How Many?

Rush Fellows was up at the Platte slough fishing last Sunday and upon his return his friends listened with great gobs of wonder and astonishment to a fish story he related. He told of a party of Omaha men who were fishing there taking him into their quarters and treating him to "refreshments," and afterwards bringing out a black bass which one of the party had just caught. It was weighed in his presence and tipped the scales at just six pounds, and was twenty-three inches long—so he related. A few days later a man from La Platte was in the city and told how the fish came to be so heavy. The Omaha men gathered up a number of railroad nuts and opening the mouth of the fish they filled it up with iron. And, instead of being twenty-three inches long, it was about ten, and upon being landed weighed four pounds. What the boys want to know now is what that brand of refreshments Rush took and "how many."

John Gonzalez Injured.

Wednesday John Gonzalez started to town with a load of oats. While off the wagon opening the gate for the team to pass through, the team became frightened and started to run away. John tried to stop them and was thrown, or else fell beneath the horses' feet, one of the horses striking or kicking him in the back of the head and neck. The wagon also passed over his body.

A physician was immediately summoned, and after making an examination, pronounced that no bones were broken, but that he was terribly bruised and perhaps injured internally. The bruise on the back of his head is considered the worst.—Elmwood Leader-Echo.

No Right to Indian Funds.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The auditor of the treasury for the interior department has raised a question as to a negro's rights to Indian funds by disallowing expenses for the board and medical treatment of John Woodruff, a negro from the Pine Ridge agency, now at the government insane hospital here. The auditor says these expenses cannot be allowed as a charge against the appropriation for the support and subsistence of the Sioux until the man establishes a status as a Sioux Indian. The interior department expresses the opinion that neither the Sioux nation nor any tribe or branch tribe has any voice in determining what disposition should be made by the government of the fund question, so long as its obligations to the Indians are fulfilled.

No Camp Poynter Exists.

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 12.—A message was received tonight from Bert Whedon, adjutant of the First Nebraska, denying the report sent out from San Francisco to the effect that the camp of the Nebraska soldiers had been named after Governor Poynter. It has been claimed that this name was the choice of the regiment. The dispatch was in reply to a message of inquiry directed to Colonel Mulford today, and stated that the camp was known by no other name than that of Presidio.

DREYFUS' COUNSEL IS SHOT.

Maitre Labori Is Fired Upon From Ambush and Bullet Enters His Back.

RENNES, Aug. 14.—Two men ambushed Maitre Labori, counsel for Dreyfus, and one shot was fired, hitting Labori in the back. M. Labori fell in the roadway. He is still alive. Maitre Labori left his house alone for the court at about 6 o'clock this morning. His residence is situated in the suburbs of the town, about a quarter of an hour's walk from the Lycee, the route being along a solitary road beside the river Vaine.

He had reached a point half way on his journey when two men who had evidently been lying in wait for him rushed out of a narrow lane and one of them fired a single shot from a revolver. The murderers were only a couple of yards behind the victim and the bullet struck Maitre Labori in the back. The wounded man uttered an agonized cry and fell flat on his face. The murderers immediately fled through the lane from where they had emerged and both escaped.

7:30 p. m.—It was announced that the bullet had entered the stomach. There was no outward bleeding and the physicians believe that M. Labori will die from the wound.

A later story has it that M. Labori was shot in the temple by a man who fired a revolver at him outside the court, and that the miscreant was arrested.

SAVED BY A WATERSPOUT.

No Photographs Go with This Story of a Tidal Wave.

The crew of the British bark Bandanera on the shore of Chili, passed through a frightful experience with a tidal wave, and which had it not been for the most remarkable intervention on the part of nature, would have left the bark high and dry a mile from shore.

The Bandanera sailed from Iquique, March 15. She had loaded there a cargo of nitrate for the Dupont Powder company of this city. This town is practically the center of constant earthquakes. An observation station is maintained there from which warnings are sent to masters of vessels before they leave port. The barometer had been low from March 10, but Capt. Fant struck boldly out for the Horn. During the next two days the barometer dropped still lower and it was evident that a fearful hurricane was brewing. The crew brought the captain to return to Iquique, but he refused.

"We are already three days on our way," he said, "and we are all right yet. In all probability the worst is over now."

His assumption was wrong, however, for at noon the following day an immense wall of water apparently nine miles to the westward rolled down slowly upon the bark. As slowly she commenced to drift toward the coast, seven miles to the eastward.

Capt. Fant's vessel is at Wilmington now. She came up the river yesterday, and his story is a thrilling one. Apparently the tidal wave was about 100 feet in height and had an area of twenty miles in almost a complete circle. It advanced rapidly, but the bark, keeping ahead, reached the shore line first. The coast at this point was flat for nearly two miles inland, terminating abruptly at the base of almost perpendicular mountains. Capt. Fant is sure that the Bandanera approached to within 100 yards of the rocky walls. The pursuing volume of water was then apparently only two miles behind. Just at the moment when hope was gone the bark suddenly changed her direction and receded from her apparently inevitable fate.

An immense waterspout suddenly developed many miles away, and its influence changed the direction of the onrushing sea. The Bandanera was thrown on her beam ends and drawn almost directly into the vortex of waters. Two hours later the sea had resumed its wonted aspect, leaving the bark uninjured.

Capt. Fant is positive that great damage must have been done the vessels which were directly in the track of the great tidal wave. The matter has been reported to the Hydrographic Office and further reports are being awaited.

TWO TOWNS TAKEN.

Santo Rico and Angeles Are Captured By MacArthur's Men Without Resistance.

Effort of Insurgents to Draw the Americans Into an Ambush Fails Miserably.

MANILA, Aug. 12.—10:45 a. m.—Advices from Calulut, under date of August 11, report that General MacArthur took the Ninth regiment, a battalion of the Twenty-second and a detachment of the First artillery from Calulut to Santo Rico, near Bocalor, Friday morning. The entrance of the troops into the town was not opposed, the insurgents fleeing as the Americans approached.

The troops had a hard march of ten miles, in some places being obliged to wade waist deep in water. Many were exhausted. The troops will spend the night at Santo Rico and proceed Saturday. Lieutenant Hazard of General Wheaton's staff, with five scouts from the Iowa regiment, marched up the railroad into Angeles. A small force of rebels attacked the scouts outside the town and Lieutenant Hazard sent for reinforcements. General Wheaton's orders, however, were that the Americans should not occupy Angeles, and a force of 600 or 700 rebels appearing, Lieutenant Hazard retired.

MANILA, Aug. 11.—General MacArthur's troops remained last night at Calulut. The rebels had evidently fled far beyond rifle range, for the American outposts were not disturbed, and not a shot was fired during the night. At daybreak this morning a reconnoitering party, consisting of a battalion of the Seventeenth infantry, with one field piece, started up the railroad track toward Angeles, four miles north. The party approached within 1,200 yards of the town and opened fire with the field gun. The Americans were received with a badly directed rifle fire, which the battalion of the Seventeenth returned with a few volleys.

The strength of the insurgents at Angeles not being known, the situation was reported to General MacArthur, who did not desire to send reinforcements, and directed the reconnoitering party to return unless the rebels abandoned the town. Soon after the receipt of these orders it became evident that the rebels had set fire to the town and fled, leaving the place to be occupied by the Americans.

A battalion of the Twelfth infantry was also sent on a reconnoitering expedition toward the west, but up to noon no firing had been heard in that direction and no word had been received from it at General MacArthur's headquarters, and it is believed that the troops encountered nothing.

Everything indicates that all the rebels have scattered for miles in every direction around Calulut. The insurgents lost heavily in the fighting around Calulut. It is believed that 100 were killed and 300 or 400 wounded. The Iowa regiment killed thirty in one place, and one company of the Seventeenth suddenly encountered a party of rebels in a trench and killed twelve.

The American loss was five killed and thirty-one wounded, including three officers.

Surprise the Filipinos.

The attack was a complete surprise to the insurgents, who had no idea that a movement was intended until the armored car opened a deadly fire with two Gatling's revolving cannon and a six-pounder. The heavy artillery opened on both flanks a moment later. A majority of the Filipinos were asleep when the attack was made. Men with large bells were heard running among the shacks, arousing the soldiers.

The Americans maintained almost a perfect line four miles long, through canebreaks, where they could see nothing ahead. The mud in places was knee deep in the rice fields and jungles and through the ditches flowed small rivers several feet deep.

The Filipinos tried to ambush the Americans several times, the country in the neighborhood being well adapted to these tactics; but the troops stopped for nothing, forcing their way through or over obstacles and firing whenever they could locate the fleeing enemy.

The officers highly commend the recruits of the various regiments. There is reason to believe the reports recently received that the insurgents are short of ammunition, as well informed people at Calulut say the insurgents had only forty rounds of ammunition each and that five rounds extra were issued just before the fight. Since the American occupation of San Fernando the rebels have torn up three miles of railroad between there and Calulut, and it is impossible to get the armored car more than two miles beyond San Fernando.
