According to the census of 1890, Chicago takes rank, by virtue of her population of 1,098,576 people, as the eighth largest city on the globe. Most of us desire, at one time or another, to visit a city in which so many persons find homes, and, when we do, we can find no better line than the "Burlington R. ute."

HENHOUSE BUILDING.

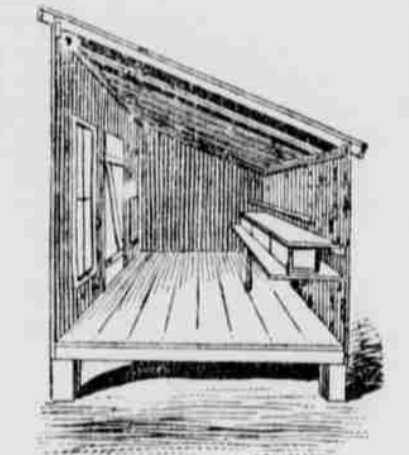

Floor Space Required For Each Fowl Convenient House For a Small Flock. The arrangements for a small poultry house differ from those in a large one. Owing to individual preferences and the amount of capital to be invested in a building, no plan can be suggested acceptable to all; hence there is no "best" plan. The rule which applies to the space is the decimal, says P. H. Jacobs, the poultry specialist, who explains as follows in The Rural New Yorker: A flock of 10 hens should have a floor space of 100 square feet (allowing each 10 square feet), so that of course a house

A CHEAP AND CONVENIENT HENHOUSE. 10 by 10 feet would be needed. The yard should be 10 times larger than the house; hence for 10 hens the house should be 10 by 10 feet and the yard 10 by 100 feet. Though the yard may be of any preferred shape and may contain more space, but should not be less than the area mentioned. The nearer to the square form the cheaper the cost of the house in proportion to the space secured. A very convenient poultry house for a small flock may be built of yellow pine boards, rabbeted (barn boards), nailed up and down to 3 by 4 pieces, the house to be 10 feet square, 8 feet high in front and 6 at the rear, with a large window on the front (which should face the south or southeast), and a small sash on each end near the front, the door to be on the west end or side. The small windows should open so as to allow ventilation according to the direction of the wind, a top ventilator often causing drafts down on the fowls. The roof may be of tarred felt or other suitable material, and in a cold climate the house may be covered entirely with tarred felt, fastened with strips. The same house may be double for two flocks, if preferred, with a door in the center or at one end. If it be raised 18 inches from the ground, the hens will find much comfort underneath in winter. The cost of the double henhouse need not exceed $15 for one 10 by 20 feet, but much will depend upon the local prices for materials and labor. The space underneath may be protected by boards to break the wind. If the house is low on the ground, cement floors are best, as they protect against rats, but they must be covered with an inch of dry earth, with cut straw over it, or they will be cold. If raised up, the best floor is of tongue and groove boards. The nests should be movable; hence soap boxes are excellent. The roost should be a piece of 3 by 4 scantling, slightly rounded on the edges, and it should reach across the rear of the house about two feet from the floor. For 10 hens four nests are sufficient, two at each end of the house. The water fountain may be placed at any convenient point. Feed troughs should not be used if they can be avoided, as it is best to compel the hens to scratch for all they receive. Keep the middle of the floor clean as to allow scratching space, and place a large shallow box near the front window, filled with dry dirt or sifted coal ashes, for dusting. If soft food is given, place it on a board and remove the latter when the meal is over. The house, 10 by 10 feet in size, can be made to accommodate 25 hens in winter, but it is better to allow plenty of room.

The Captain's Sight. It is sometimes a fault of young people to rely too fully upon their own opinions or impressions, and there are grown people who are quite too sure regarding matters to which they have given little attention. A passenger on a French steamer tells this story: The wind was fresh, and we were running at the rate of 12 knots an hour. Our mariners were deceived in their calculations, and as the lead did not indicate the proximity of the coast they were expected to approach they conclude that the currents had carried us into the channel. One morning at break of day I heard the captain exclaim: "I see breakers through the mist." M. de l'Aiguille, an officer of superior merit, who nevertheless displayed some times too much of the confidence of youth, replied with a smile, "Those breakers, captain, are nowhere but in your glass."

An Electric Elevated Road in England. No misgivings need apply to the case of the new railway at Liverpool. Insist and power, as well as in the ingenuity of its details, it surpasses the best American models. It extends along the quays of the great line of docks on the Mersey for nearly seven miles. Its carriages are of full size, not arranged like a tram car but like the ordinary passenger car of the United States, each being in two compartments and capable of seating 55 persons. Beneath each car is an electric motor of from 100 to 70 horsepower, and the speed will be as high as 30 miles an hour. The power to work the trains, and with them the accessories of signals and light, is the same, and generated from a single point on the system. The whole runs upon an "overhead railroad" or continuous bridge of iron. That is not, however, of the essence of an electric railway though the lightness of electric rolling gear makes such an arrangement cheap and suitable for the purpose.—London Spectator.

INTERIOR ARRANGEMENT OF THE HENHOUSE.

The rule in regard to the cost of a plain house is to allow $50 for 50 hens, or $1 per hen. The decimal system will serve to remind the reader by allowing $1 as the cost of food per year for a hen, $1 for her share of the building, about $1 profit per year, 10 square feet of room in the house and 100 square feet of space in the yard. A cheap and convenient house is shown in Fig. 1 and Fig. 2, exterior and interior views, reproduced from the journal quoted. The drawings are so plain that no explanation is required.

A Neglected Fodder Crop.

Peas are an excellent food for milk cows or for hogs. Take a piece of fall plowing and harrow it well to make a good seed bed. Sow broadcast 2 1/2 bushels of the small Canada peas or three bushels of marrow fats and plow under four or five inches. The pea is a deep rooted plant and should be put well down. Sow on top of the ground one bushel of oats to hold the peas up. For hogs they come in as a green fodder after clover and may be cut with a scythe and thrown into them or a movable fence may be put around a small portion of the field. Good success has been obtained by putting the peas and oats in the silo, or they may be cut and cured, thrashed and ground into meal. Try two or three acres as an experiment this spring, advises The American Agriculturist.

GENERAL DEBILITY, NERVOUSNESS. DR. A. T. SANDEN, Dear Sir:—I have used your Electric Belt for some time, and I feel that it has done more for me than all the other remedies I have used. I have been suffering from general debility, nervousness, etc., and, based upon a very poor condition, I wished at the time I got it, to lose 100 pounds, but instead of losing my weight, I have gained 25 pounds, and I feel that I am now in the best of health. Sincerely yours, J. H. Smith, Chicago, Ill.
