

BANNER CASS COUNTY.

A Descriptive Letter From One of Her Best Towns.

A thorough Resume of the Business Interests of Louisville and Something About Her Leading Citizens - Rich Farming Country and Many New Farm Houses Under Course of Construction.

LOUISVILLE, March 15.-(Special to THE NEWS.)-Former letters have given facts and figures with truthful descriptive sketches of different parts of Cass county, and this communication will further prove that Cass is one of the most prosperous counties in the state. Louisville, by the Platte river, and with two railways, competitive lines, namely, the Burlington and Missouri Pacific, is situated in a romantically beautiful country, with hills and vales, rivers and rills, and orchards blending with beautiful farms, and tall woods stretching out with the winding Platte. On eminences, imposing structures stand, and between guarding heights Louisville rests, with brick blocks, and frame blocks, and new buildings going up, and constant travel on the main thoroughfare extending from depot to depot.

Four transfer wagons are kept busy hauling merchandise and drummers' trunks, and the young men make good money. They individually have cleared from $80 to $110 a month, and one who has drayed for some time is now in general mercantile business with a $4,000 stock.

The Burlington railway freight receipts for merchandise brought in from $900 to $900 a month, and it imports forty cars of coal and twenty-four cars of lumber last year. By the Missouri Pacific were forwarded 220 cars of live stock, and 2,400 cars with sand. Merchandise averages $700 freight receipts per month, coal sixty cars a season and lumber about thirty. The Louisville region is rich in fire clay, which is shipped extensively and brings $2 a ton, and fire sand brings $1.

Captain J. T. A. Hoover laid out Louisville in 1870, the plat being 170 acres, of which one-fifth is still vacant, and owned by the Burlington and the heirs of Fred Hoover (the captain's late brother). Captain became first postmaster, opened a store, and started the pottery and brick business, and so the pottery busting pretty town got its start. Captain came to the states from Germany in '46-fought with the gallant Fifty-fifth Ohio, (ex-Governor Thayer, general), and came right here in '63. He is a genial good soul, and member of Springfield Post, G. A. R.

That Louisville is in a good farming country is further added in the fact of Herman Pankonin having sold $40,000 worth of machinery and vehicles in 1898. The Bank of Commerce occupies a $5,000 building of brick, stone and plate glass. The deposits amount to $56,000, and it is safe in the haven of public confidence, and is noted for security and dispatch. The president, Tom E. Parmele, although not the founder, is unquestionably the father of Louisville's prosperity. Every enterprise has been aided by his fertile brain and generous purse. He is the mayor of Louisville, partner in the Louisville Milling company, also of the Stator & Parmele Brick works, president of the Plattsmouth Mutual Insurance company, and head of other industries numerous. The Bank of Commerce is elegant internally as well as externally, and contains a splendid library, and all the leading magazines are taken there. Mr. Parmele and Mr. George H. Wood, the cashier, being great readers and admirers of the book literature. George H. Wood has, as cashier, been associated with the bank for three years, and for five years theretofore was a successful pedagogue. He is a graduate of the Fremont Normal and the Omaha Commercial college, and is by inherent right a gentleman, and by ability in the front rank of this region's business men.

The Louisville Roller Mills (Tom E. Parmele and C. A. Richey, proprietors) have a capacity of fifty barrels of flour, and the exchange trade averages seventy-five bushels per day. They ship to towns and villages over (Cass and neighboring counties).

The Louisville Lumber yards at the Missouri Pacific station carry about 300,000 feet of lumber, and handle about twenty-five car loads of coal and supply a big territory of country.

In the list of new buildings in course of construction and soon to be is a two story brick residence for Frank H. Stander, the Murdock banker. The building measures 36x36, and being on a farm, will have spacious and beautiful grounds. James Terryberry is building a house of stone. It will be two stories, 34x34, with 18x10 addition, and will be located seven miles southeast of Louisville. Dan Andrews has a big new barn, as has also Charles Pitzer. Tom Coleman is building a small house three miles north, and Henry Heil, eight miles east, is building an addition 14x16. In town, E. L. Palmer is constructing a store building 24x70, and Tom E. Parmele a two story brick store, 26x60 feet-operations to begin about April 1.

There is not an empty house in Louisville, and cottages are needed. The owners of the lumber yards are C. A. Richey and Frank Dickson, live business men and humming citizens. The former is in the milling company, owns a nice residence, is a K. of P., also grain agent with 10,000-bushel elevator. In 1898 he handled 110,000 bushel of grain. He is a native of Iowa, came to Nebraska in '81, and is as popular in Plattsmouth and Omaha as he is in Louisville. Frank Dickson is a Pennsylvanian who came in the early 80's to Elmwood, and was an efficient and popular county clerk for two terms, then joined with Mr. Richey. He is also a K. of P. and public spirited gentleman.

Besides from the farming country, Louisville receives great impetus to trade by the two extensive quarries located a few miles distant, and L. Boedeker has great trade therefrom, his market wagon delivering from twenty-five to thirty beaves a month, and he is now shipping to Omaha from one to two cars of "grubbers" a week.

When R. A. Jacobson came from Sweden in '83, he labored in the quarries, became foreman, then quarry manager at Auburn. He is now manager for the Duff Grain company and handled about 100,000 bushels in '98. In '92 he became merchant in company, and in '93 went it alone. He now has $7,500 worth of goods in his handsome two story stone and brick building-which cost him $2,500. He is now school treasurer and a prominent citizen, and thus "from small acorns great oaks grow."

Marian J. Ruby came here twenty years ago, was carpenter, ran a dray, rushed business and economized. He lately became partner in the firm of R. T. Rochford & Co., dealers in hardware, furniture, groceries and produce, occupying the corner across from the bank; main building 26x60, new warehouse 22x30, and more room is needed. R. T. Rochford came from Wisconsin to Omaha in 1886, and has been here in the hardware business since 1893. He is recognized as Mr. Ruby is-a rusher in business and socially genial and refined, and they are patronized extensively.

W. C. Dorsey came in '67 as a youngster to Lincoln, Neb., from Illinois. He graduated at a business college in '90. He came here in '93 and clerked until last August, when he became a hardware merchant and dealer in furniture; now has a $2,000 stock, and supplies farmers as far as Murdock. He is an M. W. A., town clerk, and a highly respected business man and citizen.

Mike Tritsch, a native son of Cass county, has a jewelry department stock in the Dorsey establishment, and he is a born mechanic and expert jeweler. His father, Jacob Tritsch, who came to Cass county is '67, is on the old place yet.

Louisville is having first-class railway agents. J. P. Ellis, the Missouri Pacific agent, came here eighteen years ago, and is regarded very highly as a business man, a citizen, and a pioneer. On the 15th of February Marvin Patterson took charge at the B. & M. station. He came from Billwood, where the citizens were sorry to lose him. The writer has known him as one of the most capable and pleasant men on any road.

Louisville is noted for its bills of fare, but a visit to Miles N. Drake's tables makes the picture at peace with all the world, and he, in reminiscence mood, thinks of Delmonico and the days when he was rich.

THE LECTURE WAS WELL TAKEN.
Dr. Stratton Gives An Able Address Under Auspices of Jr. O. U. A. M.

From Wednesday's Daily.
Dr. Stratton's lecture in White's hall last evening was enthusiastically received. The audience was large, considering the very inclement weather. His theme was "The Dangers That Threaten Our Country and Some of Its Remedies." He said these dangers were of two kinds-from within and from without. From the latter he thought we were practically free. While appreciating that we have many, perhaps, within, the doctor takes an optimistic view of the situation, believing the American people ready to meet the emergencies.

He believes in both an intellectual and a property qualification for the elective franchise. In support of the property qualification he said, were it required, every boy or young man would, by industry and economy, accumulate the amount required to make him a legal voter. He is a strong believer in civil service reform. While he is willing to leave the matter of the retention of the Philippines to congress and the people, he advocates commercial expansion, and emphasized the wonderful opportunities and advantages of carrying on an extensive trade with the orient.

The address from B. ginning to end was such as inspires one to want to do more for home, country and humanity.

Ex-Plattsmouthian's Good Fortune.
From Thursday's Daily.
Word was received yesterday morning from Washington stating that Alex Schlegel would leave that city Thursday and sail from New York Friday for Porto Rico, on a mission for the secretary of war. Mr. Schlegel will be gone at least two months on this mission. He is well known in this city. He was formerly state draughtsman in the land commissioner's office, and has of late been in the office of the secretary of war at Washington, assisting in making up some reports. No word has been received as yet as to the nature of the work Mr. Schlegel is to perform. The recognition of Mr. Schlegel's abilities by Assistant Secretary of War Meiklejohn is a compliment to the man, and his many friends will be glad to hear of his good fortune. Mr. Schlegel has resided in this city since 1880, coming here from Brown county. He formerly resided in Plattsmouth. -State Journal.

Charles Sheeley returned to Lincoln this morning after inspecting the new bridge west of Mynard.

HUGHES CASE FINISHED.

His Fate Is Now In The Hands of The Jury.

Testimony Is Very Revolving and Takes Up Much Time-Witnesses From Various Parts of the State Were Examined and Their Testimony Indicates That He Is Insane.

From Wednesday's Daily.
The trial of George P. Hughes, charged with criminal assault, which was commenced yesterday, was concluded this evening and the case given to the jury.

The testimony was revolving in the extreme and would indicate that if the defendant is not insane, imprisonment for life would be proper punishment for his offense. The complaining witness, Miss Zella Thomas, (now Mrs. Kottelhut) testified explicitly as to the defendant's assault and was corroborated by admissions made by the defendant to Constable Lewis, who placed him under arrest. The assault was committed in a public hotel, in the day time, and almost in the presence of the family. The defense is that the defendant is insane, and Mrs. Cassel of Hastings and Williamson of Humboldt testified that in their opinion the defendant was insane, having been acquainted with him for some time. Rev. Wright and Rev. Folsom of Hastings and Rev. Meek of Humboldt testified to the same effect, having had some acquaintance with the defendant. Mrs. Jones of Hastings and also the mother, brother and sister of the defendant testified as to acts of the defendant which would indicate that he had been insane at times for years past. Drs. Hall, Cook, Cummins and Humphrey were also called and examined upon hypothetical questions, and their testimony seemed to confirm the theory of the defense that the defendant was insane. The acts of the defendant can hardly be explained upon any theory of sanity, without setting him down as one of the most brutal and depraved beings running at large.

While the jury may acquit the defendant of the crime as charged, yet his insanity seems to be of that character that ten to fifteen years in the penitentiary might do him more good than a few months treatment in the asylum.
