much animated, and made things very interesting for the balance of the herd. The street being too wide for her she danced up an alley between 129 and 131 Conway street. A gate blocked her way, but only momentarily. Through it she went, and then another obstacle presented itself, Mrs. Emma A. Poole, who proved to be no more of a stop to the heifer's onward progress than Fort Carroll would be to a modern man-of-war. In a moment Mrs. Poole was knocked to the ground, and in the kitchen it went. There some destruction of property was committed, but not enough to satisfy the heifer.

The dining room was next entered, where the well known quadruped-in-a-china-shop scene was re-enacted. The hallway was then taken in, and a lamp was knocked down. The heifer wanted to conquer higher worlds, so she went upward into a bedroom. Here, temporarily, repose was sought on the bed, but it fell under the animal's weight, other damage being done during this occurrence. From here, the weather being warm, her heifership went into the bathroom and hopped into the bathtub. Mrs. Poole then commenced calling for help, and, with the assistance of a blue coated soldier, drove the animal out, and she at once sailed up Hanover street and there entered another house, but did no damage. The driver finally caught the animal—Baltimore American.

An Infatuated Tomcat.

Miss Ethel, daughter of D. W. Pease, of West Carrollton, is the possessor of a Maltese cat. Early in the spring the cat deserted his place in the house and took up his abode with the chickens, remaining day and night in the chicken yard. He soon formed an attachment for an old black hen, which was reciprocated, and the two became inseparable. Thus matters went on for some time, when the hen, remembering that the usual season for multiplying and replenishing her species had arrived, selected a nest in the poultry house and made known her intentions in the usual way. She was at once supplied with the necessary eggs and commenced business. This, it was supposed, would end the rather strange flirtation and Tommy would return to his mat on the porch, but not so. Judge of the surprise of the family on going to the poultry house the next day to find that his cat had taken possession of the adjoining nest with the nest egg and was sitting in the most approved fashion.—Cor. Dayton (O.) Herald.

A Gaudy Uniform.

Warden Anll has adopted a novel method of keeping track of such convicts as are continually planning to escape. Thursday morning he surprised three of the most incorrigible by dressing them up with a flaming red flannel blouse and cap. Across the back of the blouse in plain view is a broad white strip of canvas marked in large, plain letters, "Convict No. —." The pants are the regulation stripes. It was a great surprise to the convicts. As they marched to the canal they were subjected to a great deal of raillery. The warden says these three have kept the officers and guards busy for some time trying to keep run of them. With these suits on they can be easily watched from the various posts and their every movement noted. All who attempt to escape hereafter will be treated in like manner.—Folsom (Cal.) Telegraph.

Georgia's Profits from Fruits.

The Georgia fruit crop is a big thing this year, and everybody is interested in knowing what the growers will make out of it. In the peach and grape crops alone conservative estimates show that about 500 carloads of peaches and 100 carloads of grapes will leave the state for foreign markets during the present season. The estimated receipts for the peach and grape crops combined are $750,000. Reports show that the peaches are well formed, of good size and perfectly sound, and this, together with the decrease in yield from last year, makes good prices and ready sales an assured fact. Other important fruit crops will largely swell the total sales, and lots of summer money will be put in circulation where it will do good.—Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer-Sun.

A Famous Sculptor of Italy.

Professor Pio Fedi died at the age of seventy-six. He suffered for several years from paralysis. He was one of the best modern sculptors of Italy, an imitator of Canova and a follower of the Greek school. Some of his best statues are at the Loggia del Arcaigno, at the Uffizi and the Old Palace. One of his "Christs" adorns the upper part of the Scala Santa at Rome. From every part of Italy telegrams of sympathy have arrived. His funeral was very grand. All those who belong to the Academy of Art and all the notabilities of the town followed his body; innumerable garlands and bouquets covered the funeral car.—Florence Cor. Galignani Messenger.

Horace Greeley once described a very famous literary woman of the last generation as "a great woman and a greater bore. Her talk was incessant."

COOPER AND WORDSWORTH.

An Interview with the Aged Poet a Few Years Before His Death.

Thomas Cooper, the veteran chartist, who has received a grant of £200 from the Civil List, had, on one occasion, a very interesting interview with Wordsworth at Rydal Mount. Cooper had been at Carlisle and started on a walk through the Lake country.

It was on the third day after leaving Carlisle that Cooper arrived at Rydal Lake. He was very anxious to see Wordsworth and have a talk with him, but, not knowing the poet and having no introduction, was rather doubtful as to what the nature of his reception might be. But, summoning all the courage at his command, he boldly strode up to the poet's door and knocked.

In reply to an inquiry he was told that Wordsworth was at home; so he wrote on a slip of paper, "Thomas Cooper, author of 'The Purgatory of Suicides,' desires to pay his devout regards to Wordsworth." In a very few minutes he was in the presence of the "majestic old man," and was bowing with deep and heartfelt homage when Wordsworth seized his hand and welcomed him with such a hearty "How do you do? I am very happy to see you," that Cooper says the tears stood in his eyes for joy.

Nothing struck Cooper so much in Wordsworth's conversation as his remark concerning chartism—after the subject of Cooper's imprisonment had been touched upon. "You were right," Wordsworth said; "I have always said the people were right in what they asked; but you went the wrong way to get it. There is nothing unreasonable in your charter. It is the foolish attempt at physical force for which many of you have been blamable." By and by the conversation drifted to other subjects.

There was but one occasion, says Cooper, on which I discerned the feeling of jealousy in him; it was when I mentioned Byron. "If there were time," he said, "I could show you how Lord Byron was not so great a poet as you think him to be—but never mind that now." I had just been classing his own sonnets and "Childe Harold" together as the noblest poetry since "Paradise Lost," but did not reassert what I said.

"I am pleased to find," he said, while talking about Byron, "that you preserve your pure chaste and free from rank and corrupt passion. Lord Byron degraded poetry in that respect. Men's hearts are bad enough. Poetry should refine and purify their natures, not make them worse."

Wordsworth's opinion on Tennyson is interesting. Cooper asked the poet what his opinion was of the poetry of the day: "There is little that can be called high poetry," Wordsworth said. "Mr. Tennyson affords the richest promise. He will do great things yet, and ought to have done great things by this time." "His sense of music," I observed, "seems more perfect than that of any of the new race of poets."

"Yes," Wordsworth replied; "the perception of harmony lies in the very essence of the poet's nature, and Mr. Tennyson gives magnificent proofs that he is endowed with it."

Wordsworth spoke of Southey in the highest terms, and again reverted to politics. "There will be great changes on the Continent," he said, "when the present king of the French dies, but not while he lives. The different governments will have to give constitutions to their people, for knowledge is spreading, and constitutional liberty is sure to follow." Wordsworth also alluded to the spread of freedom in England, and descanted with animation on the growth of mechanics' and similar institutions.

"The people are sure to have the franchise," he said with emphasis, "as knowledge increases; but you will not get all you seek at once, and you must never seek it again by physical force," he added, turning to me with a smile; "it will only make you longer about it."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Falling from a Great Height.

It will be remembered that Mr. Whympy, who had a severe succession of falls once in the Alps, without losing his consciousness, declares emphatically that as he bounded from one rock to another he felt absolutely no pain. The same thing happens on the battlefield; the entrance of the bullet into the body is not felt, and it is not till he feels the blood flowing or a limb paralyzed that the soldier knows he is wounded.

Persons who have had several limbs broken by a fall do not know which limb is broken till they try to rise. At the moment of a fall the whole intellectual activity is increased to an extraordinary degree. There is not a trace of anxiety. One considers quickly what will happen. This is by no means the consequence of "presence of mind," it is rather the product of absolute necessity. A solemn composure takes possession of the victim. Death by fall is a beautiful one. Great thoughts fill the victim's soul:
