It is true that Mr. Strode was no quite so windy as his predecessor, and did not make so much noise, but when it comes to good, honest work he was always found to be awake to the best interests of his clients. His vote against the River and Harbor steal is one instance of his valiant work, and there are many more with which the people are familiar and which all fair minded people are willing to admit.

TERRENCE V. POWDERLY, who was for many years the head of the great labor organizations of the United States, and who has always been given credit for being a level headed man, has declared himself for McKinley. He says: "I don't doubt Mr. Bryan's ability or sincerity, but his experience and his surroundings are such as to cause the elector to ponder long and carefully over the possible result of intrusting the business management of this industrial national work shop in this country.

THERE is undoubtedly a slow, but sure, moral and religious advancement in politics. It has only been a few years since political conventions were opened with prayer and now the custom is general.
