Sheriff Tubbs of Mills county notified Sheriff Wheeler that he had a man with a good horse and two gold watches in his possession, and he felt sure he was a horse thief. Mr. Wheeler had no description of the property and he was not wanted in this county.

A Smooth Painter.

A traveling knight of the paint brush has been doing this city for the past few day, going from house to house, painting chairs and any little job which might be picked up in his line, such as painting or varnishing, etc. etc.

Our artist of the paint can in his rounds called at a certain house in the First ward soliciting work(?) in his line, or if not a chance to run a whizzer upon some one that he might draw pay from. Upon applying for a job he was allowed to paint two chairs which he agreed to do for twenty-five cents. The chairs were set out upon the lawn that our traveler might exercise his art thereon. He splattered around for some time, his motions reminding one of a clover huller in action, or an ancient Missouri river craft under full steam, and the lawn looked like there had been a Hispano-Cuban battle, with little red spots all over the grass, that sparkled like the dew upon Mount Lebanon.

After three minutes and twenty-seven seconds of energetic exercise this disciple of one of the old masters subsided, and applied for the coveted quarter, upon receipt of which he vamoosed the ranch. Sitting as they did, from the lawn the chairs presented a bright and shining apparance, painted a hue that would put to shame a Sioux Indian in war garb. Upon passing around the furniture, it was discovered that the back of the chairs had not been touched and were entirely devoid of vermillion, that made the ground so beatifully crimson.

A Trip to Murray.

A NEWS representative made a visit to Murray and vicinity Thursday, and called upon a number of subscribers for a double purpose—to renew acquaintance and to gather up some old delinquent subscriptions. Both objects were quite successful.

The business men of Murray are enjoying a good trade, considering the time of year, when the farmers are in the harvest field.

E. A. Burton has built a fine residence on the lots adjoining his hardware store, and will take out the partition in his store building to make room for his increasing stock.

The new postmaster, F. W. Crosser, has been acclimated and will next week move his household goods here from the farm.

The splendid crops make all the farmers happy. The harvest is well on, and corn is moving upward about 'steen inches a day. You hear none of the farmers wishing for rain—at least until the harvest is finished and the corn laid by.

Pleasantly Surprised.

A very pleasant surprise party was given at the comfortable home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lake last evening for their daughter, Laura. The evening was spent in games and music. Dainty refreshment were served and a delightful time was had. Among those present were:

Lulu Leek, Laura and Dolly Lake, Alice Ofe, Alice Lake, Carrie Banning, Nellie Whalen, Marie Brassey, Georgie Matoush, Anna Miller, Bertha Lloyd, Blanche Poisall and Mabel Poisall.

Be Patriotic.

Celebrate the Fourth at home. We have two stores full of fireworks—enough for everybody. You'll find our prices just right, too.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

The republican electors of the state of Nebraska are requested to send delegates from their respective counties to meet in convention in the city of Lincoln, on Wednesday, August 10, 1898, at ten o'clock a. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following offices:

1. Governor.
2. Lieutenant governor.
3. Secretary of state.
4. Auditor of public accounts.
5. Treasurer.
6. Superintendent of public instruction.
7. Attorney-general.
8. Commissioner of public land and buildings.

And to transact such other business as may properly come before the convention.

The several counties are entitled to representation as follows: The apportionment being based upon the vote cast for Hon. Albert J. Burnham, for presidential elector in 1896, giving each county one delegate at large and one for each 125 votes and a major fraction thereof:

Miss Florence White and Demmie Hiatt returned this morning from Glenwood, where they attended, last evening, a recita' given by C. F. Tucker and his class. They report a delightful time.

Mr. Hitchcock an ex-auditor of the Q in early day, was in town today from the auditors office looking for lost cars. He used to work in Plattsmouth when the road first crossed the river here.

A Boston Special.

A special consisting of five Wagner sleeping cars and one baggage car, passed through the city yesterday attaining a big delegation of congregationalists on their way from Boston to Portland, Oregon to attend their triennial conference. The delegates will stop over in Omaha all day to attend the exposition and another coach will be added to their train for western people. It was a very distinguished party, ex-Governor Coffin, of Connecticut, several congressmen and some noted New England divines being with the party. They left Boston Wednesday morning, will spend one day in Omaha, two in Denver, one in Glenwood Springs and one in Salt Lake City, arriving in Portland Thursday morning.

Today's Markets.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

How the Big Shaft Was Taken Up and Pushed to Completion.

"Not many know it, but the District militia are entitled to the credit of having the Washington monument completed," remarked an old official at the capitol to a reporter. "As every one knows or should know, the monument was an unfinished shaft for nearly 30 years. There was a feeling that the whole thing was a mistake, and no one seemed to take the lead in having the work resumed. Indeed a feeling had grown up that, after all, the monument was not exactly the thing it should be. Many prominent persons thought that an arch would be a better work, and some urged that the unfinished structure should be turned into one leg of an arch and another erected. Others were strongly opposed to the location, and it was very seriously urged that the site should be changed. Some thought it should go to Meridan hill and others that the monument should be moved to the circle on Fourteenth street and its juncture with Massachusetts avenue, where the Thomas statue now stands. Senator Morrill led the movement for the arch idea, and in it he had the support of many who thought they were really artistically inclined and who thought the day for shafts had passed away. In 1876, the centennial year, the District militia was stronger than it was ever before or since. At that time the idea of soldiery was parades, brass bands and the like. The modern idea of organizing soldier companies to spend their leisure time shooting rifles at a mark in the rifle ranges had not been dreamed of, and target firing was more of a good natured frolic than anything else. There were hundreds of young men who made elegant and proud looking soldiers who were by no means successes as marksmen and who had no ambition in that direction. On the 22d of February, 1876, there was what was general then, a parade of the soldiers, a practice which, I regret to notice, has dropped out of late years.

"The parade that day was a particularly good one, and as a result there was enthusiasm all along Pennsylvania avenue. Congress was in session and a month previous had been to Philadelphia and dedicated the grounds for the Centennial exposition. As senators and representatives were on their way to the capitol that morning they could not escape the enthusiasm caused by the militia parade. Samuel S. Cox of New York—'Sunset,' as he was familiarly called—and General B. F Butler were members of the house of representatives, and it was often said of them that if they were joined in favor of any measure, which was seldom, for it was General Butler who christened Cox 'Shoo Fly,' they could carry it through regardless of whether the house wanted to pass it or not. Soon after arriving at the capitol Mr. Cox, who had witnessed the parade and joyfully—for he took a special delight in patriotic parades—was asked in a general conversation if he did not think it was time that there should be some movement looking toward completing the Washington monument. He replied, 'Yes, and I think it should be done today.' In less than ten minutes he had drafted a resolution directing that the work should be resumed and making the necessary appropriation for securing a better foundation. General Butler had his ears opened when Mr. Cox sent the resolution to the speaker's desk to be read, and on hearing it indicated to his personal followers that it was right and proper. This was sufficient, and in less than half an hour it was passed.

"The senate soon concurred, and the work began very shortly, though it took some years to complete it. It was the Washington birthday parade of the District militia that did the business, and Mr. Cox told several among them, myself included, that he had no thought of the monument until he had seen the parade and was enthused by its influence."
—Washington Star.

More Than Laconic.

"Henrietta," said Mr. Meekton, "you know you said almost two hours ago you were going to tell me just how much you thought the average man amounted to."

She turned upon him a look of silent inquiry.

"You have said absolutely nothing since then."

"Well," she answered, "that's what I think he amounts to."—Washington Star.

To clarify vinegar and even muddy wine pour into a bottle of it half a teacupful of fresh, sweet milk and let the whole stand for 24 hours. As the sediment will settle to the bottom with the curdled milk the clear liquid may then be poured off into another bottle.
