According to the census of 1890, Chicago takes rank, by virtue of her population of 1,098,576 people, as the eighth largest city on the globe. Most of us desire, at one time or another, to visit a city in which so many persons find homes, and, when we do, we can find no better line than the "Burlington Route." Three fast and comfortable trains daily. For further information address the agent of the company at this place, or write to J. Francis, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Omaha, Nebraska.

Mr. Van Pelt, editor of the Craig, Mo., Meteor, went to a drug store at Hillsdale, Iowa, and asked the physician in attendance to give him a dose of something for cholera morbus and looseness of the bowels. He said: "I felt so much better the next morning that I concluded to call on the physician and get him to fix me up a supply of the medicine. I was surprised when he handed me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He said he prescribed it regularly in his practice and found it the best he could get or prepare. I can testify to its efficiency in my case at all events." For sale by F. G. Fricke & Co.

MILITIA CALLED OUT

Governor Pattison Orders the State Guards to the Scene.

THE SITUATION IS CRITICAL.

Homestead Workmen Express Various Opinions, but None Favor Resisting the Militia The Governor's Actions Surprise Many.

The entire division of the National Guards of Pennsylvania—about 8,000 men—have been ordered to Homestead to support Sheriff McCleary in suppressing the riot at that place. This action was taken by the governor upon receipt of the following:

PITTSBURG, PA., July 10.—Governor Pattison: The situation at Homestead has not improved. While all is quiet there, the strikers are in control and openly express to me and to the public their determination that the works shall not be operated unless by themselves. After making all efforts in my power I have failed to secure a posse respectable enough in numbers to accomplish anything and I am satisfied that no posse raised by the civil authorities can do anything to change the condition of affairs, and that any attempt by an inadequate force to restore the right of law will only result in further armed resistance and consequent loss of life. Only a large military force will enable me to control matters. I believe that if such a force is sent the disorderly element will be overawed and order restored. I therefore call upon you to furnish me such assistance.

(Signed) W. H. McCLEARY, Sheriff.

GOVERNOR PATTISON'S REPLY.

The governor replied as follows: "To Wm. H. McCleary, sheriff of Allegheny county, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania: Have ordered Major General George R. Snowden, with the division of the national guards of Pennsylvania, to your support at once. Put yourself in communication with him. Communicate with me for further particulars.

(Signed) ROBERT E. PATTISON, Governor."

The governor has issued the following: "General G. R. Snowden: Put the division under arms and move at once, with all munitions to the support of the sheriff of Allegheny county at Homestead. Maintain the peace and protect all persons in their rights under the constitution and laws of the state."

Never Poutice the Eye. It is the prevailing custom among ignorant people to put a poultice on an inflamed eye, a thing which should never under any circumstances be done. It is sad to see the vast number of men, women and children made blind for life by this one thing.—Jenness Miller Illustrated.

The Delights of a Honeymoon. She—Look here! This is the third handkerchief I have wet through with bitter tears!

He (very coolly)—Nothing but useless expense! That's how the washing bill runs up.—Popolo Romano.

Do not draw a check unless you have the money in bank or in your possession to deposit. Don't test the courage or generosity of your bank by presenting or allowing to be presented your check for a larger sum than your balance.

Mr. Stanford has endowed the Leland Stanford Junior university, which is really a sort of home school for poor children, with property and money amounting to about $10,000,000.

A certain duration of a luminous impression is necessary to produce an effect on the retina; hence it is that we do not see a very rapidly moving object, such as a bullet fired from a gun.

Without its atmosphere, which serves as a coverlet to protect it against the fearful cold of space, the surface of the earth would be frozen like that of the airless moon.

A device that works well in keeping loose waste paper out of the parks of Chicago is the placing of big trash baskets about on the lawns and paths.

Pretty Poor Pickings.

Findings are popularly supposed to belong to the sweeper, but one of the street sweepers of Portland observes that his is a very disappointing job. He has found only a one cent piece and a short lead pencil during his term of office and is disgusted with politics.—Lewiston Journal.

Booth's Best Character. It was in a high priced restaurant. They were discussing the characters in which Booth had been most successful, and the young man with a blond mustache was satisfied that Hamlet was by far his best part.

"If you ever saw him in that part when he was at his best," he said, "you wouldn't dispute the assertion for a moment."

"Saw him?" exclaimed the man with the dark beard scornfully. "I've seen him in about everything he ever played. Why, his Hamlet was poor compared with some of his other characters. His Othello was better than his Hamlet, and his Macbeth."

"Macbeth" broke in the young man with the blond mustache. "Why, that wasn't up to Romeo, and that's saying a good deal. His Shylock was better than his Othello."

Every one in carshot was interested by this time, but just as the man with the dark beard was beginning a scathing retort with some side remarks about the "Fool's Revenge" the little fellow with the single eyeglass roused himself and said:

"I say! You're both wrong, you know. I'm not much on drama, but Booth never played anything as well as he did Shakespeare."—Detroit Free Press.

Condolences Out of Place.

"Don't condole with a friend or congratulate a friend until five years have tested the reality of his grief or joy," says somebody. But my certie! It's a good idea, after five years or considerably less, to find out how apropos your remarks are going to be before you offer 'em. Instance in point: Imet Vachant, of New York, in the street the other day. I've been meaning to write to Vachant—college friend of mine, you know—ever since his wife died, two years ago; brutal of me not to have done it, for she was a sweet little soul, and I could guess what her loss must have been. Well, I rushed up to him, and pressed his hand, and stumbled out a plea for forgiveness for not having sooner expressed my very real sympathy for his wife's loss and all it must have meant to him.

I noticed he went rather red and murmured something and hurried off as soon as he could, and when I told my wife of it and how I thought it rather queer, she said she didn't think it queer at all, inasmuch as he was on from New York on a wedding journey with his second wife. Cards on my desk, in unopened envelope. Thought from their size they were an ad.—Boston Commonwealth.

Swiss Nobility.

A few years ago the question was asked, "Does nobility still exist in Switzerland?" And no one was able to answer it. Of all the thousand of English folk who haunt the Swiss hotels in summer not one, it would seem, had inquired whether that Rudolph von Erlach, whose equestrian statue they must have seen, has any living descendants; not one had ever heard of the Barmese nobility—a noblesse which holds itself so high that it thinks but slightly of the British legation. Yet from the Jura to the Lugano there is hardly a canton—there is perhaps no canton—in which noble families are not to be found.

Some of these, such as the Plantas and the Bnols of the Grabunden, have turned their energy into modern channels and make their fortunes, like the Hausers or the Sellars, out of the English and the American tourists. Others, like the Von Allmen, have sunk into a humbler rank. But the greater part remain in statu quo, still enjoying in the towns or in the country a social prestige that varies with their wealth and their intelligence.—Temple Bar.

Early Methods of Curing Skins.

The original process of curing skins was probably the simple one of cleaning and drying them. Removal of the hair by maceration in water seems to have been common among the very early tribes, and one writer has suggested that the idea was obtained from the natural process of depilation. They must certainly have been familiar with it in the case of drowned animals, where maceration can be plainly observed.

Following this, smoke, sour milk, oil, and the brains of the animals themselves were found efficacious. Many of these primitive methods are employed at the present time, thus bringing into novel conjunction the days of the roving Masagetas and those of the thrifty American.—George A. Rich in Popular Science Monthly.

Duel of Two Girls.

At Charkoff, Russia, two girls who were friends fell in love with the same young man. He was slow to make his selection between them. They agreed that either could win him if delivered of the beautiful competition of the other. They decided upon a duel by drawing lots. On the day following one of the young ladies was found dead in her room. She had poisoned herself with phosphorus. But her friend is broken down with sorrow and remorse. It is more than likely that she will not live to enjoy the fruits of her victory.—Paris Letter.

Had No Opportunity.

Professor (examining an applicant for a teacher's certificate)—Can you decline "love," Miss Gazley?
Miss Gazley (bashfully)—I never have had a chance, sir.—Detroit Free Press.

THE BELLBUOY.

Like a restless, troubled spirit,
Self accused beyond excusing,
Seeking rest where none is offered,
Vainly striving for release—
Writes the bellbuoy in the ocean
As each wave in mad commotion
Buffets it without relenting,
Or a whispered word of peace.

Sunbeams may each day caress it,
Or the storm king howl above it,
To each one the wall goes upward
In a never ending moon,
And the glistening sea gulls hear it
As they hover and pass near it,
And the rocky shores repeat it
In a muffled undertone.

Oh, the pathos of its life song,
Changing not as years roll onward—
Its one note of weary wailing,
Outward borne unceasingly!
Prisoner in Neptune's clasping,
Chasing under cord and hasting—
Angel thou of mercy! warning,
Countless sails that pass thee by,
—Katharine H. Terry in Good Housekeeping

Polite Photographers.

The knack which French photographers, and especially those of Paris possess in relieving their sitters of a constrained and distressed look while sitting for their portraits has long been the envy and perplexity of photographers of other nations. An American photographer, on a recent visit to Paris, took pains to study the means by which this very desirable result was reached.

He reports that it all lies in a very simple device, which well illustrates the nature of the Frenchman.

When a lady, for instance, is sitting to a photographer for a portrait, the operator does not, in a perfunctory manner, coldly request her to "Look pleasant now, ma'am!" He says to her, in the most natural and graceful manner in the world:

"It's quite unnecessary to ask madam to look pleasant; she could not look otherwise!"

The lady of course acknowledges the compliment with her most gracious and highbred smile. "Click!" goes the camera and the picture is obtained, revealing the sitter at her highwater mark, as it were.—Youth's Companion.

How a Prisoner Escaped.

If we will only rightly use little things it is surprising how much may sometimes be done with them. A vizier, having offended his royal master, was condemned to lifelong imprisonment in a high tower, and every night his wife used to come and weep at its foot. "Go home," said the husband, "and find a black beetle, and then bring a bit of butter and three strings—one of fine silk, one of stout twine, another of whipcord—and a strong rope."

When she came provided with everything he told her to put a touch of butter on the beetle's head, tie the silk thread around him and place him on the wall of the tower. Deceived by the smell of butter, which he supposed was above him, the insect continued to ascend till he reached the top, and thus the vizier secured the silk thread. By it he pulled up the twine, then the whipcord, and then a strong rope, by which he finally escaped.—Detroit Free Press.

The Earth to Be Like the Moon.

The water of the earth is all destined to disappear from the surface of the globe by being absorbed by subterranean rocks, with which it will form chemical combinations. The heavenly spheres exhibit sufficiently striking examples of such an evolution. The planet Mars shows what will become of the earth in some thousands of centuries. Its seas are only shallow Mediterranean of less surface than the continents, and these do not appear to be very high; and in the appearance of the moon, all cracked and dried up, we have a view of the final state of the earth—for the absorption of the water by the solid nucleus will be followed by that of the atmosphere.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Modern Way.

In India they drown a great many of the girl babies. It is a time honored custom, but not universally approved from a therapeutic standpoint. In civilized countries they put corsets on the girl babies, which brings about the same results, without the shock, which is a sure concomitant of the Indian method. Moreover, babies last longer under the modern system, and it is especially prized by people who prefer to keep their girl babies for a few brief years.—Detroit Tribune.

What a Flood Leaves Behind.

The worst feature of a flood is the fact that the river is apt to leave a deposit of sand, varying in thickness from one inch to ten feet, over a large extent of land that was formerly fertile. In the flood of 1858 a great many farmers in the American Bottom on going back to their premises after the subsidence of the waters, found their property covered with river sand in beds so thick that two or three years elapsed before good crops could be raised.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Place for Him to Call.

Mrs. Witherby—Your old clothes man was around today.
Witherby (grimly)—Tell him next time that, if he wants to look at any old clothes of mine, he will have to call at the office and see them on me.—Exchange.

How Ants Are Eaten.

Ants are eaten by several of the minor nations. In Egypt they are eaten raw, with sugar; in Brazil they are served with a resinous sauce, and in East India stewed in buffalo grease or fried in butter.—St. Louis Republic.
