"Retribution" a Grand Success In Every Detail.

Every One of the Characters Represented in an Able and Graceful Manner—Costumes Strikingly Beautiful and Suggestive of the Old Colonial Days and Revolutionary War.

The most successful home-talent entertainment which the people of Plattsmouth have had the pleasure of seeing for many a day was the rendition last evening of that sensational colonial drama, "Retribution," at White's opera house. Every available seat in the house was occupied, and from the rising of the curtain on the first act to the close of the last act it was evident that there were none among the audience who were in any way disappointed with the evening's entertainment—their expectations being more than realized.

"Retribution" has a very strong plot, and has many dramatic and humorous situations which were especially enjoyed by the audience. Every character was well represented. One of the features of the play was the strikingly beautiful costumes worn by the participants. They were the kind worn during George Washington's time, and were not only beautiful but very expressive of revolutionary times.

Will E. Coolidge, as "Colonel Cecil Howard," played his part in an excellent way, while G. F. S. Burton as "Captain Percy Alcott"—the colonel's rival in love—was very good. The duel between these two characters was a piece of acting worthy of special mention, and was executed in a most artistic manner.

Mrs. Clara B. Johnson, as "Ruth Alcott," and Mrs. Letitia E. Burton, as "Charlotte Alcott," the rival cousins, appeared as graceful and self-possessed as if they were professional actors. Mrs. Villa Guild, as "Janet Alcott," also executed her part in an almost perfect way.

R. B. Carlyle, as "Major Bacon," was looked upon with favor by all. His rather timely and appropriate quotations from the lineal descendant of the man who wrote Shakespeare, were loudly applauded. Mr. Carlyle, in the statue act, was fine.

L. D. Hiatt, as "Captain Terrence O'Malley," was excellent. Mr. Hiatt needs no introduction to the Plattsmouth theater goers, as he has already shown his abilities in that line.

Frank Sherman, who represented three characters, also deserves mention.

Tonight "Retribution" will be repeated, and there will undoubtedly be even a larger crowd in attendance.

Notes on the Play.

Carl F. Tucker will furnish specialties at "Retribution" tonight.

Demie Hiatt sang a couple of songs which received hearty applause from the audience.

Tonight will perhaps be the last chance to see "Retribution," and those who miss it will miss a great deal.

The management wishes THE NEWS to state that the additional number of acts were found to be necessary owing to changes of scenes.

Miss Toni Kessler and Miss Olga Hajek favored the audience with a number of selection on the piano and violin which were received with loud applause.

There was some difficulty over the reserved seats last night—in many instances it was found that two checks were issued for one seat. This, however, has been remedied.

The M. W. A. band played several pieces on Main street before the show, and also rendered a number of fine musical selections between acts. The band has several new members, and did excellent work.

The "Mr. Bob" company presented the "Retribution" company with a beautiful bouquet of roses during the performance last evening. The gift was highly appreciated by the latter company.

Birthday Party.

Sidney Pearce celebrated his seventh birthday Wednesday evening by inviting in a number of his young friends. Numerous games were played, Stanford Jones capturing the king prize and Matthew Herold won the booby prize. The youngsters enjoyed the evening very much.

Those present were Hazel Dovey, Lillie Cole, Muriel Pitt, Stanford Jones, Fay Farthing, Catherine Dovey, Barbara Clement, Bryan Vaughn, Grosvenor Dovey, George Dovey, Carl Ebinger, Bonnie Windham, Sam Windham, Ralph Marshall, Matthew Herold, Sidney and Douglas Pearce.

Will Richardson came in from his farm this morning and boarded the early train for Omaha. Mr. Richardson is going into the fruit business extensively. He has a young orchard of several thousand Ben Davis apple trees, which he expects will begin bearing this summer, besides many plum, peach and cherry trees. In conversing with a News man he stated that the peach and plum crop, so far as his orchard was concerned, was killed. He does not think there will be a blossom on either of the latter trees. However, he has faith in Nebraska as a peach growing state and next spring will put out five acres, or 1,000, additional trees. The prospects for a heavy cherry crop, Mr. Richardson states, is flattering.

AS ONE OF THEM SAW IT.

Report of the Committee Appointed to Visit the City Schools.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters and after many days it shall be returned." No doubt our president had this passage in mind when she appointed her committee to visit the schools for the month of February. The committee has returned in March, but the "bread," I fear, has gone glimmering. The month was too short, I was not here when appointed and, no doubt, Mrs. Thrasher, my companion, thought two was company and one was not, for she didn't go either.

The terrible cold for so many days was one excuse (the guilty are always hunting excuses) and when it was pleasant there were so many things to be done that the last days of the month came and the day we were to report came all too soon.

However, we made arrangements to go February 22, but at noon that day came a message over the telephone, saying: "Say, do you know this is a holiday? You may be sure the children haven't forgot."

Dear me! Do we get so old that there are no holidays for us? Must the same routine be gone through always, with no change? Blessed childhood! When care rests so lightly on them, they take care of today and let tomorrow take care of itself.

Tomorrow for us brought Thursday and in the afternoon we went to school. After—shall I say climbing, or walking? We concluded it was climbing—the steps, we opened the door and found ourselves in the hall, with doors in front and on each side of us. The first door had a silver plate on it, and I guess it said, "Knock and it shall be opened." You see we have lost our first sight and our second sight hasn't come to us yet, so we took it for granted and knocked. The door was opened and Professor McHugh stood before us, but said "niver a word" until we "axed" him did he want visitors, and he said, "Most assuredly," and he smiled, so we thought he did, and went in. But, like the silly fly, we came very near not coming out again—I stayed so long listening to him; did I say listening? Well, perhaps, Mrs. Thrasher did, but I forgot where I was and in looking around his room I wondered when that paper was put on the wall, and if the one that did put it on was gathered to his ancestors and gone into the misty beyond, and if there was any record of him.

Then I spied a hole in the wall way up half-way to the ceiling and instantly I was a child again and at school, and I thought again I could see the same old teacher, and the same mischievous child, who, for punishment, must stand on a chair and with spectacles across his nose, watch for a mouse to run across that hole. The same child never came back. Then I heard something about Texas, and would you believe it? He said the people were over-taxed, or something to that effect, and that—well, I won't say all he did say—but I am disgusted with the people and the councils.

How can you make a machine work without oil. I wonder it is as well as it is.

There is no use telling what you need or want should be—the whole building should be torn down and made over, with ventilation, that is an inlet and outlet for hot and cold air, a new system of heating in winter and more room, and then you have the whole thing. Plenty of room, plenty of good, fresh air, and plenty of heat.

To say we enjoyed our visit, is speaking very lightly; we enjoyed every minute of it. The teachers were bright and obedient. We were fortunate in hearing a different study in each room, and the work of some of the children was simply marvelous. We were two afternoons at the central building and one at the Columbian.

Some of the rooms have some very pretty drawings on the blackboards, some in colored chalks and some in white. There was little "tots" whose writing was astonishing and even in the lowest grades were doing small sums in fractions. Truly this is a progressive age.

MRS. KATE E. McMAKEN.

Money to loan on land in sums of $1,000 and upwards at 54 per cent. R. B. Windham, Plattsmouth, Neb.

THE welcome which the Nebraska City people accorded Senator-elect M. L. Hayward upon his return home yesterday afternoon, is sufficient proof of the esteem in which he is held by his home people. There were 5,000 people, among them the leading citizens of the town, regardless of political belief, at the depot to meet him. Arrangements are being made to give him a banquet in the near future.

Have you a cough? A dose of Ballard's Horehound Syrup will relieve it. Price, 25 cents and 50 cents. F. G. Fricke & Co.
