LAWTON DISPERSES THE INSURGENTS

Drives Them From Their Trenches Near the Towns of Imus and Bacoor.

American Scouts Find Twenty-Eight Dead Filipinos in the Trenches.

IMUS, Luzon, Oct. 3.—The statement that Major Price asked Admiral Watson to send the gunboats to his support in the recent engagement of his repiment in the vicinity of Imus is incorrect.

General Lawton today dispersed the insurgents, driving them to the westward.

General Lawton's force consists of all the troops from Bacoor and Zapote, five companies of the Fourteenth regiment, Colonel Baggett commanding; Megrath's troop of Fourth cavalry, Reilly's battery of two guns and another battery of two guns. General Fred Grant is co-operating with a force composed of three companies of the Fourth regiment, Major Price commanding; Knabenshine's scouts and one gun.

The purpose of the rebels was to cut the communication maintained between Bacoor and Imus by means of the road between those places at a point between Imus and the east bank of the river. The insurgents had trenches along the west bank, commanding the open spaces. A force of 1,500 rebels attacked Imus yesterday and 600 proceeded against Bacoor with detachments along the river.

Drive Filipinos From Trenches

This morning Colonel Daggett's force spread along the road from Bacoor toward Imus and three companies of the Fourth regiment under Captain Hollis were thrown out from Imus, the two commands forming a junction. The entire line crossed the river and drove the Filipinos from their trenches to the westward, through rice fields and thickets.

The marines, whose services were tendered by Admiral Watson, crossed the river near the bay, forming a part of the line of advance. Before the forward movement was begun the American artillery held the enemy's position. The only American casualty was the wounding of a lieutenant of artillery. Several wounded Filipinos were attended by Surgeon Major Penrose and members of the ambulance corps. A number of prisoners were taken.

General Lawton, while riding up the road to Imus, was a target for many shots.

The telegraph line was cut yesterday on a bend commanded by the enemy's trenches, at 100 yards distant and when Lieutenant Cunningham, with a repair party, appeared to restore the wires, two men and Lieutenant Cunningham's horse were shot. Lieutenant Mecklosky then brought a gun of Reilly's battery into the open and trained it on the trench, dispersing the Filipinos with two well trained shots.

Capture Rifles and Munitions.

Captain Pore and the Sixth infantry attacked the insurgents Sunday in a new trench which they had constructed near Tabuan, island of Negros, and scattered them. The Americans took one prisoner and captured twelve rifles, 6,000 catridges, a quantity of rice and hospital supplies.

Another illustration of the insurgent policy of evading meeting the Americans in force was shown by the fact that our lines swept across several miles of country firing by volley and cheering, the Filipinos melting before them. Only occasional glimpses of the enemy could be had as they ran from their trenches and dodged through the bushes like rabbits. One body of the enemy under a former mayor of Imus retreated toward Perez Das Maras and another in the direction of San Francisco de Malabo.

Lieutenant Knabenshine, with a party of scouts, crossed the river last night and found twenty eight dead Filipinos in the trenches, fifteen of whom had been killed by one shell.

When the marines marched into Imus the soldiers cheered them and General Lawton commended them on their work. One detachment from Cavite was commanded by Captain Haines and another from the Baltimore by Captain Myers.

The first wagon train in with provisions to reach Imus in three days has arrived and two companies of the Fourteenth regiment from towns along the bay marched in today to relieve the Fourth regiment, whose members have been kept awake in the trenches day and night for a week under the annoying intermittent fire from the insurgents outside the town.

Ruse to Gain Recognition.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The following is the dispatch of General Otis received yesterday relative to the visit of the insurgent officers:

"MANILA, Oct. 2.—Adjutant General, Washington: Three insurgent officers permitted to enter our lines at Angeles, with twelve of our soldiers and two citizens, whom they wished to present as released prisoners. Yesterday, in conference, endeavored to present communication from insurgent government, which was declined. Then presented paper signed by ten of the soldiers, in which the soldiers gave parole; this was received and held in abeyance. Insurgent officers then said that Aguinaldo desired to end war and send civil commission for conference, and were informed that it would not be received. They will be sent beyond lines tomorrow. The whole affair believed to be a ruse to obtain some acknowledgment by United States authorities. All soldiers returned were stragglers from within our lines, captured by robbers. They say they were obliged to sign paroles to secure release, though two refused to sign. The whole affair is of no significance; viewed as attempt at masquerading. OTIS."

O'Melveney Shot at Desk.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 3.—John C. O'Melveney is dead and Captain J. F. Mills, formerly lieutenant governor of Idaho and recently connected with the Second United States Volunteer Engineer regiment, is in the hands of the state authorities as the result of a tragedy which occurred here late this afternoon.

O'Melveney was chief engineer of the Oregon Short Line company. He was alone in his office about 4 o'clock when Mills entered. The latter had made application for work in O'Melveney's department, but had not been accepted. It is said that he blamed O'Melveney. He fired three bullets into his victim, then dropped his revolver and quietly walked to General Traffic Manager Eccles' office and in the most nonchalant manner said:

"Mr. Eccles, I have shot Mr. O'Melveney. I told him this morning that I would do so, and I have kept my word."

Police Officer Lincoln appeared on the scene about this time and said:

"Are you the man who did the shooting?"

Mills said that he was and was then placed under arrest.

O'Melveney was shot while writing at his desk and the ink had scarcely dried on the paper before he was dead.

A PLEASANT SOCIAL GATHERING

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Guild Entertain a Number of Friends.

From Wednesday's Daily.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Guild was the scene of a very pleasant social gathering last evening in honor of Carl Tucker. It was a "stag" party, and all who attended report a most enjoyable time. Mr. Tucker and Miss Dora Swearingen rendered a number of beautiful vocal selections during the evening.

Whist playing was a feature of the occasion, and two prizes were given to the winners in these contests—the first being captured by Henry Weidman and the second by F. R. Ballance. The guests were also treated to a fine supper.

Among those present were the following: H. E. Weidman, H. B. Groves, L. D. Hiatt, F. R. Ballance and George Guild of Lincoln.

The rooms of the Guild home were beautifully decorated especially for the occasion and presented a fine appearance.

A Pair of Suspects.

From Wednesday's Daily.

City Marshal Slater and Officer Fitzpatrick went out to the Missouri Pacific stockyards yesterday afternoon and captured a couple of tramps on suspicion of being the parties wanted at Rockport, Mo. The men were marched to town and their description was compared with that received from the Rockport authorities. In regard to weight, height and general appearance, the suspects answered the description very well, but it was found that neither was shy a front tooth, as the Rockport officers claimed. This fact convinced the local authorities that the men were not the guilty parties, and they were consequently turned loose and ordered out of town.

The men had been seen on the streets earlier in the day, but when the officers started out to look for them it was found that they had mysteriously disappeared. A thorough search of the B. & M. yards was first made by Officers Slater and Fitzpatrick and Deputy Sheriff McBride, without success. They were afterward located in the Missouri Pacific yards, as above stated.

A Destructive Fire.

Several thousand bushels of corn and a large quantity of hay, together with outbuildings, were destroyed by fire Monday evening on the farm of August Glaubitz, three and a half miles west of Weeping Water. The owner rented the farm and the house was unoccupied. It is estimated that the loss will amount to nearly $1,000.

In Tierra del Fuego.

The natives of Tierra del Fuego have no government, chief, property or law. Their country is a broken mass of wild rocks, lofty hills and useless forests. The habitable land is reduced to the stones on the beach; in search of food they are compelled to wander unceasingly from spot to spot, and so steep is the coast that they can only move about in their wretched canoes. Even a piece of cloth given to one is torn into shreds and distributed, and so no one individual becomes richer than another. This perfect equality among the individuals composing the Fuegian tribe must for a long time retard their civilization.

GIVES ARTIST A MODEL.

The Painter of Trilby Gains His Sitter Through Necessity.

An interesting story is connected with the familiar picture of Trilby painted by Astley D. M. Cooper, which was exhibited very generally throughout the country at the time of the craze for Du Maurier's picturesque heroine. The artist obtained his model for the painting through the desire of the young woman to lift the mortgage off her home farm. Some years ago this young woman was living the happy life of a country girl on her wealthy parents' farm in Western Missouri. She grew up wild and free, unrestrained in spirits and form, living very close to nature. No corsets ever encircled her waist, and no tight shoes distorted her feet. She grew to womanhood an unfettered child of nature, beautiful in face and form. Then came misfortune for her father. The grasshoppers devastated his fields, and he was compelled to mortgage his homestead. The father sickened and died, leaving his wife and daughter without resources and with a mortgaged home. They went to Kansas City, where the mother secured employment as a cashier in a department store and the daughter as a cloak model in the same establishment. Their common purpose was to save money enough to pay off the mortgage on the homestead. As they came and went to their work they began to attract attention, and soon all eyes were upon them. The young woman soon became known as the "Living Venus," and as such was known to many people who knew nothing of her life. At this time an artist friend, who lived in Kansas City, wrote to Mr. Cooper that he had seen a woman of goddesslike form, who alone would serve for a model for a perfect Trilby, knowing that Cooper was searching for such a model. The artist went post haste to Kansas City. He managed to secure an introduction to the beautiful girl, and with all possible tact suggested his purpose. She indignantly refused his offer, but Cooper was so impressed with her beauty that he would not be content with a refusal. He argued with the mother, persuaded her, and promised a price that would raise the mortgage, and endeavored to show the daughter that there need be no sacrifice of her maidenly modesty. He told her that her mother could go with her and be with her all the time she was posing. Finally she yielded. At Cooper's beautiful home in San Jose, Cal., during the following four months she was the sole model, and furnished the inspiration for this great picture. When the picture was completed both mother and daughter returned to Kansas City, where the daughter was soon married.

Good for Rubber Men.

The present winter promises to be a record-breaker in respect to the rubber footwear trade. The exceptional storms we have had came so early in the season as to clear the stocks of dealers and manufacturers to a degree seldom known in the past, insuring a crop of supplementary orders which will make the production for the year probably the largest ever known. Not only will it be unnecessary for manufacturers to reduce prices in order to dispose of their production, but all classes of dealers have profited, and are likely to profit farther by the fact that the stringency of the weather has made buyers of rubbers willing to pay standard prices without hesitation.

Scotland's Fish Law.

A Royal sturgeon has been caught in the Onse, near Goodet, Scotland. Its capture has raised an interesting question. As the law now stands all large fish—such as whales, sturgeon and formerly porpoises—if captured within the three miles limit of the coast are royal fish and are claimed by the coastguard or the customs on behalf of the crown. In the event of the sturgeon being a particularly fine specimen, it is forwarded to the queen. The law in Scotland in regard to whales is the same as in England, and in a contested case in the Scottish courts the law was laid down by Lord Erskine that "whales when large belong to the sovereign, when small to the captor."
