AS A LABOR PAPER VIEWS IT.

While the democratic papers are making a great ado about the alleged effect of the tariff on the Homestead trouble, all for the political advantages which they hope to gain, the laboringmen themselves are seeing that the tariff is in no way responsible, that, in fact, if it were not for the tariff, there would be no wages to reduce at Homestead. The most sensible and vigorous article that we have seen on this subject appeared in "The Rights of Labor," a labor paper published in Chicago, and one of the best-known and most influential papers of its kind. The article is headed "The Protection Tariff and Homestead," and is as follows:

The sap-headed logicians who are attempting to bolster up the free trade argument by appealing to workingmen to look at Homestead, utterly mistake the principles of the protective tariff. No one assumes, no one but an ass would assume, that if the tariff on steel was made five times as large as it is, that it would "compel" Carnegie or any other manufacturer to pay living wages—but the protective tariff enables Carnegie to pay living wages if he chooses to do so. Being able to pay living wages, it is the work of the trade unions to compel him to do so. But all the trade unions in the world could not "compel" him to pay wages on a scale of $24 or $25 a ton if he was obliged to compete with steel of English manufacture that could be laid down in New York under free trade at $16 a ton.

Of course the leaders of the free trade crusade know this, but they are not honest enough to admit it. They prefer to appeal to the prejudice of the working classes instead of their reason, and in the tragic attitude of actors they point their long fingers at Homestead and Carnegie.

No intelligent republican ever asserted that all the scoundrels and the greedy monopolists were in the democratic party. It is freely asserted that the republican party contains a few of them, of which Carnegie is one. The Homestead affair is bad enough, God knows, and Carnegie, a reputed republican is responsible for it; but it is no worse than the tragedy at Bryceville a few months ago, for which Brice, the chairman of the democratic national committee was responsible. It is no worse than the starving of the coal miners two years ago, for which "great Scott, a democratic congressman of national repute was responsible.
