KILDOW'S COSTLY "JAG"

Thrown From His Wagon and Seriously Injured.

A DISASTROUS RUNAWAY

No Damage Done to the Team and Wagon But Kildow's Condition is Serious -Other Important City News.

Serious Accident. From Saturday's Daily.

This morning Thos. Kildow met with a serious accident, and one which he will not soon forget.

He has been in the employ of and has been living out on Mr. Hatt's farm. Every morning be slaughter house.

This morning, as was the custom, state. he brought the meat and asked Mr. Hatt for some money to buy some articles for the house, saying that he was in a hurry to get back to work on the farm. Mr. Hatt gave him the money, and he drove his team up in front of Hansen's store, and tied them.

Instead of investing his money as he intended he proceeded to get on a good-sized "jag."

About 9:30 a merchant went down to Mr. Hatt's meat market and told him that Kildow bought some goods of him and gave him an order on Mr. Hatt.

Mr. Hatt started up the street and found the team in front of Hansen's store he then found Kildow who was under the influence of liquor and started him home.

While going home Kildow was running the team along the road at a very rapid rate. Several parties met him and told him that he had better check his horses or he would have trouble.

He kept the team going at a good rate and at a place in the road near the M. P. track there was a sharp turn and when they struck that the wagon upset and Kildow fell under the box. The king bolt came out and the horses went on with the front wheels.

When found, Kildow was lying partly under the wagon box, his left ear was nearly cut off besides several ugly gashes being cut in his head and face.

He was brought to town and Drs. Hall, Cook and Cummins dressed his wounds.

If he is not hurt internally he will be all right in a short time, although he will be somewhat disfigured.

The team ran home and stopped. the only damage done to the wagon was the breaking of a spring on the seat.

TOOK TO THE RIVER.

Two sneak thieves entered the room of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Hakes in the Ruwe hotel in Fremont and abstracted some money and a gold watch and chain Thursday. They were caught in the act and made to give up the money,but as the watch was not then missed they were allowed to escape. When it was found out that the watch was gone a search was made for the thieves, and they were overhauled about three miles from town. After an exciting chase they took to the Platte river, where one was captured and the other succeeded in reaching a large island where a posse has since been hunting for him. It is believed here that the pair, who gave their names as Brenan and Murphy, are really guilty of some much greater crime than the larceny of the money and Caught Them Napping.

Wednseday afternoon a rather smooth fellow made his appear ance at the clothing store of Joe Klein and asked to be shown an overcoat and a pair of pants. He informed Mr. Klein, who was waiting upon him, that he was a son of Henry Eikenbary. He picked out a pair of pants and told Mr. Klein that he would call in Saturday and get the overcoat, after which he went out. He came back in a short time and told Mr. Klein that he would take the overcoat, and he also purchased a silk handkerchief and a pair of cuffbuttons. Mr. Klein was informed by one of his cierks that the fellow could not be an Eikenbary as Henry Eikenbary's children were all girls.

Joe started out to find out whether the fellow was what he represented or not and soon came to the conclusion that he had been taken in by a swindler.

In the meantime the same fellow had went down to Benj. Elson's store and purchased a new suit of clothes and a pair of shoes, passing himself off there as a son of Henry Eikenbary. At Elson's, however, he paid $4 in cash on his clothes after which he pulled out of town.

The police were at once notified and Constable Krohler and R. W. Hyers struck out after him, when they reached the ferry, the fellow was about twenty feet from shore. 14 95 1 but the officers halted them and made them turn back.

The fellow gave his name as Albert A Reazer. He was placed in jail and is now waiting for his trial. He secured $21 worth of goods from Joe and $21 worth from Eison. To R. W. Hyers should be given the credit for capturing him though 41 35 Constable Kroehler mads the arrest.

Lost Both Horses.

From Wednesday's Daily. Jake Stull was the possesser of a fine team of gray horses this morning. Mr. Stull has been working with his team this summer on city work. This morning he was at work on Sixtth street, having his team hitched to an old style scraper. About 11 o'clock the scraper got the better of the man who was holding it and turned over twice, striking the horses on the heels. Before the team could be stopped the work was done. The scraper had cut one horse so badly that it had to be killed, and the other will be useless if it does get well. The horse that was killed had one leg cut clear off.

The loss of the team will fall heavy on Mr. Stull, as he is a poor man and was making a living with his team.

Last Night's Blow Out. From Friday's Daily.

The anticipations of the enthuastic democrats were not realized last night as far as the magnificent parade they have been talking about for so long was concerned. It was, however, a red letter night for the small boy, and most of them were in line or out of line with a tin board present when they allowed horn or a cow bell. The parade, failure. There were about 75 small boys and a few dozen men that went to the depot to meet Congressman Bryan, but he felt so bad over it that he did not wait but left the aggregation at the depot and drove to the hotel.

At Rockwood Hall the speaking occurred. The meeting was addressed by Congressman Bryan, L. bridge between sections 5 and 8-10. T. Genung and Dr. Geo. Miller of Omaha. Taking everything into consideration, the democratic jollification of 1892 was a dismul failure but we stop the press to announce the fact that Col. Kroehler, Col. Sherman and Col. Ruffner were in 4 00 their glory.

Is has often been stated, and with (5 (0) truth, that modern chemistry is indebted for much of its knowledge to the ales on chemists of old, whose experiments for 10 00 the purpose of making gold by artifice were certainly extraordinary to the utmost point of absurdity. Some of them actually attempted to imprison the sin's rays, which they tried to calcine and powder, the rays being supposed to con-8 III 81 sist of pure golden sparks. Others sought to obtain the philosopher's stone, which was to transmute all other metals into gold, from honey, sugar, wine, blood, and even rainwater. Dead bodies were dur up from their graves, and saltpeter wa extracted from them to serve as an ingradient. Still others believed that gold grow from seed, other metals merely fornishing a fruitful soil in which the vel low germs developed like plants.

In a work now rare, called the "History of Ancient Pharmacy," it is mentioned that Raymond Nully was said to have transformed 50,000 pounds of mercury into gold for the English King Ed ward III, and that from this supply of the yellow metal the first rose nobles were coined. The credibility of the story is somewhat diminished, however by the circumstance that the same more arch was soon after obliged to coin money from his own and the queen's crown, and from the golden vessels of churches and cloisters. It is gravely recorded that the Emperor Frederic III, or Jan. 15, 1648, at Prague, changed time pounds of mercury into two and one half pounds of gold by means of one grain of a lead powder given to him by a man named Richthausen. He creatthis man Baron of Chaos, and from the gold a medal was made which bore an inscription referring to its artificial ori gin. This medal was long preserved in the Vienna treasury.

In 1705 a Saxon lieutenant named Paykull was taken prisoner by Charles XII at Warsaw and condemned to death. He promised to make $1,000,000 worth of gold each year if his life were spared In the presence of witnesses Paykull changed six ounces of lead into gold by means of a tincture which contained antimony, sulphur and saltpeter among other ingredients. Out of this gold medals were stamped. But Paykull must have failed in subsequent attempts. because he was afterward executed. I this goose had been able to lay real golden eggs it is to be presumed that he would not have met with so melancholy

The business of manufacturing gold in those days seems to have been an extremely daugerous one, commonly bringing persons who pursued it to a violent death. George Honauer promised to transform thirty-six hundred weight of iron into gold for the prince of Wurtemberg. The prince detected a boy, who had been concealed in the laboratory, in the act of putting gold in the crucible. He thereupon ordered an iron gallows to be constructed, from which the imprudent fakir was hanged in 1697. Two other goldmakers were likewise hanged from this same gallows at Stuttgart in 1605 and 1788 respectively,

In 1677 a man named Krohnemann entered the service of the marquis of Brandenburg with the rank of colone He soon won reputation as a goldmaker. and was given charge of the mint an mines. Subsequently he was suspected of fraud, and on his trial it was proved that he had stolen gold and silver from the treasury of the margrave for use in the deception. He was condemned to be

A quack named Daniel supplied Italian apothecaries with a wonderful gold powder called "usufur," which was supposed to have astonishing medicinal value. Pretending that the art of courpounding this usufar with other drugs was a mystery known only to himself, be directed his patients not to permit the apothecaries to mix the ingredients of his prescriptions, but to buy them, including the usufur, and bring them to him for putting together. He mixed the drugs, omitting the usufur, in which manner he succeeded in having restored to him the gold powder, previously sold by him at a high price to the apothe caries. The powder soon became fa mous, and the quack finally offered to teach Duke Cosmos II of Florence the art of making gold. The duke paid Daniel 20,000 ducats for the secret, and the swindler fled to France with the Count Cajetan in 1705, in the presence of Frederick I of Prussia, changed one pound of mercury into gold by means of a red tincture. Subsequently he promised to make $6,000,000 worth of gold in six weeks, but, failing to keep his word, he was hanged, draped in gold leaf, which became the customary method of dealing with alchemists. The tribe of alchemists is not yet entirely extinct. In 1880 an American named Wise duped a member of the Rohan family and a collateral descendant of the "necklace cardinal," whom Cagliostro deceived by pretending to make gold. Wise got a considerable sum of money from Rohan and decamped. Only a few days ago the writer picked up a little pamphlet on a bookstall in New York which contained several pages of advertisements of a substance for transmuting other metals into gold, the price being only five dollars .- Washington Star.
