THE mild (?) roasting which W. J. THE demand in Europe for American corn is increasing every year, and if we only had a corn propaganda to help matters along a trifle the demand for the greatest of Iowa products would soon send the price up to the figure it should be.

Probably few newspaper readers gave any attention to the dispatch from London stating that British contractors were much incensed over the fact that a firm of Philadelphia bridge builders had been awarded the contract for a metal bridge over a branch of the Nile.

SEA GOING STEAMERS.

GLEANINGS.

FROM the Review of Reviews, April number, we glean the following opening sentence to an article headed "About Dorothy Drew":

"The world-renowned nine-year-old granddaughter of Mr. Gladstone is the subject of a most interesting sketch in the March Young Woman. The writer, whose name is not given, says: 'When not four years had passed over her head she had joined the Radicals against the House of Lords. She has no love for that ancient institution and will not hear of it.'

"Dorothy was only three when she paid her first visit to the House of Commons, and Mr. Gladstone was still the greatest member of that distinguished assembly. Her first impression was that she was in the church, but the jumping of the members up and down deceived her, and her next thought was that she was in a gymnasium. She had been to a gymnasium not long before, and the 'bobbing up and down' which she seems to have noticed particularly at both places connected the two in her mind, and for a long time afterwards the House of Commons was familiar to Dorothy as the place where granddad goes to his 'nastics'—gymnastics being too long a word for her at that early age."

She had her views, too, on the east-coast question.

"Mr. Gladstone would talk with her in her simple way of whatever was nearest his heart. He must have talked to her a great deal of Armenia, for Dorothy is said to have asked just after his death, 'Do you think the Turks will be sorry grandpa is dead?'

Mrs. Gladstone's rival. An amusing story is going the rounds about a recent concert given by Madame Melba at the house of a fashionable hostess in New York. Hardly had she commenced her song when a strange, silvery mechanical rattle made itself heard. The shocked hostess turned her head, scowling at silence.
