

LEANS TO THE BOERS

Sympathies of Russia Wholly With That Side.

Famous Russian General, Gourko, Professed Command of an Army Corps—Thousands of Russians Now Fighting With Joubert—He Says the Republics Will Win.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The Marseilles correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphing the substance of an interview with the Russian general, Gourko, eldest son of the famous Gourko, who is now about to start for Pretoria, says that the Russian officer made the following statement:

"I have been offered the command of a Boer army corps. In my own mind I am absolutely confident of the success of the Boers. You may take my word for it that thousands of Russians are now fighting under General Joubert."

The Daily Mail asserts that several guns have been removed from the forts at Plymouth by night, and that these will be sent to Capetown.

The Prince of Wales has accepted the chief colony of the imperial yeomanry and has contributed £105 for the use of the organization.

British Not Despondent

Dispatches from all parts of South Africa emphasize the great enthusiasm among the troops and public occasioned by the appointment of General Roberts and Kitchener. The announcement that the former will have supreme command and that the latter will be chief of staff has largely dispelled the depression in Cape Colony caused by the recent reverses, while the soldiers anticipate everything from the presence of "Bobs" from success in battle to capture here.

Advices from Capetown dated December 24 say an investigation shows that the reported disaffection among the Dutch in the Victoria West district has been overdrawn. The farmers, it is pointed out, are mostly land owners and will not risk the loss of their farms by rising.

A dispatch from Lourenço Marques, dated December 23, says a curious story is current, emanating from Boer sources, that Matt Steyn, brother of the president of the Orange Free state and 800 Free Staters have definitely refused to continue the war.

Matt Steyn, acting as spokesman of the party, is reported to have told the president that he was only authorized to intervene in the interest of peace and that the burghers did not feel that they were bound by his "unwarrantable conduct," especially as they ran the risk of confiscation of their property, and they simply desired to be permitted to farm in peace and proposed to immediately return to their farms.

Sir Charles Howard Vincent, member of parliament for the central division of Sheffield and colonel of the queen's Westminster volunteers, has been appointed to command the infantry division of the city of London imperial regiment.

The text of Colonel Baden-Powell's proclamation to the burghers besieging Mafeking, the gist of which has already been cabled, comes from Lourenço Marques today. After asserting that the republics cannot hope for foreign intervention, and pretending to relate the exact attitude of all the European powers, including Emperor William, who, the colonel said, "fully sympathize with England," Baden-Powell makes the extraordinary statement that "the American has warned the others of its intention to side with England should any of them interfere."

Was a Pleased Audience.

From Saturday's Daily. The comedy, "A Trip to Chinatown," was given at White's opera house last evening to about a half a house. The company, without a doubt, is the best that has ever appeared in this city, and kept the audience in an uproar of laughter throughout the play. Harry Gilfill is certainly a star. His imitations were simply immense. In fact every member of the company is an artist and their specialty work was great. The singing was a great deal better than is usually heard with a farce company, while the cakewalk and other dancing was good.

The company was deserving of a crowded house, but it is supposed the prices were a little too stiff for the people.

Remembered Their Leader.

From Saturday's Daily. The members of the B. & M. band, after practice last evening, presented Ed Schuho's, their leader, with an ivory baton. It is a beauty, having embossed silver mountings and an ebony handle. Mr. Schuho has labored incessantly to bring the band up to its present high standard and this fact is appreciated by the members. He is highly pleased with the gift.

Money Damages Recovered

The love of wayside trees is strong among Americans. It has a practical as well as a sentimental side. A city or village in which the street trees are numerous, well kept and beautiful is more attractive to investors, to desirable residents and to locating manufacturers than a city or town, or one in which the trees are neglected.

There are some officials supposed to be practical who are not really practical enough to see this fact. They do not see any immediate value in a tree aside from its use as timber or fuel. It must be cut down to be worth anything.

In a Pennsylvania town, lately, the borough officials cut down a row of shade trees on a certain street in order to rectify the curb. No doubt they acted from a sense of duty, but they learned—when the owner of the estate along which the sacrificed trees extended sued them, and recovered money damages against them for the destruction of the trees—that they had misapprehended their duty.

In another case, in the same state, a gentleman has been awarded substantial damages for the destruction of trees along a country road by a telephone and telegraph company which had received authority to put up its wires. The employees who cut them down were also fined $50 each, after a criminal prosecution.

These decisions are in the right direction. Let the fact be recognized that wayside shade trees are dangerous things to touch hurtfully. Not only are they a part of the property of the people who live alongside them; every man, woman and child in the community has an interest in them.

DEATH RATE DECLINING.

Longevity of the Human Race is Increasing Yearly by Year.

From Leslie's Weekly: All who hope and believe that the conditions of human life throughout the world are gradually improving will find practical support for their hope and belief in an address recently delivered before the British Medical association by its president, Dr. Ward Cousins. Among other things Dr. Cousins discussed the future progress of preventive medicine and predicted a steady and great decline in the death rate in the coming century. For the realization of this great object he looked, above all, and rightly looked, to an improvement in the conditions and in the dwellings of the working classes. And he was especially right in pointing out that this improvement cannot come from mere legislation. "The great mass of the people must become willing and active helpers," he said, and in equally true words he showed how largely the prevention of suffering and the preservation of health are within the reach of the working classes in our great towns if they will only cultivate temperance and cleanliness. In this connection we are gratified to observe the action of the New York health board in distributing among the people a circular setting forth in clear and simple language various easy methods to be observed for the prevention of disease, the spread of epidemics and some sound advice generally in regard to healthful living. This is practical service for the public good and it will undoubtedly be successful to material degree in a further decrease of the mortality rates.

PHOTOGRAPHS AS PROOFS.

They Are About as Conclusive as Figures "That Never Lie."

"Speaking of freak photographs," said an old newspaper man, "reminds me of a singular little incident. About three years ago, if you remember, a story went the rounds of the papers that a flying machine had been seen maneuvering in the air at a number of different places in the middle west. Some of the reports seemed to be well authenticated, and it was certainly strange that the same yarn should come from so many widely separated points. One day while the thing was being generally talked about, a certain big journal received a photograph of a town in Nebraska showing an enormous cigar-shaped machine caught in the top of a huge oak tree. According to the story that accompanied the picture the aerial navigators had attempted to land and fell foul of the oak. There was no doubt as to the genuineness of the tree in the photo, and it was at first thought that the machine had been 'painted in,' which is an old trick with pictorial fakers. When an expert was called in, however, he declared positively that the picture had not been doctored, and on the strength of his opinion a reproduction was printed. How the trick was done afterward leaked out. It seems the photographer first took a separate picture of a small pasteboard model of a flying machine, which was only about a foot long. One of the beauties about photography is that you can make everything the same size, and the photo of the model was as big as the photo of the tree. The model was then cut out of the picture with a pair of scissors and pasted on top of the branches of the oak, and a new photograph was taken of the combination. It was the most deceptive-looking job I ever laid my eyes on."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

OLD MAP OF JERUSALEM.

One Found in the British Museum—Locating Scenes in the Life of Christ.

The exact location of the historic scenes before and after the crucifixion has at last been definitely identified by a map recently found among a lot of dusty MSS. in the British Museum. The discovery has excited the utmost interest among Bible scholars in England and on the Continent. Where was Calvary? Where was the Coenaculum, or place of the Last Supper? Where was the Temple of Solomon itself? These and similar questions have puzzled the students of the Bible for many centuries—in fact, ever since the destruction of the Temple by the Romans in the first century. Expeditions have been sent out to dig men have devoted their lives and their wealth to the solving of these questions, so vitally interesting to all Christians. Today the latest book on the subject cannot state absolute certainty even where Calvary was. Canon Tristram says in his widely published volume on Bible places: "Historians, archaeologists and divines have been exercised over the site of the crucifixion and the Holy Sepulchre. If the Church and the Holy Sepulchre be within the second wall it cannot have been the scene of the crucifixion of Him who suffered without the gate," etc. Guesses without end have been and are still being made about the sites of all of these sacred scenes. This map, however, which dates back to the seventh century, shows every important place in Palestine and in Jerusalem. Of course, this is not the first century, but when it is considered that its author was more than twelve hundred years nearer the destruction of Jerusalem than we it is easy to see how valuable his map becomes, filled, as it is, with the fresh traditions of his day. The map and its rude drawings were made by Marino Sanudo, the elder, a Venetian noble who made five journeys to the East for the purpose of perfecting his maps. The aim of Sanudo was to arouse Christendom for a crusade against the Moslem invaders who had taken possession of Jerusalem in 636 under the leadership of Khalif Omar. The care with which Sanudo's maps were drawn to scale is shown by the eighty-one equal spaces into which he has divided the island. The divisions, and the twenty-three spaces in width. What his units of measurement were is not yet known, but the proportion is in close correspondence with modern surveys. Many of the identifications of historic spots, such as the scenes of the various battles, the tombs of prophets and kings are improvements upon the maps of our day.

Dublin Visited by a Cyclone.

Dublin, Ireland, was visited by a regular cyclone recently, which did a good deal of damage in the city. The cyclonic character of the storm may be judged by the marked course it took, passing over a narrow breadth. In one street the driver of a hearse was blown off his seat, and only for some people holding on to the hearse it would have been over with the coffin. As it was, some of the mourning coaches were capsized, as were several cabs in the street. A number of houses were blown down, and roofs taken off by the storm, which was one of the most severe ever experienced in Dublin.

SCORPION BY MAIL.

Animal Had Crawled in the Pamphlet while at Jamaica.

A few days ago C. G. Lloyd, the botanist, received through the mail a pamphlet issued by the botanical department of the colonial government of the island of Jamaica. Upon removing the wrapper and straightening out the folds of the pamphlet there was disclosed the remains of a deadly scorpion. It is characteristic of this venomous insect to seek a hiding place in anything of tubular shape which will give it the opportunity of crawling to the far end of its castle and there awaiting the chance of giving some unsuspecting person a glimpse of the River Styx. In this case the scorpion, while prowling around among the mail sacks in the Kingston postoffice, discovered the pamphlet and immediately crawled into the opening. Unfortunately for "his scorpionship," or fortunately for some mail clerk, the pamphlet was placed under a pile of mail matter in the sack, with the result that the insect was flattened out. Mr. Lloyd saw in an instant the nature of the foreign corpse, and wisely put it aside until he held an inquest. Like an Indian, the only good scorpion is a dead one, and not even a hardened coroner would dare to sit on one if the thing showed evidences of playing 'possum. The weight on this scorpion was so heavy that his tail took the familiar curve it assumes when the business end is ready to go to work. The "stinger" is forced out to its full length. Mr. Lloyd says that this is only an instance of how insects are accidentally transmitted from one part of the world to another. The accompanying danger is correspondingly great to those who handle the mail matter.—Cincinnati Enquirer.
