THE Philippine insurgents, if they have the sense which they want the world to believe that they possess, will avoid a conflict with the Americans. They are indebted to the Americans for freedom from Spanish oppression which they now enjoy, says the Globe-Democrat. They would, singlehanded, have been as powerless as the Cuban insurgents to have made headway against the Spaniards. They had been suppressed at the time the Spanish-American war began. Dewey gave them arms and started the new rebeltion. The Americans made this rebellion a revolution. Aguinaldo ought to keep these facts in mind. IT is announced today that Senator Allen will soon leave for Nebraska to take part in the election of a United States senator, hoping that there will be a republican dead-lock, and he may be chosen to succeed himself. We venture the suggestion that there is not a republican member of the present legislature who has any such Judas blood in him that would induce him to vote for Allen or any other populist to rule which this country intends to longer represent this state.
