Moon Might Be Precipitated by a Change of Orbital Attraction. The fate of the earth if the moon should cease to exist would depend upon several circumstances. Her proper motion is now held in check by the earth's attraction, which converts it into a circular motion round us. If we ceased to be this motion would be in a straight line at right angles to a line joining the centers of the earth and moon. The force that carries her round the sun in the earth's orbit would continue to act, but this would be complicated by her proper motion, which at the time of our disappearance. If she was full her proper motion would be added to that of the earth's orbital motion, and if new it would be subtracted, but, as it is only a thirtleth part, it would not be an important addition. If she was in her first quarter it would act in a direction away from the sun, and might carry her into space, and if she was in third quarter it would set toward the sun and would probably precipitate her into that lumithem and be destroyed. The removal of the earth would probably upset the whole solar system, so any forecast
